Atlantic Convoy Reported Shelled By Pocketship

Raider of Graf Spee Class Declared 'Leisurely Attacking' British Ships; Greek Troops Closing in on Koritza Where 30,000 Italians Are Trapped

The War Today

A NAZI POCKETBATTLESHIP raids a British convoy in mid-Atlantic, according to fragmentary radio messages, even as Prime Minister Churchill warns Britain that the German submarine and surface war on her shipping is at least as menacing as the air siege.—Page 1.

GREEK MOUNTAIN WARRIORS tighten their grip on the Italian base of Koritza, where 30,000 Fascist troops are believed cut off, and claim to be holding the Italians' western offensive despite Rome's claims of further advances toward Janina; Italian bombers step up their air raids, but British and Greek fighters take a rising toll of raiders.—Page 1.

Off Newfoundland

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 5.—A running fight in mid-Atlantic between a German raider of the "Graf Spee class" and a British convoy was told in three terse radio distress messages today, but silence shrouded the fate of the vessels attacked.

Three hours and ten minutes after the 16,698-ton passenger liner Rangitiki wirelessed that she was being shelled by a German raider, Mackay Radio intercepted a warning message from the Portis Head station in England.

The convoy was still being "leisurely attacked" by a raider of the Graf Spee class, it said.

Both Believed in Convoy

Sandwiched in between was another message, from the freighter Cornish City.

The Cornish City gave no hint of the character or tonnage of the vessel attacking her. Her position, however, was almost exactly that of the Rangitiki. It was assumed both vessels were part of the convoy referred to in the Portis Head message.

The messages, shipping circles said, were the first of the war indicating an attack on a British convoy by a German raider.

At an East Coast Canadian port it was learned tonight that the Rangitiki and Cornish City left there "recently." The passenger liner was believed to have been carrying civilians. The destinations of the two ships were not revealed.

East of Newfoundland

An hour and 39 minutes later the Cornish City sent a message that it was being shelled in almost the same vicinity, approximately 1,000 miles east of Newfoundland.

Germany is known to have only two battleships of the Graf Spee class left, the Admiral Scheer and the Luetzow, formerly the Deutschland. The Graf Spee itself met an

Counter-Invasion

By International News Service

Athens (Wednesday), Nov. 6 (1940).—Greek shock troops were closing in on Koritza early today in a drive with rifles, bayonets and hand grenades to capture the major Italian base in Albania.

News of the fall of the city was expected to reach Athens momentarily.

The concentric assault on Koritza struck at an estimated 30,000 Italian troops from nearly all sides after these forces had been pocketed by Greek mountain fighters. [Similar reports came from Belgrade, when the United Press heard unconfirmed reports Koritza had fallen to the Greeks.]

Other Heights Seized

Greek artillery bombarded the Italians from surrounding ridges throughout Tuesday before the infantry swept down from the heights to charge at the Fascist troops and tanks. Violent fighting at close quarters for possession of Koritza was reported this morning in the latest dispatches from the front.

The capture of Koritza would constitute the first big victory on either side in the Italo-Greek conflict. The Greek counter-invaders had seized another of a series of mountain heights ringing the city and were more than 10 miles into Albania before they began closing in on the town itself.

British Planes Reported

At the same time, Greek defenders of Janina, 50 to 60 miles to the southwest, were reported to have held the Italians at the Kalamas River, and to have isolated completely a Fascist force of about 4,000 in the Pindus Mountains between the two major fronts. Numerous Italians and their material were captured.

President, Neighbors Hail Victory

Roosevelt Watches Good News Pour In, Waves Greetings To Torch Parade

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hyde Park, N. Y., Nov. 5.—President Roosevelt tonight read the news of his historic victory in columns of figures marching across charts on the dining room table of his family's Hudson Valley estate.

The President, aided by his family and a few old friends, tabulated the figures carried into the mellow brick Georgian house by clattering news service teletype machines.

While millions of voters across the country were shattering a 150-year-old tradition of American politics, the President studiously followed his own election day routine.

Greets Flashlight Paraders

As he did in 1932 and 1936, the President late tonight stepped out onto the balustrade to wave a greeting to jubilant local Democrats parading across the lawn with torchlights.

"It looks all right," the President told his cheering neighbors. "We haven't got the full returns, of course," he added, grinning. "There's nothing in from California and Oregon."

"We, of course, face difficult days in this country," Mr. Roosevelt said. "But I think you will find me in the future just the same Franklin Roosevelt you have known a great many years."

One youthful marcher in the victory parade flourished a banner carrying a big black line through the words "Out Stealing Third" and in huge letters underneath: "Safe on Third."

Elmer Van Wagner, town supervisor of Hyde Park, introduced the President. He spoke of Washington, Lincoln, Jefferson, Jackson and Wil-

Willkie Tells Crowd He Never Felt Better

New York (Wednesday), Nov. 6 (AP).—Wendell Willkie told a group of followers today:

"Fellow workers, I first want to say to you that I never felt better in my life.

"I congratulate you in being a part of the greatest crusade of this century. And the principle for which we have fought will prevail, as sure as the truth will prevail.

"And I hope that none of you are either afraid or despondent. Because I am not in the slightest. I just wanted to come down and thank you so much for being my fellow fighters in this struggle and say a word to you.

"I hear some people shouting to me 'Don't give up.' I guess those people don't know me. . . . Don't be afraid and never quit. Good night."

Let's Give the President A Real Welcome

ON NOVEMBER 5, 1936, The Washington Post proposed that the citizens of this city give President Roosevelt a real welcome on his return from Hyde Park after reelection.

MORE THAN 250,000 people lined the streets, bands played, Pennsylvania Avenue was gay with flags and bunting, the cheers were thunderous. The President appreciated it.

LET'S DO IT AGAIN!

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT plans to return to Washington at 8:30 a. m. Thursday—the first third-term President of the Republic. He faces one of the gravest periods in our history.

WASHINGTON CAN SHOW HIM that all citizens stand behind him—united.

WE WOULD LIKE TO SEE Government workers and all other workers allowed sufficient time from their duties to share in the demonstration.

THE TIME IS SHORT. But with the co-operation of all and under able leadership, it can be done.

IF THE DISTRICT COMMISSIONERS—whose ability for the quick organization of similar projects has been proved before—should consent, we would like to see them undertake the necessary arrangements.

WE FEEL CERTAIN the community will fall in behind any arrangement the Commissioners may approve.

WHAT about it, Washington?

Election Results

FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT was reelected for a third term as President, and Henry Agard Wallace became Vice President in a Democratic landslide.

NEW YORK—New York City again overcame up-State Republican majorities and gave Mr. Roosevelt perhaps a 500,000 majority. Senator Mead defeated Representative Barton for the Senate.

PENNSYLVANIA—Pivotal Pennsylvania was fought for doggedly, with the President maintaining a steady lead along with Senator Guffey.

OHIO—Willkie's early lead in rural Ohio was overcome as industrial centers were heard from and Mr. Roosevelt thereafter continued in front. For Governor and the Senate, G. O. P. candidates Bricker and Burton were leading their Democratic opponents.

MASSACHUSETTS—Willkie took the margin in early Bay State counting but soon lost it. Democratic Senator Walsh was drawing away from his Republican opponent, while Gov. Saltonstall and his Democratic opponent, Dever, were running neck-and-neck for the governorship.

CONNECTICUT—President Roosevelt swept Connecticut's industrial regions to in the State. Democratic Senator Maloney was reelected and Democratic Candidate Hurley beat Gov. Baldwin for reelection.

NEW HAMPSHIRE—An early Willkie lead in New Hampshire was overcome by President Roosevelt as the night progressed, with the governorship race neck-and-neck.

MAINE—True to tradition, Maine remained Republican, giving Willkie its five electoral votes.

VERMONT—Rock-ribbed Republican Vermont likewise gave its electoral votes to Willkie, and gave substantial majorities to the G. O. P. candidates for Senate seats and the governorship.

MARYLAND—The Free State went for Roosevelt and returned Senator Radcliffe to the Senate.

ILLINOIS—The President took a commanding lead and increased it as the late returns poured in, running well ahead in Cook County and not far behind down-State. Senator Slatery was reelected while Republican Gubernatorial Candidate Green was a neck ahead of Democrat Hershey.

IOWA—Wendell Willkie moved out ahead of President Roosevelt in the Corn State with returns incomplete, while Gov. Wilson likewise took the lead in his race for reelection.

VIRGINIA—President Roosevelt swept Virginia by a better than 2-to-1 majority, while Senator Byrd and Democratic Congressional candidates won hands down.

MINNESOTA—Voters in Minnesota split the ticket, giving President Roosevelt a commanding lead, but were building up pluralities for Gov. Stassen and Senator Shipstead, who were apparently reelected.

MICHIGAN—Willkie carried Michigan and Senator Vandenberg was reelected, while 81-year-old Gov. Dickinson held a narrow lead in the gubernatorial race

MISSOURI—Regarded as a barometer State, Missouri gave the lead early to President Roosevelt. McDaniel was leading his

Party May Gain Seats In House

Six Are Claimed; G. O. P. Leaders No Longer Hopeful Of an Upset

The Seventy-seventh Congress will be strongly Democratic.

On the basis of returns at 3 o'clock this morning, the Republicans not only had failed to gain seats in the House of Representatives, but actually had suffered a net loss of six.

Democratic candidates for the House, riding the Roosevelt tide, unseated three Republican incumbents in Connecticut, two in Pennsylvania, two in New York, one in West Virginia and one in Missouri.

The Republicans picked up three Democratic House seats, one each in New York, California, Oklahoma and Missouri.

Loss of 10 Conceded

A spokesman for the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee said at 3 o'clock this morning that a Republican loss of 10 seats in the House was conceded.

Republican candidates for the Senate were leading in Ohio and Nebraska in battles for seats heretofore held by Democrats. But the Democrats were certain to hold on to control of the Senate no matter what happened in yesterday's elections.

Having gained 80 House seats in the off-year election of 1938, the Republicans were confident of making further gains yesterday. They even believed that they stood a good chance of capturing control of the House for the first time since 1931.

Early this morning G. O. P. spokesmen were saying that they expected to gain some Senate seats and just about hold their own in the House, losing some and winning some in a sort of electoral standoff.

The first upsets to be reported came in Connecticut, where the strong Roosevelt tide carried three, possibly four, Democratic House candidates to victory.

Herman P. Kopplemann (Democrat), was elected in the First Connecticut District over Representa-

John L. Lewis Refuses to Comment

John L. Lewis, C. I. O. president, who came out for Willkie and stated that he would accept reelection of President Roosevelt as a repudiation of himself by his labor following, said late last night through a member of the family that he had no statement to make.

Lewis said in supporting Willkie he would "retire" as C. I. O. leader at the union's convention in Atlantic City November 18.

McNary Concedes and Wishes His Opponents 'Grace'; Willkie Retires After Thanking Party For Support in His 'Crusade'

By Robert C. Albright

President Roosevelt yesterday was reelected over Wendell L. Willkie, Republican nominee.

Smashing a century and a half precedent, he became the first President ever to campaign for and win a third term.

With returns still incomplete, he had run up such a lead in citadels of Republican strength and in States Willkie needed to win, that he was assured a substantial victory.

Before midnight, Chairman Edward J. Flynn of the Democratic national committee claimed the election and leading metropolitan dailies that have been supporting Willkie conceded it.

Willkie failed to concede. After predicting the "horse race" would go over till tomorrow, he went into a midnight conference with his advisers. Then at 12:15 he spoke to Willkie workers in the Commodore Hotel ballroom, congratulating those who participated in his "crusade" and announcing he was not a bit "disheartened."

McNary Reported to Have Conceded Defeat

Willkie returned to his room, listened to a few more returns, and then retired. He will issue a statement at 9 a. m.

From Salem, Ore., Associated Press reported that his running mate, Senator Charles L. McNary, conceded defeat at 10:40 p. m.

Later President Roosevelt, addressing a jamboree of his Hyde Park neighbors, said the returns looked "all right." He told them that in the future they would find him "just the same Franklin Roosevelt you've known a great many years."

Willkie—13,779,002.

Riding to victory with the President was Henry A. Wallace, Democratic Vice Presidential nominee, who had stumped the country almost as assiduously as had Willkie.

Apparently Republican hopes of winning control of the House or of slashing Democratic majorities sufficiently to permit a controlling coalition, went down with their candidates.

Last night's returns failed to show any substantial shift in party margins, while in the Senate Republicans seemed likely to make a net gain of one seat.

Key States Join Third-Term March

As the President in effect claimed the election victory and neutral parties conceded it, he was leading in 37 States with a total electoral vote of 433.

States vital to Willkie, such as New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Massachusetts and California had presaged the result in an early parade to the Roosevelt column. The Southern tier and the border States went solidly for the President. Willkie needed some break in the border region to win.

Willkie was leading in only 11 States, with an electoral ballot of 98. He had upset poll forecasts by walking off to a lead in New Jersey.

Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Colorado, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Nebraska, New Jersey, North Dakota, South Dakota and Vermont.

While the race was so close in some States that overnight returns might change some results, there appeared no conceivable possibility that late Willkie votes could turn back the flying start of the President.

There seemed little in the late returns to sustain the tenacious hopes of either Willkie, or of Republican National Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr. But Martin held out. From his home at North Attleboro, Mass., he said: "I'm not conceding anything."

While many precincts in the larger States were still missing, such controlling States as New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania,

Byron Reelected By 6,000 Votes Over 'Big Train'

By a margin expected to exceed 6,000 votes, Representative William D. Byron (Democrat), was reelected to Congress yesterday from the Sixth Maryland District over Walter Johnson, former big league baseball star.

Representative Byron captured Johnson's home county of Montgomery and three other counties in the district. Johnson led only in Garrett, which has never voted Democratic. Byron's margin in Montgomery was 529 votes.

Baltimore, Nov. 5.—Returns from 1,076 of Maryland's 1,331 polling places showed President Roosevelt leading Willkie by 104,000 votes. The count: Roosevelt, 322,579; Willkie, 218,422.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 5.—A Roosevelt lead over Wendell L. Willkie in Virginia, which dropped below the President's majority over Landon in 1936, was shown tonight on the basis of incomplete returns.

The count from 1,646 precincts out of the State's total of 1,716 gave Roosevelt 230,097 compared with 105,966 for the Republican nominee.

Democratic Congressmen who were opposed by Republicans in four districts also were out in front with the closest race in the "fighting Ninth," where 174 precincts out of 249 gave Representative John W. Flannagan, jr., ardent New Deal supporter, 21,513 votes to 16,523 for his Republican opponent, State Senator Fred C. Parks, of Abingdon.

Representative A. Woodrum, of the Sixth District, led Fred W. McWane, Lynchburg Republican, better than two to one on the basis of returns from 166 of the district's 189 precincts. The total at that stage was Woodrum 22,487 and McWane 10,616.

In the Seventh, Representative A. Willis Robertson led Jacob A. Garber, of Harrisonburg, Republican 26,507 to 14,291 on returns from 253 of 257 precincts, and in the Eighth Representative Howard W. Smith was far ahead of Henry Ohio, and also Illinois—all essential to Willkie—appeared certain on the basis of heavy leads to wind up in the Roosevelt column.

By 1 a. m. the President had leads in States totaling 273 electoral ballots that were open to NO doubt. Willkie at the same hour was only equally certain of 62. The only States that might reasonably be open to dispute totaled 193 electoral ballots, and even if Willkie carried all in late returns, he had no reasonable chance of attaining a majority.

At an early hour today, Republicans led in 16 of the 30 Governorship races. Four Democratic gubernatorial candidates in the South had been elected. They were Eugene Talmadge in Georgia, W. Lee O'Daniel in Texas, Spessard L. Holland in Florida, and Prentice Cooper in Tennessee.

Senator McNary, in conceding the election long before his associates, congratulated President Roosevelt and Wallace, wishing them "grace, and their Administration, prosperity."

"We are a united country," said McNary. "The two-party system is secure. We shall try to afford Mr. Roosevelt and his associates a worthy and vigilant opposition."

And McNary, who is a believer in political cycles, added: "Today's trend indicates a victory for our principles four years hence."

Roosevelt, Top Of Ticket Ride Crest in Missouri

St. Louis, (Wednesday) Nov. 6.—(AP)—President Roosevelt rode a mounting crest of Missouri votes early today and took the top of the Democratic ticket along with him in this state which has backed every presidential winner since the turn of the century.

Returns from 2,531 of the state's 4,479 precincts, including 150 of 783 in St. Louis and 230 of 557 in Jackson County (Kansas City), gave Roosevelt 439,169 votes to 391,811 for Willkie.

Riding a lead with the President here Senator Harry S. Truman, Democratic incumbent whose bid for re-election was opposed by Manvel H. Davis, of Kansas City, and Lawrence McDaniel of St. Louis, who was ahead of Forrest C. Donnell in their gubernatorial race. Kansas City, voting without its fallen "boss," T. J. Pendergast, as a factor, returned its usual top-heavy Democratic majority.

Roosevelt Lead Rises in Delaware

Wilmington, Del. (Wednesday) Nov. 6 (AP).—Steadily mounting lead for President Roosevelt and all but one of the other major Democratic candidates in Delaware indicated early today that their party had recaptured a seat in the U. S. Senate and control of the State government.

With 158 of the State's 249 precincts counted, President Roosevelt held a lead of 8,411 over Wendell Willkie. Senator John G. Townsend, jr., fighting for reelection to a third term, trailed his Democratic opponent, James M. Tunnel, by a vote of 31,576 to 36,673.

Willkie Retires for the Night, Promises Statement at 9 A. M.

'Don't Be Afraid; Never Quit,' He Urges His Followers at Hotel Headquarters; Hears Adverse Returns Without Comment

By William B. Ardery
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Nov. 6 (Wednesday).—Wendell L. Willkie retired at 1:30 a. m. today after announcing that he would have no further statement on the election until he awakened.

The Republican Presidential nominee gave up his vigil at the radio and his study of newspaper election returns after telling a group of cheering supporters at the Commodore Hotel: "Don't be afraid; never quit."

He said he would have a statement to make at 9 a. m. (E. S. T.).

Willkie appeared tired, but he still was smiling as he sent word to reporters that he would withhold comment until morning. That announcement came shortly after Republican Chairman Joseph W. Martin made a similar statement from his home at North Attleboro, Mass.

From time to time during the evening, Willkie chatted with friends, read newspapers and studied analysis of election returns compiled by a corps of statisticians.

Shortly after midnight, Willkie went to the hotel ballroom and was loudly cheered when he asserted that the principles for which he had fought would prevail, "as truth always prevails."

The candidate, who conducted a strenuous coast-to-coast campaign which took him into 34 States, said he never had felt better in his life.

As soon as he finished his brief talk, the crowd in the ballroom began to disperse and within an hour there was only a small group watching new returns being posted on a big blackboard.

At 10:30 last night, Willkie, receiving election returns in his hotel suite, had expressed the belief that the contest was a horse race and that the outcome would not be determined until some time Wednesday.

After finishing his meal and studying last-minute returns, Willkie sent this message to reporters waiting in the press room of the Hotel Commodore:

"I think it is a horse race. I don't think the result will be finally determined before sometime tomorrow."

The Republican Presidential nominee dined with his wife, his son Philip and his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Willkie, of Chicago. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Hollister, of Cincinnati, who were with the candidate on his seven-week campaign tour. Hollister, law partner of Senator Robert A. Taft, represented the Republican National Committee.

Willkie, tuning in on the radio and studying a big pile of newspapers, followed the returns closely.

In nearby rooms a staff of statisticians projected the early votes into possible State totals.

When the radio brought an early report of a slight lead for President Roosevelt in Indiana Willkie rose, walked about the room, and remarked that the returns probably came from Gary, an industrial section which went heavily Democratic in 1936.

Thomas E. Dewey, unsuccessful contendre for the Republican Presidential nomination, visited Willkie in company with Paul Lockwood, assistant New York district attorney.

Russell Davenport, one of Willkie's chief advisers, was among those in the nominee's room upstairs and kept a tally sheet of election results.

Willkie heard a series of adverse returns without comment and appeared to be growing tired as the night wore on.

Willkie, smiling and rested after his strenuous Presidential campaign, voted today in a schoolhouse and then urged "every American citizen to vote, irrespective of how he votes."

Subsequently the Republican nominee and Mrs. Willkie went for a drive through Central Park and along the Hudson River.

After a short rest in his apartment on Fifth Avenue, Willkie announced he would receive election reports through the evening at his hotel headquarters. Only a few close associates were invited to join him in his fourteenth-floor midtown hotel suite.

A dozen floors below, a ballroom was reserved for 4,000 Willkie workers to hear the returns.

Willkie, up early as usual, voted at 9:42 a. m. (E. S. T.) after Mrs. Willkie first had balloted. Philip, the nominee's 20-year-old son, stood on a school bench and watched his parents enter the booth.

Leaving the building, which was jammed with Willkie supporters, the candidate walked past a group of cheering school children and then told reporters all should vote, irrespective of their choice.

"The right to vote is both a duty and a privilege and should be exercised by every American qualified," he said, adding that he wished to thank "all the people for the generous reception given me everywhere I have been in this crusade."

In a brief interview at the hotel headquarters, Mrs. Willkie said "of course" she was confident of a Republican victory.

She wore a square-necked black velvet afternoon dress. A corsage of gardenias was pinned on her shoulder and she carried a nosegay of roses.

"Aren't you tense?" she was asked.

"No, I take things as they come," Mrs. Willkie replied, smiling.

Her interviewers were surprised to learn she didn't know what she was going to wear to a victory ball in the hotel arranged for later in the evening by the Willkie supporters.

"I haven't even thought about that," she said.

son, and then cried, "But here is the greatest American of them all. If you don't believe me ask John L. Lewis and Wendell Willkie."

Mr. Roosevelt responded to the introduction with a suggestion that "some day when Elmer gets tired of running for supervisor—maybe 20 years from now—I might take a shot at that job."

Only half an hour after the first cheers for "The Champ," another crowd turned up on the lawn and the President and Mrs. Roosevelt came out onto the portico again.

"This is my second party tonight," Mr. Roosevelt said, "and I am very grateful for it. Things look perfectly fine."

The President asked to be excused because "a great many people" wanted to speak to him on the phone. "God bless you all," he said as he went into the house for the last time.

As he always does on Election Day, Mr. Roosevelt paused for a chat with his Hyde Park neighbors after voting shortly after noon at the little town hall here. He talked with Van Wagner and Welcome Lawson, white-bearded village sage.

He was not given a chance, however, to tell the election clerk inside the town hall his occupation is farming, as he often has when registering. Mrs. Emma Crasper, chairman of the district election board, simply asked the President his name and then directed him to the voting booth.

"Every one knows he's a farmer," Mrs. Crasper said afterward to reporters.

Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, the President's 86-year-old mother, saw an opening for a sally, though, when Miss Mildred Todd, election clerk, inquired, "What name, please?"

"Sara Delano Roosevelt," answered the matriarch of the family, "and it's been my name now for a good many years."

There was a good-natured exchange inside the town hall between the President and photographers on a balcony overhead. The cameramen asked Mr. Roosevelt to look up, but he protested that the pictures would show nothing but "my bald spot."

"I don't think the election officials ought to allow that," he added.

In the confusion created by photographers' flash bulbs and requests for various Presidential poses, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt started to leave the building and then remembered that she had not yet voted. The First Lady hastily returned to the green-curtained booth.

Mrs. Roosevelt paused at the foot of the town hall steps to make her customary contribution of $5 to the local chapter of the American Red Cross.

Back at the big house above the Hudson, the President made a half-hearted attempt to work on his stamp collection in his study, a small museum of naval history and Dutchess County lore.

First News Is Good

But it was early in the afternoon that Mr. Roosevelt received his first election news, a report from H. M. Robinson, register of deeds of Vance County, N. C., that he had carried Nut Bush township, 24 to 0. The scattered returns began coming in faster, and with them thousands of telegrams of good wishes.

Most of the President's election night guests dined 3 miles away from the ancestral Roosevelt home at the First Lady's Valkill cottage. They joined the President as the first substantial returns began to come through.

In the group following the President's charts were Harry L. Hopkins, former Secretary of Commerce; Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, of the New York State Supreme Court, an old adviser of Mr. Roosevelt, and Judge John E. Mack, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., who placed the President's name in nomination at the Democratic conventions of 1932 and 1936.

From time to time during the evening the little circle in the dining room heard telephone reports from Democratic leaders in key States. At 10 p. m., in a phone conversation with Democratic Chairman Edward J. Flynn, the President said he was "supremely confident" of victory.

The triumph won by the President today, unique though it is in American history, can be described only as one of the notable climaxes in the career of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

In 1936 Mr. Roosevelt achieved the most conclusive victory won by any candidate for the Presidency since George Washington was unanimously chosen as Chief Executive. He rolled up a total of 523 electoral votes against 8 for Gov. Alfred Landon, of Kansas.

In 1928, strange as the idea might seem today, one of the major issues in a New York gubernatorial campaign was whether Franklin Roosevelt was physically capable of carrying out the duties of the Governor's office.

In this year's campaign an electorate thoroughly familiar with Mr. Roosevelt's vitality scarcely mentioned his physical handicap or questioned his physical capacity to hold the most punishing job in the world for another four years.

Franklin D. Roosevelt was born 58 years ago on the estate where he learned tonight that he is to enjoy a tenure of office exercised by no other man in American history.

There was nothing in the first half of his life to set him apart from other sons of the Hudson Valley aristocracy. He had made eight trips to Europe before he was 14. He studied at Groton, Harvard and Columbia Law School.

It was in the fall of 1910 that a shiny red Maxwell automobile carried the handsome young Roosevelt, weary of work in a New York law office, on a barnstorming campaign through Dutchess County. He promised the farmers standardization of the size of apple barrels.

War As An Insurgent

Elected to the New York Senate from three normally Republican counties, Roosevelt won State-wide fame as leader of a little bloc of insurgent Democrats fighting the rule of Tammany. He was reelected in 1912, but on a visit to Washington in 1913, shortly before Woodrow Wilson took office, was offered and promptly accepted the post of Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Months before the United States entered the World War, while Secretary of the Navy Daniels was still hopeful of preserving America's peace, Assistant Secretary Roosevelt was rushing through what were then the biggest defense contracts in American history. When war came in 1917, the Army found that the Navy had cornered the market for a number of strategic materials.

Roosevelt came under fire several times in a visit to the Western Front. He energetically promoted the idea of a great mine barrier across the North Sea from the Orkney Islands to the Norwegian coast, against the skepticism of many British and American naval officers. The barrier eventually was credited with destruction of more than 100 German submarines.

During his eight-year tenure at the Navy Department, Roosevelt took one brief leave of absence to campaign for the Democratic nomination for Senator from New York. He lost to James W. Gerard by 70,000 votes, one of two defeats he has suffered at the polls.

The other came in 1920 when he ran for Vice President on the Democratic ticket. Harding and Coolidge crushed the team of Cox and Roosevelt. The young New Yorker, still only 38, returned to private life.

It was in 1921, after a swim in the cold surf of the Bay of Fundy, off Campobello, New Brunswick, that Mr. Roosevelt was stricken with infantile paralysis. There followed days of despair for his family, when they believed he would be an invalid the rest of his life. The patient himself, according to the testimony of doctors and friends, never lost faith that he could return to active life.

Within three years Mr. Roosevelt was managing Al Smith's campaign for the Democratic Presidential nomination. He walked onto the stage of Madison Square Garden on crutches to name Smith as "The Happy Warrior."

Four years later Roosevelt again placed Smith's name in nomination. This time the New York Governor was given first place on his party's ticket, but by early October the Democratic campaign was bogging down.

Smith had to carry New York to win, and Franklin Roosevelt seemed to be the only "available" Democrat with a chance to be elected Governor of New York. He refused the proffered nomination several times, went off on an all-day picnic near Warm Springs, Ga., when he knew Smith would be phoning him again, but finally gave in. Smith lost New York by 103,000 votes. Roosevelt was elected Governor by a majority of 25,000.

Wallace Is "Gratified"

Henry A. Wallace said in Washington shortly before last midnight that he was "gratified by the early trend in the voting" and indicated that he might issue a statement later.

The Democratic Vice Presidential candidate and a group of friends received the election returns by radio at the home of James Lecron, who was Wallace's assistant when he was Secretary of Agriculture.

Secretary Perkins Sees Labor Unity In Election Vote

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins tonight interpreted mounting election returns favorable to President Roosevelt as evidence that "we still are going to have a little humanity and a little unity in labor in the country."

She made the statement upon being asked what she thought the returns reflected in view of C. I. O. Leader John L. Lewis' indorsement of the Republican nominee, Wendell Willkie.

Secretary Perkins was one of the many Democratic leaders who watched the returns at the party's national headquarters at the Biltmore Hotel.

Collaboration between employers and employes has been "excellent" she said, adding:

"I hardly think we can improve on the record but if possible, we certainly shall. We have had excellent results and expect to continue."

New York State Gives Roosevelt Lead of 300,000; Barton Trails Mead

Up-State Edge For Willkie Overcome

Republican Does Better in City Than Expected

By the Associated Press

New York (Wednesday), Nov. 6. With only 600 out of 9,139 election districts missing, President Roosevelt held a commanding lead of almost 300,000 votes over Wendell L. Willkie—a lead which it seemed unlikely the Republican candidate could overcome.

The breakdown of the vote showed: Upstate—4,732 of 5,268 districts—Roosevelt, 1,154,838; Willkie, 1,597,349.

New York City—3,967 of 4,051 districts: Roosevelt, 1,927,235; Willkie, 1,219,676.

Nine Westchester County newspapers of the Macy Chain which supported Willkie announced at 10:20 p. m. (E. S. T.) that they had conceded the election to President Roosevelt.

President Leads in City

At the same time returns from 725 of 4,051 districts in New York City gave Willkie 206,465; Roosevelt, 334,990.

In the contest for United States Senator, the Democratic incumbent, James M. Mead, had 181,655 to 167,184 for Representative Barton in returns from 627 out of 9,319 districts.

The President was making a surprisingly strong showing in strong Republican Counties upState where 440 districts out of 5,268 gave Roosevelt 123,085 to 131,370 for Willkie, a difference of 8,305 in favor of the Republican standard bearer.

Roosevelt Carries Home District

Willkie, on the other hand, was doing better than expected in Democratic New York City, where he trailed Roosevelt by 137,013 with 1,300 out of 4,054 districts reporting.

The President carried the third election district of Dutchess County, where he voted earlier in the day. The vote in the district, with approximately 20 absentee ballots unaccounted for, gave the President a majority of 74 votes.

The voting booths, thronged throughout the day as an unprecedented number of voters cast their ballots, closed at 9 p. m. In some districts, it was nearly a half hour past the closing time before a report was received.

Dangers Still Present

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Former Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley said early today in a Nation-wide radio broadcast from Democratic headquarters that "now, perhaps more than ever before in history, the United States has need for national unity."

Farley expressed hope that the "victors will be moderate and considerate" and that the "losers will overcome their disappointment and pitch in like the loyal citizens that they are."

Farley declared that the "excitement of the campaign" must not "blind our eyes to the dangers" which face the United States in the future.

"National unity is our goal," Farley said. "Let us realize this goal in the ties of our common citizenship."

Farley, who managed President Roosevelt's two successful previous campaigns but retained only his New York State Democratic chairmanship during the present campaign, declared "the United States is greater than each of us."

Urges Acceptance By All

"He added that "we must lay aside our personal feelings" and "work for national unity."

"The voice of America has spoken, the people of America have once again expressed their will. As patriotic citizens, I urge every single individual in the land to accept the majority," Farley said.

"During the few months remaining of his present term President Roosevelt will face problems of magnitude. We have a common stake in America, and we must present a solid front before all the nations in the world."

Oren Root Won't Concede Election

New York, (Wednesday) Nov. 6 (AP).—Oren Root, jr., young Republican leader and one of Wendell L. Willkie's earliest supporters, declared early today in a radio broadcast that he was "not conceding an election" and added that the Nation "is richer, wiser and better off because of the campaign Willkie has made."

Rivals—Mead and Barton—Vote in New York

Democrats Strengthen Control of Congress

tive William J. Miller (Republican). Miller, a legless war veteran, had defeated Kopplemann in 1938.

Le Roy Downs (Democrat), was elected in the Fourth Connecticut District over Representative Albert E. Austin (Republican), and William J. Fitzgerald (Democrat), was a winner in the Second Connecticut District over Representative Thomas R. Ball. The Democratic National Congressional Committee claimed Lucian Maciora, a Democratic candidate for Connecticut's at-large seat, had defeated Representative-at-large B. J. Monkiewicz.

In the Thirteenth Pennsylvania District, former Representative James H. Gildea (Democrat), won back his seat from Representative Ivor D. Fenton (Republican), and in the Twenty-second Pennsylvania District H. L. Haines (Democrat), defeated Representative C. H. Gross.

In the Forty-first New York District Alfred Beiter (Democrat), won over Representative Francis Harter Republican)and in the Fifth New York District J. J. Hefferman (Democrat), defeated Representative Marcellus H. Evans (Republican).

The Republicans picked up a seat in the Sixteenth New York District, where William T. Pfieffer (Republican) defeated Representative James H. Fay (Democrat), who whipped John J. O'Connor i nthe 1938 "purge."

In California's Fourth District, Thomas Rolph (Republican), defeated Representative F. R. Havenner (Democrat).

In Oklahoma's Eighth District, Ross Rizley (Republican), won over Representative Phil Ferguson (Democrat).

In Missouri's Sixth District, Phil A. Bennett (Republican), defeated Representative Ruben T. Wood (Democrat).

But this was offset by the victory of Aime J. Forand (Democrat), over Representative Charles F. Risk (Republican), in the First Rhode Island District.

Representative Patrick H. Drewry, of Virginia, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said at 12:50 a. m. that his party's candidates for the House had won every doubtful seat with one exception.

His statement follows:

"While returns from the mountain areas and the West Coast are very incomplete, it appears certain that we have equalled our mixiumum claims in the House of Representatives.

"With one exception, as far as we have been able to receive reports, every doubtful State, whether held by a member of our party or by a Republican, has been won by our candidate. The record speaks for itself."

Something like 115 candidates for the House wer elected without close contests. Included were those Democrats in the "Solid South," who were as good as in when they won out in the party primary elections earlier.

Four Democrats and seven Republicans in California, who had both Democratic and Republican nominations, were likewise automatically elected yesterday. And three Republican House members were elected in Maine September 10.

Prior to yesterday's election the Democrats had 250 House seats, the Republicans, 167, the Progressives 2, the Farmer-Labor Party 1 and the American Labor Party 1. There were five vacancies.

Two Republican House incumbents in Ohio were threatened with loss of their seats in early returns. In the eighth Ohio district, Kenneth M. Petri (Democrat) was leading Representative Frederick C. Smith (Republican). In the Sixteenth Ohio district, William R. Thom (Democrat) was ahead of Representative James Seccombe.

G. O. P. Gain of Senate Seat Likely

Still very much the minority party in the Senate, the G. O. P. appeared early this morning to have picked up only one seat, bringing their total strength to 25.

On the basis of incomplete returns, Democratic seats in Ohio and Nebraska and a Farmer-Laborite seat in Minnesota seem to have been won by the Republicans.

On the other hand, William Lemke (Independent), was ahead in the race for a Republican seat in North Dakota, while a Democratic challenger was leading Senator Townsend (Republican), by a hair's breadth in Delaware.

If these trends are confirmed by more complete reports, the standing of the various parties in the Senate would be: Democrats, 68, instead of their present 69; Republicans, 25, instead of 24; 2 Independents, instead of 1; 1 Progressive and no Farmer-Laborites.

The only incumbent who has apparently been defeated is Senator Townsend, making a Republican third-term bid from Delaware.

After a neck-and-neck race in which he fell several thousand votes behind Senator Gerry (Democrat), of Rhode Island, was elected for his fourth term. Another poor starter was Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, who came up from behind to lead his Republican opponent by 144,048 to 136,887, with one-third of the State's precincts reporting.

Senator Townsend, chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, was evidently beaten by James M. Tunnell, a Democratic lawyer and banker.

The Democraic seat voluntarily relinquished by Senator Donahey, of Ohio, apparently fell to Republican Mayor Harold Burton, of Cleveland. He was running well ahead of the Democratic nominee, John McSweeney.

For the seat formerly held by Senator Burke, who was defeated in the Nebraska Democratic primaries, Republican National Committeeman H. A. Butler was leading Gov. R. L. Cochran by 31,807 to 18,330.

Lemke Has Slim Margin

In North Dakota, Representative Lemke held a slight edge on Republican William Langer and Democrat Charles Vogel for the seat formerly held by Republican Senator Frazier.

The Republicans gained a seat through the victory of Senator Shipstead, of Minnesota, who prior to his election had given up his allegiance to the Farmer-Labor party.

Among the prominent Senators who successfully weathered the election were Walsh, of Massachusetts; Guffey, of Pennsylvania; Mead, of New York, and Minton, of Indiana (Democrats), and Vandenberg, of Michigan (Republican).

After trailing Republican Henry Parkman in early returns, Senator Walsh, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, led safely with half the State's precincts in: 411,845 to 296,562.

In Pennsylvania, 100 per cent New Deal Senator Guffey had a lead of 1,590,833 to 1,433,691 for Jay Cooke, the Republican nominee. About three-fourths of the State's precincts had reported.

At 1:15 a. m., Representative Barton (Republican), of New York, conceded the reelection of Senator Mead. With slightly less than half the State's precincts reporting, Senator Mead had 1,384,987 to 1,303,179 for Representative Barton.

Majority Whip Minton, whose reelection in Indiana had been considered a touch-and-go possibility, came through with 414,424 votes to 401,209 for Raymond Willis, G. O. P. publisher, with one-third of the State's precincts in.

In New Jersey, Senator Barbour (Republican), decisively defeated James H. R. Cromwell, former Minister to Canada, by 433,510 to 264,010 in 1,401 of the State's 3,631 precincts.

And in Illinois, Democratic Senator Slattery appeared to have a safe margin over C. Wayland Brooks, the Republican, whom he was leading 1,128,039 to 1,029,334 in over half the State's precincts.

Vandenberg Held In

Senator Vandenberg, veteran Republican, was assured of reelection with a lead of 221,524 to 154,780 for his opponent, Frank Fitzgerald, with one-fifth of the State's precincts reporting.

A close race between Manvel H. Davis and Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, resulted in apparent victory for the latter, with 399,939 votes to 367,099 for his opponent. More than half the precincts were in.

The Democratic tide swept over Washington's neighbors, Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia. In Virginia Senator Byrd was reelected virtually without opposition; while Senator Radcliffe carried Maryland over former Governor Nice by better than two to one in half the precincts. In West Virginia, Democrat Harley M. Kilgore defeated Thomas B. Sweeney, jr.

In all the Rocky Mountain States except Idaho, the Democrats seemed to be winning. Senator O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; Representative Murdock, of Utah (succeeding Senator King, whom he defeated in the priparies); Senator Chavez, of New Mexico; Senator Pittman, of Nevada; Senator Wheeler, of Montana; and Ernest W. McFarland, of Arizona (succeeding Senator Ashurst, whom he defeated in the primaries)—all appeared victorious this morning.

Senator Thomas In Lead

In Idaho, Senator Thomas (Republican), held a lead over the Democratic nominee; but in Washington, Representative Wallgren (Democrat) had an edge on Stephen Chadwick, former national commander of the American Legion.

The Republicans won both seats in Vermont, returning Senator Austin and Gov. Aiken; while Senator Maloney (Democrat) was the winner in Connecticut.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), won easily in Tennessee, and Senator Chandler (Democrat) had no difficulty in Kentucky.

National Unity To Be Theme Of Broadcast

Members of Both Parties to Speak For Aid to Britain

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, Nov. 5.—A plea for national unity despite the outcome of the election will be broadcast to the American people tomorrow night by the leading members of both major parties, it was announced today.

Meanwhile, units throughout the Nation of the William Allen White Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies made preparations for local mass meetings to seek unity in support of aid to Britain.

Speakers on the broadcast include Alfred M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee in 1936, and Attorney General Robert H. Jackson. They will speak at an America United rally at Carnegie Hall.

Organized by the Council for Democracy, of which C. D. Jackson, general manager of Life Magazine, is president, the rally will be heard over a Nationwide hook-up of the Columbia Broadcasting System. The meeting will open at 9:30 p. m.

Howard Coonley, former president of the National Association of Manufacturers, will speak.

Other scheduled speakers are Dr. Clarence Dykstra, Selective Service Administrator; George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks; Newbold Morris, president of the City Council, and Raymond Gram Swing, chairman of the board of the Council for Democracy.

The fact that both major candidates had pledged all aid to Britain was cited by White in a message to units of his committee.

The text of his message follows:

"I earnestly urged each chapter of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies to arrange immediately, for this week if possible, a local mass meeting to appeal for national unity. The campaign will be over; we take off our political buttons and wear just one button: 'Defend America by Aiding the Allies.' The meeting should plead for unity of national spirit in support of a foreign policy to defend America by aiding the allies. This is particularly appropriate inasmuch as both local candidates pledged all aid to the allies. Invite your local candidates to participate wherever possible."

Flynn Hails 'Great Victory' Of Roosevelt

Should Hearten All Democracies in World, Party Workers Told

By the Associated Press

New York, (Wednesday), Nov. 6. Edward J. Flynn, National Democratic Chairman, told several hundred cheering party campaign workers at 12:18 a. m. today:

"I am sure you are all celebrating a great victory. I am sure the people gathered here tonight are satisfied with the part they have taken in that victory.

"We all know that we have done a good job in bringing about the re-election of President Roosevelt. I know that he will continue to do a great job as President of the United States."

Flynn spoke at a celebration of campaign workers at the Biltmore Hotel, which served as national and State party headquarters. He was to talk with the President by telephone later.

"President Roosevelt's victory is a great victory for all democracies," Flynn said. "It should be very heartening to democracies all over the world."

Flynn had asserted shortly after 11 o'clock last night he "assumed" President Roosevelt had been re-elected and added: "What was won was more than a political victory.

"Nor can I ever claim it was a victory for the party," he continued in a statement issued at Democratic national headquarters, where he received returns.

"It was the decision by the vast majority of our citizens, with no distinction of groups or elements or individuals, to continue in the course pursued for seven years under the leadership of our Chief Executive who has so far steered the Ship of State through the storms and reefs that beset the whole world at this time.

"With the election passes whatever bitterness there has been in this campaign. Franklin Roosevelt will be the President of the whole country and I am sure that those who supported Wendell Willkie will now join the President in efforts to keep our nation out of war and to carry on the program of economic progress that has brought us so far on the road to recovery.

"Let me, as national chairman of the Democratic Party, express my appreciation and gratitude to those who have helped to bring about a result which the whole world will recognize as perhaps the greatest triumph for democracy of modern times."

Roosevelt Carries His Home District

Hyde Park, N. Y., Nov. 5 (AP).—President Roosevelt carried his home district in Hyde Park in today's balloting, 426 to 309, but trailed Wendell L. Willkie in the other three districts composing the town.

The vote for the complete township gave the President 1,363, Willkie, 1,422.

Baltimore Police Speed Election Tabulation

Baltimore, Nov. 5.—The Baltimore police force, including 40 clerical employes, worked overtime on a volunteer basis to get out the election returns, which they compiled in approximately three hours. George J. Brennan, secretary to the police commissioner, directed the work which centered at Baltimore police headquarters.

4 D. C. Residents Use Boat to Vote

Watertown, N. Y. Nov. 5 (AP).—A boat enabled four residents of voteless Washington, D. C., to cast their ballots today.

Dr. J. B. Gregg Custis, his wife, son, Keith Custis; and his brother, Dr. Horace H. Custis, arrived in Watertown last night, went to Clayton this morning and, by boat, journeyed to Grindstone Island, where their summer home is located and where their voting residence is established.

After voting, they started back to Washington.

Roosevelt Piles Up Growing Margin in Pennsylvania; Guffey Trails Slightly

Republican State, City Chiefs Concede

Democratic Gains In Congress, Local Offices Likely

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia (Wednesday), Nov. 6. President Roosevelt, piling up a steadily growing margin, led Wendell L. Willkie by nearly a quarter of a million votes in Pennsylvania early today with returns complete from three-fourths of the State.

The count in 6,324 of the 8,118 precincts in Pennsylvania gave Roosevelt 1,713,957 to 1,481,845.

Republican State Chairman James F. Torrance conceded the Keystone State's 36 electoral votes to the Chief Executive and Senator Joseph F. Guffey, running somewhat behind Mr. Roosevelt, was conceded reelection by Jay Cooke, his opponent and Republican city chairman of Philadelphia.

Democrats Gain in House

Democratic gains appeared in prospect among Pennsylvania's 37 Congressmen. Democratic candidates built up mounting leads for State treasurer and auditor general—the only State elective offices held by Democrats. Democrats appeared headed for gains in the State Legislature.

The early returns were by no means decisive and barely indicated a trend. Aside from the Roosevelt lead in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh and the mining areas where the C. I. O. United Mine Workers count thousands of members, the most significant indication was failure in early returns of Republican strongholds to report their usual heavy margins.

The city of Chester, great oil and shipbuilding center and seat of Republican Leader Joseph N. Pew's Sun Oil Co., went Democratic for the first time. Chester voted for Alfred M. Landon in Roosevelt's 1936 Pennsylvania landslide.

Vandenberg Piles Up Formidible Lead in Michigan

Detroit, Nov. 6 (AP).—Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican, Michigan), seeking reelection, piled up a lead over his Democratic opponent, Frank Fitzgerald, with a fourth of Michigan precincts outside of Democratic Detroit reported this morning. The vote in 618 of 3,632 precincts was: Vandenberg 179,004, FitzGerald 132,641.

Michigan's 81-year-old foe of "high life" drinking, Gov. Luren D. Dickinson, gained a slender lead tonight over Murray D. Van Wagoner, Democrat, in his race for reelection, with returns from normally Democratic Detroit still to be reported. The vote in 373 of 3,632 precincts was: Dickinson 95,343, Van Wagoner 92,611.

The Presidential vote was, in 573 precincts out of 3,632: Roosevelt 132,403, Willkie 168,875.

Election Results

Republican opponent for Governor, and Senator Truman (Democrat) was ahead in his race for reelection.

KENTUCKY—The President piled up a large majority in this State, whose election was marred by the shooting of a candidate for minor office in "Bloody Breathitt." Senator Chandler appeared safe. Representative May was the only incumbent trailing a Republican.

TENNESSEE—President Roosevelt ran up a better than 2-to-1 majority in this Democratic stronghold. Senator McKellar and Gov. Cooper held wide leads over their Republican opponents.

NEW JERSEY—With returns incomplete, the Republicans were sweeping New Jersey, Wendell Willkie, Senator Barbour and R. C. Hendrickson holding a substantial lead in the White House, Senate and governorship races.

INDIANA—President Roosevelt trailed Willkie in Indiana by a narrow margin, while the Senate and governorship races were running close, with return not complete.

WISCONSIN—President Roosevelt held a substantial lead in Wisconsin while Senator LaFollette was running ahead of his Republican opponent, Fred Clausen, and the Republican gubernatorial candidate was leading in a three way race.

DELAWARE—Wendell Willkie was trailing in Delaware, in a surge of Democratic votes that threatened to unseat Senator Townsend.

KANSAS—Incomplete returns gave Wendell Willkie a strong lead in Kansas, with Gov. Ratner ahead for reelection by a shorter margin.

MISSISSIPPI—In traditional "solid South" manner, Mississippi went overwhelmingly for the third term.

NORTH CAROLINA—This State delivered its 13 electoral votes to President Roosevelt, who piled up a majority of around 400,000 votes. The Democratic gubernatorial candidate's margin was nearly as large and each of 11 Democratic Congressional nominees was assured of election.

LOUISIANA—It was a landslide for Roosevelt, who led by more than 5 to 1. All Democrats were elected to the House.

GEORGIA—Voters of Georgia kept the State traditionally Democratic by giving President Roosevelt a lead of nearly 7 to 1 over his Republican opponent.

NEBRASKA—Wendell Willkie and the Republican candidates for Senator and Governor took an early lead in Nebraska and held to it as later returns fed in slowly.

CALIFORNIA—This State of fantasy and fruit which swung the election of 1916 apparently gave approval to the third term as early pluralities for Roosevelt swelled into a 2-to-1 majority.

RHODE ISLAND—The Nation's tiniest State approved the third term, apparently reelected Democratic Senator Gerry by a narrow margin and unseated Republican Gov. Vanderbilt.

SOUTH DAKOTA—This prairie State apparently will be listed in the Willkie column, with Republican Gov. Bushfield reelected.

FLORIDA—President Roosevelt got more than double the votes for Willkie and the seven electoral votes that go with this State. Democrats took early leads in races for Governor, the Senate and House.

SOUTH CAROLINA—This fortress of the Democratic Party which was at the top of "sure" States for President Roosevelt voted 20 to 1 in favor of the third term. Six Democratic Representatives were elected by majorities of almost 100 to 1.

ALABAMA—Alabama rolled up its traditional Democratic majority for President Roosevelt and other nominees of the party.

NORTH DAKOTA—An early Willkie lead was cut down as later Roosevelt votes were recorded, while Representative Lemke, running as an Independent, held a narrow lead over his Republican and Democratic opponents. Democratic Gov. Moses was ahead in his reelection race.

WEST VIRGINIA—Despite John L. Lewis, West Virginia voted for the third term and apparently elected a Democratic Senator and Governor.

OKLAHOMA—Voters kept this State in its traditional place in the Democratic column by coming out strongly for the President. Mr. Roosevelt had a substantial majority from the start.

TEXAS—The "ayes" of Texas whose favorite son failed of nomination were overwhelmingly for the President. His lead was approximately 5 to 1.

ARIZONA—This Southwestern State went Democratic by a 2-to-1 majority, electing Ernest W. McFarland to Senator Ashurst's seat and S. P. Osbourne as Governor.

NEW MEXICO—President Roosevelt captured New Mexico by a big margin, while Senator Chavez and Gov. Miles were being reelected.

MONTANA—Early returns gave President Roosevelt and Senator Wheeler a strong lead for reelection.

COLORADO—Wendell Willkie and Republican Gov. Carr apparently carried this mountain State.

ARKANSAS—An advantage almost equal to that in 1936 was given to President Roosevelt as Arkansas turned in a higher than usual vote. Adkins, Democratic candidate for Governor, appeared coasting to an easy victory over his G. O. P. opponent.

WYOMING—Wendell Willkie and President Roosevelt were in a tight race for Wyoming's electoral votes with returns incomplete. Senator O'Mahoney led his Republican opponent seeking to unseat him.

WASHINGTON—The Democratic ticket took the lead on early returns, with Representative Walgren and former Senator Dill pacing President Roosevelt in the Senate and gubernatorial races. Former American Legion Commander Stephen F. Chadwick was trailing in the Senatorial race.

UTAH—A Democratic sweep was registered in Utah, with Representative Murdock and Herbert D. Maw winning Senatorial and Governor's posts.

NEVADA—The Presidential race was neck-and-neck in this mountain State, while Senator Pittman, who trailed his Republican opponent at first, gained a slight edge.

OREGON—The teetering Presidential race in Oregon swung back toward the President's favor in reports from about a fourth of the precincts in Candidate McNary's State.

IDAHO—The President maintained an early lead in this State as Bottolfsen, Republican candidate for Governor, stepped ahead of his Democratic opposition.

Roosevelt, Neely Appear W. Va. Winners

Charleston, W. Va. (Wednesday), Nov. 6 (AP).—West Virginia apparently gave its eight electoral votes to President Roosevelt and elected Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely as its twenty-first Governor, conceded the Mountain State had elect- and National Administration.

Women Take Biggest Part Yet in Election

25,000,000 Reported To Have Cast Ballots; Many Seeking Office

By Ruth Cowan
Associated Press Staff Writer

Women had a big hand yesterday in piling up the Nation's heaviest vote.

Indications were that a record number of women balloted in the election concluding a campaign in which they took an unprecedentedly active part, and in which thousands of women ran for national and State offices.

Furthermore, there was an increased number of women on the job to see that everyone voted.

Miss Marguerite Wells, president of the National League of Women Voters, a nonpartisan organization, reported that the demand for information on "how to get out the vote" was five-fold greater than in 1938.

"We have evidence aplenty that women account for their full share in the phenomenal interest and activity of the electorate," she said.

The Republicans estimated that there were 25,000,000 women among the Nation's 60,000,000 eligible voters. The Democrats reported that in several States—among them California, Illinois, Indiana, Montana, Kansas and Missouri—women registrants outnumbered the men.

Thirty women wanted a seat in Congress. They campaigned under various banners—Republican, Democratic, Communist, Prohibitionist, Socialist, Social-Laborite.

Miss Jeannette Rankin (Republican), of Montana, the first woman elected to Congress, wanted her job back again after 22 years. Three veteran Congresswomen, Mrs. Caroline O'Day (Democrat), of New York; Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, and Mrs. Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, campaigned to stay in office.

Miss Jessie Sumner (Republican), of Illinois, who is finishing her first term, and Mrs. Frances Bolton (Republican), of Ohio, elected this year to her late husband's place, were up for reelection. Mrs. Margaret Smith (Republican), of Maine, another newcomer this term, was reelected in September.

The Republicans had two more House candidates—Mrs. John E. Messervey, of South Carolina, and Miss Mary H. Donlon, of New York—and the Democrats five—Mrs. Nan Wood Honeyman, of Oregon, Mrs. Zoe S. Nabers, of Iowa; Mrs. Flora D. Johnson, of New York; Miss Mary C. Duffy, of New Jersey, and Mrs. E. Adele Scott Saul, of Pennsylvania.

The only two women—Mrs. Mary Ellen Dooner, of New Jersey, and Mrs. Alice Burke, of Virginia—who sought a seat in the Senate ran on the Communist ticket.

record for the city's poll. Complete returns from 471 precincts revealed that 313,701 persons had voted for the two major party candidates. The previous record vote for Baltimore City was 310,294 in 1936.

Fifth District, 59 of 197 polling places—Sasscer (Democrat), 21,422; Torvestad (Republican), 6,789.

Encouraged by warm, clear weather in most sections, Marylanders jammed the polls in record-breaking thousands to settle by ballot one of the hardest-fought political battles in Free State history.

The jam in Baltimore drew predictions from election supervisors that the total turnout would run between 85 and 90 per cent in the city—compared with about 94 per cent in the Roosevelt landslide of 1936.

In the Congressional races the hottest fights were in the First (Eastern Shore) District, and Sixth (western) District.

Walter P. Johnson, Republican and former American League pitcher, was pitted against Representative William D. Byron in the western district, and counting on support from heavy Republican forces in the district.

In the First District, Representative David J. Ward, sent to Congress in a special election in June, 1939, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of T. Alan Goldsborough to accept a Federal judgeship, battled former Judge Robert F. Duer, Republican, who was staging his third try for the House of Representatives.

Representative William P. Cole, Jr., was running for his seventh term in Congress in the Second District against Theodore F. Brown, Westminster Republican.

Baltimore city residents voted to decide two of the six races, with Representative Thomas D'Alesandro, Jr., who went to Congress in 1938, running against John A. Janetzke, Republican, in the Third District, and John A. Meyer, who captured the Democratic nomination last May from Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy, running against Daniel Ellison, 54-year-old attorney, in the Fourth District.

In the fifth district, Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer, Democrat elected to Congress in a special election Feb. 3, 1939, sought to keep his seat against John N. Torvestad of Colmar Manor.

Roosevelt Forges Ahead by 89,000 in Ohio

Late Returns Are Expected To Boost Lead

C. O. P. Gov. Bricker Leads Davey; Burton Ahead in Senate Race

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 5 (INS).—Blocks of votes from the great industrial centers of Ohio tonight pushed President Roosevelt far out in front of Wendell Willkie in their contest for the Buckeye State's 26 electoral votes.

At 11 p. m., with the count nearing completion, the President held a lead of more than 89,000 and it appeared to be mounting as new returns came in.

With 7,343 of the State's 8,675 precincts counted the vote stood:

Roosevelt, 1,421,394; Willkie, 1,332,253.

By the Associated Press

The Cleveland Plain Dealer, which had maintained an unbroken tradition for 99 years as a Democratic paper until this year, when it supported Willkie for President, said tonight President Roosevelt would "probably carry Ohio by 125,000 to 130,000 votes." However, it held the possibility that the trend toward Roosevelt might change.

Republican State Chairman Ed D. Schorr said: "It looks like Ohio goes for Roosevelt."

Nearly all the agricultural counties gave a favorable vote to Willkie with the exception of a few Democratic strongholds. The large industrial centers and coal-mining counties, where the C. I. O. is strong, leaned heavily toward President Roosevelt.

John W. Bricker, Republican Governor, was piling up a substantial margin over Martin L. Davey, former Democratic Governor, in his bid for a second term.

Returns from 838 precincts gave Bricker 136,644; Davey 106,186.

The Republicans also were giving Harold H. Burton, Cleveland Mayor, a comfortable lead over John McSweeney, former Democratic Congressman, in the race for United States Senator.

Willkie Leads By 84,929 In New Jersey

By the United Press

Newark, N. J., Nov. 6—(Wednesday)—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie held an 84,929 lead over President Roosevelt in returns early today from one-third of New Jersey's 3,631 election districts. Willkie had 406,886 votes to Mr. Roosevelt's 321,957 in 1,284 districts, but they included only a fraction from Hudson County, where Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, State Democratic leader, had predicted a Democratic plurality of 150,000.

The vote for Governor in 1,401 precincts of 3,631—Edison (Democrat), 331,545; Hendrickson (Republican), 382,512.

The first returns from Hudson County, stronghold of Democratic Mayor Frank Hague, gave Roosevelt 14,045 to Willkie's 4,874. Essex County, with returns from 200 districts, also gave the President a lead but he was trailing in returns from Bergen, Ocean, and Union counties.

The vote in Jersey City was reported 12,000 over the previous record.

Hot Race in Iowa, Wallace's Home; Willkie Leading

Des Moines, Iowa (Wednesday), Nov. 6 (AP).—Iowa, the stamping ground of Henry A. Wallace, provided the Nation with one of its hottest political battles as Wendell Willkie added to his slight lead over President Roosevelt in mounting unofficial returns early today.

In 1,099 of the State's 2,453 precincts Willkie had 264,264 votes and Roosevelt 255,078.

The situation of Gov. George A. Wilson, Republican incumbent, also improved slightly as returns poured in. He polled 251,291 votes in 1,099 precincts, compared with 232,421 for John K. Valentine, his Democratic opponent.

Wallace, father of the A. A. A. farm program, twice toured his home State of Iowa in recent weeks in an effort to keep it in the Democratic column in Presidential politics.

30 States Vote On Variety Of Proposals

Liquor, Gambling, Pension Plans Among Issues on Ballots

By the Associated Press

Voters of 30 States balloted yesterday on a variety of issues apart from the Nation-wide election, among them proposals to legalize liquor and gambling, to provide old-age pensions and to revise tax laws.

In two States, voters expressed themselves on the question of restricting the tenure of their Governors at the same time they cast their ballots in the national election in which a third Presidential term was a major issue.

Maryland voted on a constitutional amendment which would prohibit the Governor from succeeding himself, while Tennessee decided whether to lengthen the gubernatorial term from two to four years and forbid successive terms in office.

In addition to various proposed modifications in existing liquor regulations, prohibition repeal was an issue in one State. Oklahoma passed on a Constitutional amendment to repeal its present "bone dry" Constitutional provision and legalize liquor sales. Massachusetts voted in a referendum on retaining the present State liquor law.

Arizona considered an initiative measure to legalize gambling, and use tax revenue from it for social security and relief. Colorado balloted on a measure to make parimutuel betting legal.

Before Oregon voters was an amendment to legalize pinball and lotteries.

Among a dozen propositions on games, marble boards, bank nights the Arkansas ballot was one to set up a new pension system for the aged and needy blind by reserving for that purpose revenues from sales tax, liquor tax, racing taxes, pool hall and slot machine taxes.

Old-age pension programs were likewise issues in Colorado and Washington. Colorado voters decided whether to replace the State's present program, calling for $45-a-month pension if funds are available, with a "guaranteed" $30-a-month plan. Washington voted on a proposal to provide a minimum of $40 monthly to "senior citizens" over 65.

A half dozen States balloted on proposals for increasing salaries of legislators.

New Mexico considered a provision for absentee voting; California voted on establishment of daylight saving time; Oklahoma balloted on giving women the right to hold State offices, and Iowa voters passed on a proposal for a convention to revise the State constitution.

Flynn's Bronx Favors Willkie in First Votes

New York, Nov. 5.—(AP)—The first election district reporting tonight of 804 in Bronx County—home of Democratic National Chairman Edward Flynn—tonight gave Willkie 420 to 400 for Roosevelt.

Massachusetts For Roosevelt By Big Margin

Gov. Saltonstall, Dever in Close Race; Sen. Walsh Winning

Boston (Wednesday), Nov. 6 (AP).—President Roosevelt, winning powerful support in the Democratic stronghold of greater Boston, early today climbed into an apparently insurmountable lead in his fight with Wendell Willkie for Massachusetts' 17 electoral votes.

Returns from 916 of the Bay State's 1,810 precincts gave President Roosevelt 504,137 votes to 431,691 for the Republican standard bearer. Those figures included all but 26 of the 386 precincts in Boston, which alone gave the President a plurality exceeding 85,000.

Meanwhile, Leverett Saltonstall, Republican incumbent, and Attorney General Paul A. Dever, waged a tense struggle for the governorship with Dever's gains in Boston being at least partially offset by the G. O. P. chief executive's strength outside the metropolis.

Senator David I. Walsh, Democratic chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, carved out a heavy lead over Henry Parkman (Republican), former corporation counsel for the City of Boston.

A nip and tuck contest was in progress in the battle for Governor between Leverett Saltonstall, Republican incumbent, and Attorney General Paul A. Dever, sole Democratic State officeholder to survive a G. O. P. landslide in 1938.

Early Vote Close In Colorado

Denver, Nov. 5 (AP).—Unofficial and incomplete tabulations of early voting in 12 scattered Denver precincts today gave Wendell Willkie 347 votes and President Roosevelt 326. President Roosevelt led Alf M. Landon in Denver in 1936 approximately 2 to 1.

Convoy Reported Shelled in Atlantic

ignominious end by scuttling outside Montevideo harbor last December after it was driven to cover by three British cruisers.

In London, naval sources were silent. Whether they had any information on the Rangitiki and the 4,952-ton freighter was not disclosed.

In Buenos Aires it is known from a list of "overdue" ships that a powerful German or Italian unit has been at large in the Atlantic.

Informed naval circles believe that the British have been close on the heels of this raider, frequently forcing it to change hunting grounds.

One source in Buenos Aires said this warship was apparently following the route of the Graf Spee. This informant suggested that the attack in the North Atlantic indicated she was heading homeward after a long cruise in the South Atlantic.

The position of the reported attack on the convoy is 600 miles west of the declared German blockade zone around the English Isles. Maritime circles in New York expressed belief it was outside the point where British warship escorts pick up convoys bound for England.

The British admiralty has said that search for any German warships and armed merchant cruisers, preying on commerce, were largely unfruitful.

Recently German merchantmen, tied up for months in neutral ports, have departed without taking time to obtain clearance papers. At least one raider has been reported in the South Atlantic and another in the Indian Ocean.

These are believed to be part of a number of 10,000-ton freighters which were nearing completion in German shipyards at the outbreak of the war. They are reportedly fast and easily converted into armed cruisers.

Other reports indicate the Nazis may have established fuel and supply bases on out-of-the-way islands throughout the seven seas to service a fleet of raiders.

Industrial Vote Aids President To Pull Ahead

La Follette Leads In Senatoriol Race, 144,048 to 136,887

Milwaukee, Nov. 5 (AP)—President Roosevelt's strength in the cities, notably industrial Milwaukee, offset sizeable leads piled up by Wendell Willkie in rural areas and gave the President a 45,000 vote margin tonight with about two-fifths of Wisconsin's election districts counted.

The vote in 1,369 out of 3,033 precincts in the State gave: Roosevelt 344,203, Willkie 299,055.

Senator La Follette (Progressive, Wisconsin), who trailed in early returns from the Wisconsin U. S. Senatorial election went into the lead early today after the first batch of Milwaukee precincts were counted. The vote in 1,063 precincts out of 3,036 in the State gave La Follette 144,048; Fred H. Clausen (Republican) 136,887; James Finnegan (Democrat) 43,225. The first Milwaukee precincts reporting showed La Follette polling nearly two votes to Clausen's one.

Governor Heil, Republican, outstripped two opponents in the early reports. The vote in 662 precincts:

Roosevelt, Stassen Lead in Minnesota

Minneapolis, Nov. 5 (AP).—Gov. Harold Stassen, Republican, climbed into the lead in Minnesota's gubernatorial contest on incomplete returns tonight after trailing earlier.

Returns from 586 of the 3,686 precincts in the State showed Stassen with 113,005 votes to 99,911 for Hjalmar Petersen, Farmer-Laborite, and 23,360 for Ed Murphy, Democrat.

The vote for Senator: 163 precincts out of 3,686 for Senator Shipstead (Republican), 38,291; Benson (Farmer-Labor), 23,504; Regan (Democrat), 13,639; Carlson (Trotzkyist), 369. The Presidential vote was in 558 precincts out of 3,686. Roosevelt, 160,629; Willkie, 140,690.

Roosevelt Leads in Ky.; 3 Shot in Breathitt

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 5 (AP).—The shooting in "Bloody Breathitt" County of a candidate for the county school board today marred election day in Kentucky, where President Roosevelt piled up a large majority over Wendell L. Willkie.

On the basis of unofficial returns from 1,268 of the State's 4,343 precincts, Mr. Roosevelt had 109,254 votes to 104,493 for Willkie.

Circuit Judge Chester A. Bach at Jackson said that Bruce Cundiff, 55, a candidate for the Breathitt County School Board and two others were shot and wounded at a polling booth. The judge added that he had heard that a precinct ballot box had been "taken" but that he knew no details.

Roosevelt Sweeps Georgia 3d Time

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 5 (AP).—Georgia marched her 12 electoral votes into Franklin D. Roosevelt's camp for the third successive time today as Democrats easily defended their unique record of never having lost the State to a Republican Presidential nominee.

Unofficial returns from 430 of 1,720 precincts gave Roosevelt 93,132; Wendell Willkie, 12,701. The President's margin over Alfred M. Landon in 1936 was approximately 7 to 1.

Roosevelt Leading 9 to 1 in Alabama

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Returns from 366 boxes of 2,281 in Alabama gave Roosevelt 76,330, Willkie 8,821.

Arkansas 4-1 For Roosevelt

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 5 (AP).—Arkansas gave President Roosevelt a 4-to-1 advantage over Wendell Willkie in unofficial tabulation of the popular vote tonight, the ratio falling slightly under the 5-to-1 Roosevelt majority over Landon four years ago.

The count in 148 of 2,166 precincts was Roosevelt 6,028, Willkie 1,505.

Democratic Gubernatorial Nominee Homer M. Adkins appeared to be coasting to an easy victory over Republican Harley Stump, rolling up 5,225 votes to Stump's 352 in 136 precincts.

Film Urges Unity After Election

Hollywood, Nov. 5 (AP).—More than 18,000 theaters throughout the United States will exhibit a short film immediately after today's election, urging the Nation to unite behind the Presidential candidate who is elected.

A committee of the film industry prepared the short, "A Plea for National Unity."

Willkie's Aunt Carried to Polls

South Giving 124 Electors To Roosevelt

Eleven-State Front Appears Unbroken In Rainy Election

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Nov. 5.—Republican hopes that the third-term issue would drive a wedge into the Solid South went glimmering swiftly tonight as mounting returns once more shoved this sector's 124 electoral votes toward President Roosevelt.

Unofficial, incomplete returns from all the 11 "solid" States showed the Democratic nominee far ahead of Republican Wendell Willkie and apparently the only question remaining to be answered by final, official tabulations was whether his majorities would equal those of 1936.

Although cold rain moved eastward across the South and reached well into Georgia before poll closings, voting ran heavier than expected all along the line and it seemed likely that preliminary estimates of some 4,300,000 votes for the 11 States be exceeded, perhaps by as much as half a million.

No Serious Disorder

There were no serious disorders reported as the Democratic electorate followed its war-bred tradition of party loyalty, brushing aside the tradition against a third term.

Faint bright spot for Willkie forces in early returns was the count from Florida, where the Republican nominee ran less than two to one behind through the tabulation of several thousand votes, only to drop further back as the total count rose.

Tennessee, where Roosevelt's 1936 margin of 2 to 1 was smallest of anywhere in the South, also was watched hopefully, but first reports gave no encouragement ot the Republican nominee who fought the TVA for years. Virginia and North Carolina, other States with comparatively robust Republican organization, also gave Roosevelt wide majorities from the first count.

Write-in Candidate 'Steals Show' in Texas

Dallas, Nov. 5 (AP).—Ballots piled up by a write-in candidate for a minor State office against a Democratic nominee who declared for Wendell Willkie overshadowed interest in the Presidential race in Texas today.

When Agriculture Commissioner J. E. McDonald, bitter opponent of Administration farm policies, came out for Willkie two weeks ago, young W. N. Corry, former legislator, defeated by McDonald in the Democratic primary, announced he was a write-in candidate.

Tonight, in returns at 9 p. m. from 52 of Texas' 254 counties, the vote stood: McDonald 17,940, Corry 11,965.

Otherwise the election proceeded according to form. The Texas Election Bureau's 9 p. m. (C. S. T.) tabulation, from 52 counties gave Roosevelt 60,887 and Willkie 13,315.

North Carolina Gives Roosevelt Big Edge

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 5 (AP).—Democrats took a big lead in North Carolina as returns were tabulated tonight from the voting in today's general election, with 13 electoral votes at stake in the Presidential contest.

With 1,205 of the State's 1,916 precincts tabulated, the vote for President Roosevelt was 407,841 against 111,197 for Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican candidate.

J. M. Broughton (Democrat), was leading his Republican opponent, Robert H. McNeill, Statesville lawyer, by a 10-to-1 majority in the race for Governor. Returns from 172 precincts gave Broughton 38,505 votes, McNeill, 3,499.

Willkie Beats Landon In South Carolina

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 5 (AP).—South Carolinians once more voted overwhelmingly Democratic in today's election, but the Republican candidate for President received a considerably larger vote than Alfred M. Landon did four years ago, in his contest for the State's eight electoral votes.

Returns from 642 of the State's 1,277 precincts gave President Roosevelt 56,374 votes against 3,044 for Wendell L. Willkie. Landon's total in 1936 was 1,846; Roosevelt's 113,791.

Roosevelt Is Leading In Oklahoma Count

Oklahoma City, Nov. 5 (AP).—President Roosevelt set the pace from the first returns in Oklahoma tonight and, with 278 out of 3,613 precincts tabulated, led Wendell Willkie 28,758 to 19,140.

Tennessee Votes 2 to 1 for Roosevelt

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 5 (AP).—President Roosevelt ran up a better than 2-to-1 majority over Wendell Willkie in Tennessee today, polling 181,960 votes to 87,891 in 1,601 precincts of 2,300.

United States Senator K. D. McKellar led 122,622 to 37,873 over Republican Howard H. Baker, of Huntsville, in 1,037 precincts.

Gov. Prentice Cooper, seeking a second term, held a 138,622 to 39,904 advantage over C. Arthur Bruce, Memphis Republican, in 1,037 precincts.

Democrats Hold Lead in Florida

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 5 (AP).—President Roosevelt took and held the lead for Florida's seven electoral votes today, early reports giving him more than double the popular vote cast for Wendell Willkie.

Partial returns gave Roosevelt 112,359 and Willkie 42,552.

United States Senator Charles O. Andrews, Democratic Gubernatorial Nominee Spessard L. Holland and two of Florida's five Democratic Representatives were elected without opposition. In the other three Congressional races Democrats took early leads.

First Ky. Precinct Goes to Roosevelt

Covington, Ky., Nov. 5 (AP).—The first precinct to report in Kentucky for President today, one out of 124 in Kenton County, gave President Roosevelt 17, Wendell Willkie 10.

Republican For Governor Bucks Trend

Slattery Ahead of C. Wayland Brooks For Senate Seat

Chicago, Nov. 5 (AP).—Franklin D. Roosevelt was increasing his lead in the Presidential race in Illinois tonight.

Returns from 2,854 of the State's 8,378 precincts gave Roosevelt 734,306 and Willkie 598,067.

The early count confirmed predictions that the Republicans would attain an advantage down-State while the Democrats would take the upper hand in Chicago.

In the race for the Governorship and the United States Senate seat, Harry B. Hershey, Democrat, trailed his Republican opponent, Dwight H. Green, and Senator James M. Slattery, Democrat, lead the Republican, C. Wayland Brooks.

In 2,831 precincts the vote for governor was Hershey 644,344; Green, 661,947.

Democrats Seize G. O. P. Banner

At Silver Spring, Md., a crowd of nearly 100 jubilant Democrats marched from their headquarters on Colesville Road to the G. O. P. headquarters a few hundred feet away, on the other side of the street, and tore down a Willkie-McNary banner.

The banner was taken back to Democratic headquarters and draped over the steps, where the celebrants walked over it.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

'I THANK YOU FROM THE BOTTOM OF MY HEART'—said Wendell L. Willkie early today to a shouting crowd of supporters without conceding defeat in the face of mounting Roosevelt pluralities. "Don't be afraid and never quit," he told his followers.

Willkie Gets Big Margin in Kansas

Topeka, Kans., Nov. 5 (AP).—Kansas, which has ridden every Presidential winner since 1896, gave Wendell Willkie a big lead over President Roosevelt as returns from today's election mounted to sizable totals.

Returns from 153 of the State's 2,734 precincts showed Willkie leading 32,761 to 17,425. A much closer race, however, developed between Gov. Payne Ratner, 44, Republican, and his Democratic opponent, 61-year-old W. H. Burke, Little River banker and stockman. On returns from 153 precincts Ratner had 24,596 to 21,336 for Burke.

Roosevelt Gains Strength In New England

Apparently Has Won Connecticut, Leads In Massachusetts

Boston, Nov. 5.—Picking up strength as reports rolled in from many of New England's heavily industrial areas, President Roosevelt built up an apparently unshakable lead over Wendell Willkie in Connecticut tonight and either ran ahead of pushed close to the Republican nominee in other States.

In Connecticut the President captured all of the State's large cities, and with 124 of the 169 voting districts counted, he enjoyed a total of 395,849 to 331,308 for Willkie. The Democratic State ticket likewise ran well ahead for the most part.

Leads in Massachusetts

In Massachusetts, whose 17 electoral votes provide the ripest plum in the industrial Northeast, the Chief Executive pulled ahead on a wave of big city votes, reversing an earlier Willkie lead in the rural communities. With 348 of the Bay State's 1,810 precincts counted, Mr. Roosevelt led by 167,209 to 138,815 for his Republican opponent.

The early count in Rhode Island put Willkie in the lead, but this lead was whittled down, and observers noted that in many areas his pluralities were lower than those carved out by the same communities by Alf Landon in 1936, when Mr. Roosevelt carried the State by approximately 40,000. With 101 precincts counted out of 259 in the State, Mr. Roosevelt pulled into the lead for the first time by a count of 59,073 to 58,660.

New Hampshire Close

New Hampshire meanwhile staged another of the tight-lipped Presidential counts that made it the closest State in the Nation in 1936, when the President won by 3,800. Industrial precincts in many instances were counted earlier than four years ago, and with 103 of the State's 294 precincts tabulated, the Chief Executive had 29,006 votes to 24,704 for Willkie.

Even in Maine and Vermont, the President pushed ahead of the advance forecasts of many observers. He trailed only by 119,412 to 121,944 for Willkie with 465 of the 629 precincts counted, and in Vermont the count stood at 42,576 for Willkie and 28,574 for Mr. Roosevelt with 183 of the State's 246 cities and towns in.

Democrats Control Connecticut Again

New Haven, Conn., (Wednesday) Nov. 6 (AP).—President Roosevelt captured Connecticut's eight electoral votes on the basis of unofficial returns from Tuesday's election, leading Democrats to a victory that restored to them complete control of the State administration, including the Governorship, and gave them the seven Congressional seats at stake in the election.

The unofficial count of a record-breaking vote in the State's 169 towns gave Mr. Roosevelt a plurality of more than 60,000 over Wendell L. Willkie. Four years ago, the Chief Executive carried the State by 103,000 votes, the greatest plurality ever given by Connecticut to a Democratic nominee.

U. S. Senator Francis T. Maloney, Democrat, exceeded even the President's victory margin in his fight for reelection against his Republican rival, Paul L. Cornell, carrying the State by more than 65,000 votes.

Willkie Has Big Lead in Vermont

Montpelier, Vt., Nov. 5 (AP).—Wendell Willkie piled up a mounting lead over President Roosevelt tonight. With 79 cities and towns reported out of 246 in the State, the Republican Presidential nominee had 13,916 votes to 8,087 for the President.

A similar trend was recorded in favor of the Republican candidates for Governor, two United States Senate seats and the State's single seat in the United States House.

No Rift in Harmony, Vote Evenly Divided

Harmony, Me., Nov. 5 (AP).—There was harmony in Harmony tonight. The Presidential vote: Roosevelt, 170; Willkie, 170.

This Somerset County went 3-1 for Republican Alf M. Landon in the 1936 election.

Rhode Island Race Looks Close

Providence, R. I., Nov. 5 (AP).—A close fight between President Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie for the industrial State of Rhode Island's four electoral votes was indicated tonight.

The first 60 of the smallest State's 259 precincts gave Mr. Roosevelt 31,094 votes to 36,166 for Willkie. In 1936, Mr. Roosevelt carried Rhode Island by about 40,000 votes.

Neck-and-Neck Race In New Hampshire

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 5 (AP).—A neck-and-neck battle for New Hampshire's four electoral votes developed tonight as early returns trickled in from scattered communities in the Granite State, which four years ago staged the tightest finish in the Nation in that Presidential race.

Returns from 103 of the State's 294 precincts gave President Roosevelt 29,006 votes to 24,704 for Wendell Willkie. In 1936 Mr. Roosevelt captured the State by 3,800 votes.

Sharing interest with the Presidential contest was another apparently close fight between State Senate President Robert O. Blood (Republican) and former New Hampshire House Minority Leader F. Clyde Keefe (Democrat), for the Governorship.

Willkie Holds 8,950 Margin in Maine

Portland, Me., Nov. 5 (AP).—Wendell Willkie held lead over President Roosevelt in today's Presidential election as the tabulation mounted swiftly in Main's 629 precincts.

In 603 precincts Willkie had 163,732 against 154,782 for Mr. Roosevelt. The Willkie lead was slightly under that maintained in the same number of precincts by Alf M. Landon, 1936 Republican standard bearer. The City of Bath, prospering under the Navy's ship expansion program, went Democratic for the second time in history, 2,782 to 1,699.

Rep. Randolph Is Sent Back As D. C. 'Mayor'

D'Alesandro Also Wins Reelection By a Wide Margin

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Washington's "mayor," Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, was re-elected yesterday by a substantial majority and assured of retaining his job as chairman of the House District Committee as the Democrats retained control of the House.

Also returned by a wide margin was Representative Thomas D'Alesandro, jr. (Democrat), of Baltimore, who boasted that his service in behalf of the voteless District helped rather than hurt his candidacy.

The House District Committee probably will get a new member and the second Representative from Baltimore, John A. Meyer, former police magistrate, who succeeds Ambrose J. Kennedy, present ranking majority member.

Meyer, who beat Kennedy in the primary and defeated his Republican opponnt yesterday, expressed a desire to be a member of the House District Committee.

The Senate District Committee membership appeared to be intact late last night except for Chairman King (Democrat), of Utah, who lost out in the primary.

Senator Theodore (The Man) Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, had no opposition, and the reelection of Senator Warren Austin (Republican), of Vermont, was conceded. Senator Slattery (Democrat), of Illinois, a comparatively new member, was leading in late returns.

Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, who has threatened to revive the District milk bill next year, was returned although pre-election reports indicated he might be defeated.

Among other District Committee members reelected were Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the Fiscal Affairs subcommittee, and Representative Herman P. Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Liquor Investigating subcommittee.

Roosevelt Wins in D. C. Area Counties

Takes Montgomery 15,187-13,733; and Fairfax, 3,26-2,370

President Roosevelt was running ahead of Wendell Willkie last night in the nearby counties of Maryland and Virginia as election officials tabulated the biggest vote in the history of the suburban areas.

Complete returns from Montgomery County, where the use of voting machines speeded up the job of counting votes, gave Roosevelt 15,187 to 13,733 for his Republican opponent. Republicans took comfort in the fact that the margin was slimmer than had been predicted.

In Fairfax County, complete returns gave Roosevelt 3,263 to Willkie's 2,370.

The city of Alexandria gave Roosevelt a majority of 4,004 to 1,802, which was comparable to the President's margin of victory four years ago.

With only one precinct missing in Arlington County, the vote was 4,567 for Roosevelt and 3,782 for Willkie. Leo Lloyd, Democrat, was reelected to the county board over his Republican opponent, Fred N. Windridge. Senator Eyrd swamped his minor party opponents, Hilliard Bernstein, Socialist, and Alice Burke, Communist.

In Prince Georges County, 22 out of 35 voting places had been heard from. They gave Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer 21,422 votes to 2,905 for his Republican rival, Mayor John N. Torvestad, of Colmar Manor. President Roosevelt was assured of carrying the county by a comfortable margin.

Senator George L. Radcliffe led his ticket in Montgomery County, polling 17,842 votes to 10,281 for his Republican rival, former Gov. Harry W. Nice.

Walter Johnson, former baseball idol, ran behind Representative William D. Byron, Democrat, by 529 votes. Johnson's chance of carrying the district, however, still remained good. He was expected to run ahead of Byron in Allegany and Garrett Counties.

In Fairfax County, Senator Byrd polled 4,882 votes. Bernstein got 233 and Burke 179. Representative Howard W. Smith led his Republican opponent, Col. Goodloe, 4,714 to 1,125.

Perkins, NRA Enemy, Casts Vote for Willkie

York, Pa., Nov. 5.—(AP)—Fred C. Perkins, 61-year-old York battery manufacturer who gained nation-wide attention when jailed in 1934 in defiance of the old NRA act, today voted for Wendell L. Willkie as a "repudiation" of the Roosevelt administration's social security laws.

The veteran opponent of New Deal legislation and state laws, who lost another round yesterday when the Dauphin County Court overruled his questions on validity of the state's unemployment compensation act, said "my only regret is that I have only one vote for Willkie."

California Gives Roosevelt Heavy Lead in Early Count

Los Angeles County Runs 1½-to-1 For President; Two Democratic House Seats Threatened by G. O. P.

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Nov. 5.—President Roosevelt held a formidable lead over Wendell L. Willkie in California tonight, with about 20 per cent of the State's vote counted.

In 4,738 out of 13,692 precincts the totals were: Roosevelt, 479,044; Willkie, 334,135. Some of those reported were incomplete.

The President was running about 1½-to-1 ahead of the Republican candidate in Los Angeles County, which contains 42.5 per cent of the total potential California vote, and about 3-to-2 ahead in San Francisco. Only a few of the smaller counties showed an edge for Willkie.

Rep. Franck R. Havenner, New Deal Democrat, was trailing Tom Rolph, Republican, in San Francisco returns and Rep. John H. Tolan, Democrat, had only a slight lead over Republican Ralph R. Etse in the Seventh (Oakland) District.

Re-election of Sen. Hiram W. Johnson, independent republican, to a fifth term was a foregone conclusion. He disposed of all major opposition in the primaries by winning the Democratic and Progressive nominations, as well as that of his own party. Johnson campaigned for Willkie.

Eleven of the State's 19 incumbent congressmen also had no major opposition.

California Gives Roosevelt Edge

San Francisco, Nov. 5 (AP).—Returns from 672 of California's 13,892 precincts tonight gave for President: Roosevelt, 49,372; Willkie, 28,948.

Roosevelt Leads, 1,022-896, in Idaho

Boise, Idaho, Nov. 5 (INS)—President Roosevelt forged to the front tonight in Idaho on the basis of returns from 14 precincts out of a total of 792 in the State.

The Vote: Roosevelt 1,022, Willkie 896.

New Mexico Gives Roosevelt Early Lead

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Nov. 5 (AP).—President Roosevelt, who carried New Mexico by 44,000 in 1936, moved away to a slight early lead tonight as complete returns from 39 of the State's 919 Precincts gave him 3,731, Wendell L. Willkie 3,128.

Early Colorado Count Gives Lead to Willkie

Denver, Nov. 5 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie took an early lead over President Roosevelt in the race for Colorado's six electoral votes tonight, with Republican Governor Ralph L. Carr also going ahead in his quest for reelection.

For the Governorship, 131 precincts gave Carr 19,901 to 13,829 for the Democratic nominee, Secretary of State George E. Saunders.

Early Washington Count Favors Willkie

Seattle, Nov. 5 (AP).—Five out of 3,018 Washington State precincts, including one from Seattle, tonight gave President Roosevelt 224 votes, Wendell Willkie 248. The vote for Governor, 439 precincts, was 58,887 for Dill, 55,202 for Langlie.

Roosevelt in Front By 2 Votes in Utah

Salt Lake City, Nov. 5 (AP).—Utah voters were believed to have balloted in record numbers today as the polls closed at 7 p. m.

First incomplete figures from 3 voting precincts gave President Roosevelt 209, Wendell Willkie 207.

The vote for Governor in 64 districts, Maw, 9,416; Colton, 9,198.

Roosevelt Slightly Ahead in Wyoming

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 5 (AP).—116 of Wyoming's 696 precincts to report gave Roosevelt 3,818 votes and Willkie 3,771.

California Gives 2-1 Margin to Roosevelt

San Francisco, Nov. 5 (INS).—Paced by an overwhelming lead in Los Angeles County, where 40 per cent of California's voters reside, President Roosevelt continued his 2-to-1 margin over Willkie in the ballot-counting tonight. Incomplete returns from 2,221 scattered precincts of the State's 13,692 showed: Roosevelt, 211,242; Willkie, 110,730.

Garner 'Takes A Walk,' Fails To Cast Vote

Vice President Stays Home While His Wife Goes to Polls as Usual

By Howard C. Marshall
Associated Press Staff Writer

Uvalde, Tex., Nov. 5.—Vice President John N. Garner "took a walk" today.

Unlike his wife, secretary and hundreds of Uvalde citizens, he did not vote in the general election.

When his precinct box closed at 7 p. m. he had cast no ballot there and county officials said he had not voted absentee.

Secluded in his big brick residence, he gave no reason for breaking his voting habits of many years.

Election attaches said they could not recall when the Vice President had failed to vote heretofore.

At many elections Garner has voted ballot No. 1 and Mrs. Garner No. 2.

This year Mrs. Garner voted at 8:15 a. m., 15 minutes after the polls opened, but Mr. Garner was not with her.

Mrs. Garner was accompanied to the voting place by Mrs. Louise Friday, the wife of Garner's secretary, who also voted at that time.

Friday voted about three hours later.

Chest Workers To Hear Author

Strickland Gillilan, author and humorist, will be guest speaker at a rally of the Community Chest group solicitation unit at 8 p. m. today in the Willard Hotel.

At 2:15 p. m. tomorrow, Mrs. Roosevelt will address 2,000 volunteer workers of the Community Chest Government unit in the Federal Auditorium, Constitution Avenue, between Twelfth and Fourteenth Streets Northwest.

"Doorways of Washington," a movie showing work of Community Chest agencies, will be shown at both sessions.

Shenandoah to Get Richmond Scout Aide

Richmond, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—W. D. Sievers, assistant Boy Scout executive for the Richmond area council, has resigned to become Scout executive for the Shenandoah area council at Winchester. Sievers will report to the Shenandoah Council November 25.

Resignation of Sievers was announced by Richard Florance, Richmond council president, at a meeting of the executive board last night.

How Winter OIL-PLATING maintains needed lubricant in advance...for Safe Quick Starts

Here's a short easy Quiz that can save you harsh starting wear all Winter:...When you park, does all the lubricant drain down sooner if the cylinders are on a slant like the sides of the letter V, or if they're straight up like the letter I?

Answer: All the lubricant DOES NOT drain down for hours—days—weeks—in any type of car engine that's OIL-PLATED by being changed to Conoco Germ Processed motor oil for the Winter.

Processed into this patented oil is the magnet-like ability to keep inner engine parts surfaced with rich slippy OIL-PLATING... as close-fitting as other protective plating on your car... and just as drainproof!

Then before you can even get near your car, the waiting engine is already OIL-PLATED against the worst Winter wear. And out goes the dread of the starting period. Do you ever read or hear of any Winter help that's more positive? Change today then—simply, quickly, economically—to this patented Germ Processed oil that OIL-PLATES, warding off excess wear to keep up mileage. Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station has it for you. British Fly In Gale to Raid Invasion Coast

Swiss Air Alarms Indicate R. A. F. Passed To Attack Italy

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 5.—British bombing squadrons flying in the teeth of a southerly gale attacked German targets on the French "invasion coast" tonight.

Simultaneously, guns defending the empire capital roared into action against the regular German night air attack.

[Bern and other Swiss cities had air alarms during the night, indicating British planes were passing overhead en route to attack Italy.]

Observers along the English Channel said they could see flashes of exploding bombs on the French coast, the sweep of searchlights and bursting antiaircraft shells.

The attacks seemed aimed at Boulogne Harbor—which the British air ministry said was raided Monday night also—and the German long-range guns at Cap Gris Nez.

The luftwaffe made four attempts to raid London during the day, but each time the British said the bombers were baten off by British fighters. The air ministry reported seven German planes shot down and six British fighters lost.

As the usual evening alarm sent London's millions scurrying to shelters, bombs were heard exploding in the metropolitan area above the noise of the antiaircraft barrage.

Nazis Claim Rail Line Damage

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 5.—German warplanes raided Britain from southern England to Scotland "in continuous waves" overnight despite unfavorable weather, dropping more than 1,500 bombs on London alone, the high command said today.

Industrial and traffic facilities were hit, the high command communique said. D. N. B., official German news agency, asserted that the raiders caused extensive damage to railroad tracks on a line between London and Southend.

The high command reported "a large number" of planes destroyed on the ground at the Wattisham and Ford airports, and said there were explosions and fires at Liverpool and Coventry and explosions in Hillington, Leith and other Scottish industrial centers.

The communique said Germans and British each lost a plane. D. N. B. listed October losses at 419 British planes and 138 German craft.

Factories Unhurt, Nazis Say

By the Associated Press

The German Embassy in Washington made public yesterday a report from the general staff of German air corps asserting that an average of 50 British planes raided Germany daily in September and October, but that they left the German armament industry "virtually unaffected."

Reports in "certain neutral countries," the Germans said, "grossly exaggerated" the extent of damage done by R. A. F. raiders.

The report estimated that more than 50 per cent of the British bombs "fell on open fields," about 25 per cent on "residential districts" and that the remaining 15 to 30 per cent "fell on docks, traffic arteries, industrial, military and other vital points, leaving the German armament industry, however, virtually unaffected."

"The German synthetic oil industry is working without interruption and at full capacity," the report continued.

Excerpts of Churchill's Report Dealing With U-Boat Menace

Threat of Invasion '. . . Met,' Commons Told by Premier

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 5.—Following are the passages devoted to the submarine menace to Britain and the Greek crisis in Prime Minister Churchill's speech to Commons today:

A recent recrudescence of U-boat sinkings has occurred in the Atlantic approaches to our islands.

The fact that we cannot use the south and west coasts of Ireland to refuel our flotillas and aircraft and thus protect the trade by which Ireland, as well as Great Britain, lives, that fact is a most heavy and grievous burden and one which should never have been placed upon our shoulders, broad through they may be.

Moreover we have been during the last month at the lowest point of our flotilla strength. The threat of invasion had always to be met and the great forces we are maintaining in Mediterranean in addition to the escorts necessary to the protection of our innumerable convoys, these have imposed upon the Royal Navy a gigantic task.

U-Boat Hunting a Success

The 50 American destroyers are rapidly coming into service just when they are most needed and the main flow of the new construction started at the outbreak of the war is now coming along.

In spite of serious losses, we have still very nearly as much shipping tonnage as we had at the outbreak of war and a great deal of neutral shipping which used to trade freely with us is now under our control. Moreover, our U-boat hunting is still having its success. Two more German U-boats have been sunk in the last two or three days on the western approaches, one of them the U-boat which sank the Empress of Britian.

We have a number of their crews who have been saved, as prisoners of war.

On the other hand, when I speak of our shipping tonnage not being appreciably diminished from the beginnings of the war, it must be remembered that our shipping is not so fruitful in war as in peacetime because the ships have to go a long way round and often to zig-zag and there are delays in the marshaling of convoys and congestions at ports.

It would not be wise to suppose that greater stringency has not been brought about, although the actual volume of shipping remains practically undiminished.

Heavier Attacks Predicted

I need scarcely say that intense efforts are being made by the Admiralty. My friend, the first lord, gives the whole of his life and strength and high abilities to the task and I am confident that he is aided by the ablest officers in the service.

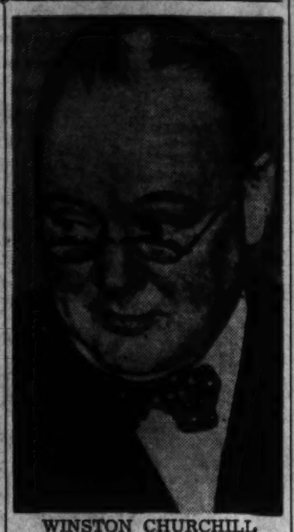
Intense efforts are being made by the Admiralty and also by the Ministry of Shipping to cope with these difficulties and, having lived through a lot and had, in this war and the last, great experience, I personally can not doubt that they will be able to cope with them and be able to bring in all vital supplies of food and ammunition which we shall require.

The dangers in air are sudden and might have become catastrophic, but the dangers to our seaborne traffic mature much more slowly, but they are nonetheless formidable and, if in any way neglected, they would touch the life of the State.

We must expect that next year still heavier U-boat attacks will be made upon us and we are making immense preparations of all kinds to meet them.

A new call has suddenly been made upon us.

The Italian dictator, perhaps embarrassed by the somewhat florid flirtations of Monsieur Laval with the German conqueror—or it may be part of some new predatory design—has, in his customary cold-blooded fashion fallen upon the small but famous and immortal Greek nation.



WINSTON CHURCHILL

Fight For Life

Without the slightest provocation, Signor Mussolini has invaded Greece, or tried to do so, and his aircraft have murdered an increasing number of Greek civilians—women and children—in Salonika and many other open Greek towns.

The Greek King, his government and the Greek people have resolved to fight for life and honor lest the world should, too easily, be led into chains.

France and Britain had agreed to go to the aid of Greece if she is a victim of "unprovoked aggression."

It was a joint agreement, but unhappily the Vichy government is engaged at this moment in sincere and loyal collaboration with Herr Hitler in his scheme for establishing a so-called new order in Europe.

We are, therefore, left alone. We have most carefully abstained from any action likely to draw upon Greeks the enmity of the criminal dictators. For their part, Greeks have maintained so strict a neutrality that we were unacquainted with their intensions and despositions.

Forces in Movement

I must, as I say, approach the new task with a strong sense of immense responsibility which rests upon us both at home and in Egypt, and of the very great continual dangers by which we are confronted.

In the circumstances there is only one thing we can do. We will do our best. We have already established a naval and air base in Crete, which will enable us sensibly to extend the activities and radius of our navy and of the air force.

We have begun bombing attacks upon military objectives in cities and bases in the south of Italy. That will continue on an ever-growing scale. I would also say that other forces are in movement with the desire and design to help the Greeks to the utmost of our capacity, having regard to our other obligations.

I hope I shall not be asked to give any definite account of such measures as we are able to take. If I were to set them too high I should raise false hopes. If I set them too low I might caluse undue despondency and alarm, and if I said exactly what they were that would be exactly what the enemy would like to know. We will do our best. That is all I can say.

Solid Phalanx

Even before the voters went to the polls yesterday a group of organizations in the Greenwich Village section of New York began to distribute posters advertising the "Good Loser Club" whose motto is given as "Let's Work for America."

This advice should be universally followed. There is no place in this country for post-election rancors, especially in the critical period now before us. Indeed, in their election eve addresses, both President Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie pledged themselves to work for unity. "After the ballots are counted," said the Chief Executive, "the United States of America will still be united." And Mr. Willkie declared: "There is no place for bitterness or hate in America."

That same elevated tone was echoed in other quarters as the campaign drew to a close—by Senator Norris, Bruce Barton, Secretary Hull and others. And plans are already under way in New York for a "unity of America" rally to be addressed by Alfred M. Landon, Attorney General Jackson and others on both sides of the political fence.

This movement is all to the good. Both sides will doubtless be able to find considerable satisfaction in the results of the balloting. Both will have reason for sober second-thought. The victor will have before him the unavoidable fact that a large percentage of the electorate, amounting to a great many millions of Americans, favored his opponent. The loser will have the satisfaction of having fought a good fight. The country needs the services of both. The nation cannot afford any further time out for partisan rancors. It is now time to reform the ranks into a solid phalanx of national unity.

Katharsis

Those of us who last night stayed up long enough to hear the national verdict may be mildly astonished this morning to find everything just about where it was before all the excitement began. We shall find no evidence that the world has really fallen apart. From our windows we shall see the sky in its accustomed place and our neighbors' houses still firmly fixed to their foundations. There will be every indication that the earth is still revolving on its axis with no more than the customary number of creaks.

Moreover, the milk and the morning newspaper will be on our doorsteps. We shall discover that our lamps respond to the switch, and that a twist of the radio dial can evoke the persuasive plugs for all sorts of articles that could not possibly have any market in a nation that has gone utterly and irretrievably to the dogs. We shall hear, as usual, the voices of our wives solemnly warning our children of the possibility of being late for school. And with all this accumulating evidence, we shall be forced to admit to ourselves that civilization has not perished overnight.

And at this point we may even wonder how we came to suppose that the fate of a civilization and of our method of life hinged wholly upon the outcome of a national election—even such an important national election as yesterday's. Yet in the closing stages of the campaign the orators had well-nigh succeeded in impressing this apocalyptic view of matters upon themselves and upon us.

While it lasted the campaign appeared to millions of us not as conflict of personalities and policies but as a veritable battle of Ormazd and Ahriman, and the only question was which was which. That no doubt was why the campaign gave rise to such fierce rancor, such unbridled suspicion, such violent recrimination.

Today, as Americans slide back gratefully into their normal routines and interests, all that political frenzy of yesterweek begins to seem distant and unreal. But perhaps this is because we have got the frenzy out of our systems. Thus it may be that politics, like tragic poetry, is a safety valve for those passions which, when too long and too tightly confined, suddenly explode with disastrous consequence to the social order.

Anyhow, by tomorrow, most of us, whether we voted with the winning or the losing side, will begin to experience that pleasantly relaxed and gently chastened mood, described by Milton as > . . . calm of mind;

The Voters' Verdict

The victory which President Roosevelt won at the polls yesterday was by no means as sweeping as that which returned him to office four years ago. It was, nonetheless, clear-cut and substantial. The American people have given him that vote of confidence for which he pleaded in the closing days of the campaign.

They did so in spite of accumulated grievances against the New Deal and well-substantiated charges of inadequacy in the handling of such problems as unemployment, relief, employer-employe relations and other issues of vital domestic concern. They did so in spite of the fact that Mr. Roosevelt's bid for office was a challenge to one of the most deeply-rooted of American political traditions.

It is a tribute to Mr. Roosevelt's personality that, despite these handicaps, he was able to ride to victory. A majority of the American people obviously do not believe that he has any ambitions to become a dictator. They regard him instead as a strong and vigorous leader capable of guiding this country through a critical period in its history. To many millions not only in this country but throughout the rest of the world as well he represents the antithesis of the totalitarian dictator. Indeed, the dictators hate Mr. Roosevelt because so many regard him as a symbol of democracy.

Nor can there be any doubt that during these eight years when one democratic nation after another has plunged into the valley of the shadow of death, the United States has preserved its freedom. The vigor of the 1940 campaign and the extent of the opposition which was manifested toward Mr. Roosevelt are proof that democracy is still flourishing here.

But it would be fatal for Mr. Roosevelt to regard yesterday's victory as merely a personal tribute or as a mandate to do as he pleases. The dominant factor in the campaign and in Mr. Roosevelt's reelection was the extremely dangerous international situation. It was the grave menace that confronts us across the Atlantic and Pacific which determined the outcome. In these critical times the people felt that it would be safer to keep Mr. Roosevelt at the helm rather than trust it to a man whom they deemed untried by actual experience in important public office.

Mr. Roosevelt's conduct of American foreign policy during these last critical years very largely contributed to his victory. More than any other democratic leader of his times, he has been alert to the meaning and significance of the alarming developments taking place overseas. He has not always reacted to these developments with the vigor and forthrightness that the situation demanded. Nor has he always taken the American people fully into his confidence. But he was wiser than many of those who had opposed him. So when the test came the people felt that it was the counsel of wisdom to keep him in office for another four years.

Mr. Roosevelt will be the first President in American history to have a third term. The honor should be a sobering experience. It is certainly fraught with immense responsibilities. His Administration will need the continuous and ungrudging support of the people, of those who have opposed him as well as of those who have supported him.

The imperious circumstances of the times in which we live demand an unusual measure of harmony among all sections and all classes of the population. Without that harmony and unity the United States would all too easily become vulnerable to the sinister world forces plotting this Nation's undoing.

Mr. Roosevelt faces a mighty task. No President since Lincoln has been asked to carry a greater burden than he. The hopes and prayers of all Americans are that he will act with vigor and courage and generosity in leading the Nation in the difficult and crucial days that lie ahead.

Ever More Aware

As the voters of the United States began to flock to the polls in unprecedented numbers yesterday, despite rain, snow or the threat of bitter weather, their increased devotion to our democratic system became clearly evident. They were exercising a privilege the more precious because in most parts of the world it is suspended, canceled or unknown.

The record registration of 60,000,000 surpassed by some 5,000,000 the number qualified to vote in 1936. The increase, however, merely continued a trend which has been recognizable for decades. Beginning in 1912, the number of actual voters in successive Presidential elections has been roughly 15, 19, 27, 29, 37, 40 and 46 millions. In 1912 17 per cent of the total population voted. Steady gains through the years brought the proportion to 36 per cent in 1936.

Except for the unfaltering rise over so long a time, one might attribute the greater turnout in recent elections to such modern campaigning aids as the radio. But history indicates rather that constant improvement in all means of communication, the growth of knowledge and the advance of education, have increased in our people an awareness of their rights and responsibilities. And this year those rights and responsibilities scarcely needed to be emphasized.

Mr. Willkie's Crusade

In spite of his defeat yesterday, Wendell L. Willkie has won for himself a unique place in the drama of American democracy. As a campaigner, he set a pace that probably few other men could follow. As a leader, he has demonstrated ability to command the enthusiastic support of millions. There can be no doubt that his "crusade" has been a vital influence in shaping our national thought in this critical period.

Mr. Willkie's nomination by the Republican Party at Philadelphia was in itself something of a political miracle. He was known to the public as a "big business" man. He had never held a public office. And he had been a member of the Democratic Party until a deep-seated clash between his own political philosophy and that sponsored by the Administration drove him into the ranks of the opposition. Only his boundless energy and determination plus his large endowment of common sense enabled him to win the leadership of his adopted party over these handicaps.

Perhaps it was inevitable, after such a feat, that Mr. Willkie's race for the Presidency should have lagged for a time. For several weeks he was comparatively inactive. Then his attempt to read an excellent acceptance speech, while facing the glare of an afternoon sun, took some of the edge off the enthusiasm he had previously aroused. Far more discouraging for him was the fact that the horrors of war in Europe absorbed the interest of the people almost to the exclusion of the domestic issues on which his campaign was centered.

But Mr. Willkie only redoubled his efforts. He toured the West, the Middle West and the East. He spoke to crowds in the streets, in factories, halls and by radio. All of his boundless energy was poured into the task of getting his message before the people. His voice became tired and husky, but he continued the grind of daily campaigning, improving his technique and making his words ever more impressive.

Sometimes he was pelted with eggs and tomatoes. Frequently he was booed and heckled. But Mr. Willkie did not lose his good humor. He continued to speak fervently to his fellow citizens. Avoiding rancor and bitterness, he pounded away at what he believed to be the vital issues of 1940. Millions listened. And in the last days of the campaign huge audiences interrupted almost every utterance with applause.

Courage, determination and the will to fight for a cause without malice are qualities that the American people never cease to admire. So it goes without saying that they will hereafter accord Mr. Willkie a large measure of confidence. By fearlessly and indefatigably championing a cause which he firmly believes to be right he has served his country well.

In the heat of the campaign Mr. Willkie frequently indulged in glowing promises and extravagant charges. But those are now submerged beneath the pointed and sound advice he offered the country. Again and again he declared: "Only the strong can be free. And only the productive can be strong." Those words have already become a guidelight of American policy.

Likewise Mr. Willkie's demand for "wider horizons," for acceleration of our industrial machinery, for the development of new enterprises and increased employment, for a maximum defense effort and for greater aid to Great Britain in her fight against Nazi domination will be remembered long after the partisanship of the campaign has been blotted out. On these and other subjects the G. O. P. standard-bearer has helped to clarify our thinking. He has notably sharpened the determination of the United States to awake from its lethargy and face the problems of 1940. That is a service of inestimable value.

Today Mr. Willkie will enter upon a new phase of his career. It cannot be doubted that his influence upon American democracy will continue to be stimulating and constructive.

Why Geese Are Geese

From the Montgomery Advertiser

The other day two Alabama motorists were flying down a paved road at about 60 miles an hour. Near a farmhouse they saw a flock of geese in the middle of the road, and so slowed up, honking wildly. Some five hours later they were returning home over the same road and found the same flock of geese waddling nonchalantly in the middle of the big road. Again they slowed up and honked. At last they agreed that geese are properly named.

A statistician says the people of this country consume 500,000 tons of soap annually. This figure does not include soft soap, which is consumed in incalculable quantities.

Unity Now

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The saddest and most dangerous development of the political campaign is the opinion expressed by some writers to the effect that the apparent closeness of the Presidential race will result in a lack of unity among the American people after the election.

Aside from the election of 1860 when the issues were of long standing, and were of a sectional nature, the history of the United States has no basis for this opinion. The expression of this opinion, although vouchsafed by the Constitution, is a stimulus to those among us who would welcome a schism and an "ism," and is, therefore, a disservice to the country.

PHILIP BORKAT.

'Sectional Regularity'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial in The Post of November 2 captioned "Sectional Regularity" was very fine and true. The condition is a natural result from the treatment the South received from Thaddeus Stevens and his radical Republican cohorts during the reconstruction period. It was under the Democratic banner that the whites of the South recovered control of their State government and our people consider that issue transcends all others in importance.

Your writer should go deeper into that subject—it is a hot one. With New Dealers and Republicans both appealing for Negro votes in the North, the Democratic Party of the South will continue, as since 1876, a sectional party.

Two Items

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of November 1, on the very first page, there are two notable events which are extremely inconsistent with American "democracy" and the present defense program.

The first item is that Chamberlain is reported sailing to the United States, supposedly for his health. I for one am satisfied that the former prime minister is not sailing here for his health, unless the dragging of American soldiers into England's wars can be construed as meaning for his health.

Chamberlain once went to Munich and we all now know the result to Czecho-Slovakia from that trip. We don't want Chamberlain in this country and I say that he should be barred from entering with his portfolio filled with pro-English propaganda.

The second item is the one regarding Mrs. Earl Browder. This woman, the wife of an American-born citizen, is to be deported from this country for no good reason other than the fact that her husband is fighting for jobs, security, and no involvement in English wars.

I say that if Mrs. Browder must go back then the Chamberlains, Noel Cowards, Duff Coopers, Somerset Maughams, and hundreds of other self-confessed British propagandists must and shall also be evicted and turned back from all borders of the United States. JAB.

On A Union With Great Britain

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The way to end this war, says Miss Dorothy Thompson, in her column of October 30, is to effect a union of the English-speaking peoples of the world. A very similar idea was advanced by Clarence Streit some time ago. There is every reason to believe that this idea is sound, that such a union would end the war very soon, and that it could be brought about by an education campaign explaining to the American people the advantages of such an association to themselves and to the civilized world. It would probably not be difficult to convince the English people of its immediate advantage to them.

The form of government for such a union or federation could be worked out satisfactorily, it is believed, by statesmen of the two nations. As much the larger part of the English-speaking peoples is on this side of the Atlantic, the seat of the united government would naturally be here, but that the two great branches of the government could be brought into harmonious cooperation there would be no doubt, once the great benefits of such association were realized.

The psychological effect of the association would be enormous and unparalleled in the history of the world. Notwithstanding the fact that our preparation for war is still in its initial stages, American prestige and our practically unlimited potential resources would doubtless cause an immediate demand for peace from the "Axis powers." And they would probably also grant much more satisfactory terms of peace to the defeated nations than the latter could otherwise obtain.

The advantages of such a union to civilization are evident. The American and British navies would continue to control the seas, as they have for the last hundred years and more. And the united government would practically insure the preservation of democracy in the world; while, if the British empire is destroyed, notwithstanding the incomplete help we are giving, and the British navy is either destroyed or captured, our ability to preserve democracy is very questionable, with all Europe in the hands of dictators controlling the great shipyards and airplane factories of Britain.

With such a union our national defense problem would be greatly simplified, and we would need far less increase in our military, naval and aviation armament than we are preparing for and will undoubtedly need if the British navy disappears.

While the English government is still perhaps more of an aristocracy than a democracy, it is getting more democratic all the time. And aristocratic Britain has been the home of free speech and free writing for more than 200 years and has long afforded asylum to revolutionists and liberal thinkers from all the despotic countries of the world.

Although such association would involve our entry into the war, it would not call for the sending of our soldiers overseas. They are not needed. Our available naval and air forces are all that would be required. OSCAR D. WEED.

Washington, Nov. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In regard to Miss Thompson's emotional article suggesting some sort of a union between the United States and England, I suggest that she try to be an American, first of all, and that she read what some of the men who founded this great Nation thought of England.

I suppose their opinions in this respect would be considered by the opportunists who today dominate our political life in the same light as they look at the admonition of the country's fathers against third terms in the Presidency—not worthy of attention.

I think Miss Thompson's suggestion is silly.

WALTER M. HIGGINS.

Italy's Position

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The third or fourth-rate army of Mussolini, under its customary incompetent leadership, is proving its "mettle" by its inability to combat successfully the poorly equipped and, in numbers, inferior Greek army. Indeed, those who remember the headlong flight of the entire Italian army at Caporetto in the fall of 1917, would not be surprised to see Mussolini appeal to his Axis partner, Germany, to save Italy from a crushing defeat.

It would appear that Italy is more of a liability than a support to Germany, and one cannot but wonder what would have become of the Italian armies if they would have encountered, in battle, France at a time when the French army was still in fighting trim. Mussolini had probably a strong presentiment regarding the result of such a clash, and wisely waited, therefore, until France was out of the picture, before placing Italy in the war.

Egypt, too, will probably prove an "uncrackable" nut for Italy, unless she has strong and active German support. C. C. K.

Washington, Nov. 4.

Laval On Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Today's Post carries a dispatch from Paris stating, "Pierre Laval says he believes democracy is dead all over the world." Obviously, Laval has already written off America, England and the other still democratic countries.

Frankly, I fail to see the reason for giving prominence to Laval's declaration; there is no news at all in that. In Laval's heart democracy has been dead a long time. Who would expect anything else than a pronouncement of death upon democracy from the present vice premier of France, Mussolini's old pal, one of the assassins of French democracy?

It is tragic that French democracy failed to dispose of Laval and his kind in time. One hopes that in this country, as well as in the other democracies, people will have learned the lesson and know how to deal with the Lavals before it is too late.

ARTHUR LEON HORNIKER.

Washington, Nov. 1.

Morning After

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now is the time for all good men to recover from aid to their party.

Slowly blood pressure goes down to normal; the spree is ended—that terrible intoxication of invective, that hurling of accusations and distortions and imputation of low motives, in which few among us failed to indulge during the passionate partisanship of the last few days of the campaign.

Let us now, in sanity and sobriety, whether pleased or displeased by the result of the election, strive to recapture the standards so recklessly thrown overboard by high and low alike: truthfulness, decency, accuracy. Thus, we can serve in unison the cause of patriotism which we have been shouting in raucous dissonance we desired to serve.

Nor is it solely for our country's sake that we must laboriously force ourselves to reestablish those standards. Our own self respect and the right to be respected by our neighbors, demand it. We too often forget that our priceless heritage of freedom of speech is a heritage: we did not earn it; our ancestors fought and died to bequeath it to us. And the sole proof any one of us can give of being worthy of this incomparable boon, is to impose upon ourselves, in the use of our inherited privilege of speaking freely, the obligation to speak honestly and with integrity. The Post Impressionist

First Separation

WE HAD NEVER BEEN to the Scoutmaster's home before but needed no instructions where to stop as the lawn was filled with chattering boys, dogs, blanket rolls, duffel bags, suitcases, drums, trumpets and a harassed looking man in Scoutmaster's uniform.

We were taking two boys in addition to our own tenderfoot and it took some squeezing to get the luggage into the trunk compartment. Finally all was in readiness and the cars lined up for the drive to camp. We made the trip without incident and it seemed no time before we reached the wooden gateway with letters of heavy cord twined into the name CAMP THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The place seemed alive with boys of all sizes and descriptions. The registration tent held a long plank table at which five perspiring boys in uniform instructed newcomers. As each boy signed in, he was given a white tick to fill with straw for his mattress. We drove down a one-lane road into the woods, hoping that no outcoming car would meet us halfway. A sign on one tree proclaimed that SPEED LIMIT IS 0 MILES PER HOUR while another instructed cars to USE CENTER LANE FOR PASSING.

A steep descent brought us up against a bunkhouse and everyone piled out. The boys of this troop were to be quartered in wooden bunkhouses, open in front, each furnished simply with three double-deck iron beds. Boys swarmed in and out with baggage and straw mattresses, while parents worriedly searched for the Scoutmaster or for missing offspring.

One group of boys was told to report to the doctor for weighing in and a boy with a boil was advised to see the nurse. The trees were thick and we wondered if the mosquitoes would bother the boys at night. Only one bed sported a mosquito netting. The chiggers were worse than the mosquitoes, a blond, tanned boy confided to me. We could see the water off through the trees. It looked cool and green. Our boy hoped to learn to swim while at the camp. I wondered how deep the water was. Suddenly I became panicky. He had never been away from home before.

The Scoutmaster was surrounded by boys and he was giving them instructions. After the boys had dispersed, a group of parents fired questions at him, which he answered patiently. There were two doctors and a nurse at the camp and several lifeguards. Each boy was to have a buddy when he went in swimming and every 15 minutes when a bell was sounded, buddies were to lift locked hands above the water. Each was responsible for the other. The boys would receive expert swimming instruction. In 22 years at the camp, they had never lost a boy.

"No, but there's always a first time," I thought bleakly. I looked around for my boy. He was nowhere in sight. The Scoutmaster, as concerned with the parents as with the boys, was at my side instantly. "He's over being weighed," he assured me. "He may be some time. Would you like me to say good-by for you?"

I took the hint gratefully. Perhaps this way would be easier for him, too. As the car started, the Scoutmaster walked alongside and whispered sternly, "Don't cry till you're through the gate!" The trees ran together in a blur but I drove away with a gay smile, just in case a bright-eyed tenderfoot came along.

Wednesday is Letter Home Day at the camp. When no letter came Thursday, I became apprehensive but my common sense told me that if anything had happened, the Scoutmaster would have let me know. Friday morning brought a post card. It said: Dear Mom—I'm having a swell time. We are electing a camp goat and I am advertising manager. Will you send me a box to share with my buddies? We found some sharks' teeth on the beach. Don.

I had a let-down feeling, followed by one of pride. If he were homesick, he wasn't letting me know. Was my son at last a man?

Sunday is Visitors' Day and we were at the camp early. Two boys sitting at the camp entrance brightened at our approach and then sank back in the grass, visibly disappointed. It seemed quiet and we wondered where everybody was. The sun filtered through the trees into a shady glen where rows of benches were arranged. There was a sign arched over the entrance to the glen. It read A SCOUT IS REVERENT. Unconsciously we lowered our voices.

Now we reached the bunkhouses and seeing, but unseen, stood and watched for a few moments. The Scoutmaster stood in the center of a clearing around which the bunkhouses were arranged in a circle. We couldn't hear what he was saying but could see, framed in the doorways, 18 tanned faces, eyes bright with attention. Some of the boys were tying knots, some were whittling, all were listening. Somehow they all looked alike and it was a moment or two before the face I was looking for took on a separate identity.

He was the same and yet different. He seemed older and quieter. He addressed the Scoutmaster as "Pop" and a world of affection, respect and admiration shone in his eyes as he asked the Scoutmaster to excuse him so that he could show us around.

We learned that he could swim a few strokes, that he had earned two merit badges. He wanted to earn as many merits as possible in the remaining week. He talked in a calm, matter-of-fact voice as though, having been tried, he knew he had not been found wanting.

He shook hands with his father and gave me a swift hug. He walked away without a backward glance but as the car gathered speed, I saw him brush furiously at his cheek as though the tree branches were clawing his face. But where he walked there were no trees at all. GRACE H. BUZZELL.

The Winner's Task

Rough Waters Ahead

WE DO NOT KONW, as I write these lines, who the next President of the United States will be. But one thing we do know, and it is something we should keep very vividly in our minds: He is not a man to be envied. He is a man called to office in deeply troubled times, in the greatest crisis in the history of free men, in a world that is in the midst of a profound revolution, a revolution not only being fought out between the armed forces of nations, but inside all human societies and even inside every thoughtful and sensitive individual's mind and soul. We are at the end of an epoch and the design for the future has not yet taken clear shape—it has not yet, I believe, taken shape anywhere, even in the revolutionized countries.

THE REALIZATION of this manifested itself in many ways in this campaign. Tradition was broken on two counts in the selection of the candidates. The nomination of the President for a third term broke one tradition; the nomination of Mr. Willkie broke another. For never before in the history of the United States has a man been chosen as a candidate for the office of Chief Executive of the Nation who has been without any previous record of public service.

Also, the party system was cracked by many fissures in this campaign. It will never be put together again in the same pattern. The Roosevelt Democrats and the Willkie Republicans conducted the two campaigns, and personalities previously unknown to politics played a more important role than many well-known political figures. Innumerable persons changed sides.

ON THE SURFACE, there has been clearer class cleavage in this campaign than in any in American history, and, definitely, the offensive this time was taken by what we roughly call the "right" and associate with the well-to-do, rather than by the "left," which we associate with the poorer people. And this new "right," whose most militant elements were also, like the more militant elements of the "left," amateurs of politics, were in no previous sense conservative. They were aggressive, militant, bold, and addressed themselves not to their own class, but to the widest possible popular following. For the first time in American history, as far as I know it, they took the aggressive revolutionary technique away from the left and used it themselves, no longer depending upon the quiet, always telling pressure of great economic power. They acted radically. In this campaign it was the right who used the radical method, and not the left.

SUCH A CLEAVAGE can ring the death knell of a democracy. It can so widen the crack in the Liberty Bell that it springs in two and silences its tongue forever. For however the election may have turned out when these words are printed, it seems today that it will have been very close. The next President, therefore, will have to govern a country in which nearly half of the people have voted against him. And he will have to govern it in such a manner that this cleavage will be healed and a synthesis reached between the two parts. He will have to be wise and good beyond even Lincoln—for Lincoln, in his day, could not keep the two parts from an intransigent stand that was finally resolved in the blood of brothers.

In this internal cleavage lies the greatest danger of external war. For, if we are internally divided we will be attacked, or an artificial unity, an imposed unity, may be sought, either by over-emphasizing the external danger as the only means of enforcing discipline or by undertaking an adventure for the purpose of enforcing discipline, but the enforcement of unity and discipline is not democracy. It is fascism.

YET THERE are very hopeful things in our situation, if we are willing to consider them honestly, and think clearly and feel kindly.

This cleavage does not occur in a moment of vast unemployment, poverty and economic depression. Now that the campaign is over, we can all acknowledge the truth, that, whoever is to blame or whoever is to be credited for this or for that, the country is in excellent shape. The solid center is sound — economically speaking. The maladjustments are on the periphery. The conflict amongst us is strangely dreamlike and unreal. It is psychological rather than material except for the unrehabilitated periphery. But let no one say that psychological disturbances are not real. They are as real as bread.

PSYCHOLOGICALLY speaking, it seems to me that this conflict that we have gone through is less a conflict between the rich and the poor than between two types of mind. William James called one the "tough-minded" and the other the "tender-minded." Usually they call themselves "realists" and "idealists." Goethe, with his earthy instinct, called them the "masculine" and the "feminine" principle. And Goethe, who understood the human soul and human society as well as any man who ever lived, knew that these two types of mind are not meant to live in eternal conflict, but must be synthesized.

The "tough-minded" followed Mr. Willkie. The "tender-minded" followed Mr. Roosevelt. The "tough-minded" are the organizers of this world; they are the technologists; they are the practical scientists, they are the builders of great corporations and of conquering armies.

The "tender-minded" are the poets of this world. They are the visionaries, whose dreams over and over again come true. They are the humanists, who see everything in terms of people —always away from the machine, from the machine which is only a tool, back to the hands and brains and imaginations and intuitions of human beings who create out of nature all these instruments. God-man-his instruments-man-God is the cycle they conceive. The poor, however inarticulate, think and feel in these terms, for they are closer to life and suffering than the well-to-do. Who speaks this language speaks directly to their hearts and their experiences. They voted for Mr. Roosevelt.

Who governs in peace and unity must synthesize, must marry those two types of the American mind—each type more clearly and gloriously delineated in our society than in any other on earth. For this country, which was constructed out of a vision, which was actually made up in the heads and minds of intellectuals and dreamers, is the most ardently idealistic country on earth. And it is, at the same time, the parent of invention—it is inventive, curious, practical, the designer of modern industrial method, prodigously gifted for the organizational and the efficient.

THOSE WHO VOTED for Mr. Roosevelt voted for the ideal of the democracy of brotherhood. Those who voted for Mr. Willkie voted for efficiency. The synthesis is essential. For it is forever true that the left understand humanity, but are weak in making their visions actual. And the right do not understand it, but worship mechanics and method. The dream fades into thin air for lack of instruments, or the instruments become hideously efficient for the obliteration of man. Idealists, unchecked by realism, create communism and break down; realism, unchecked by idealism, creates despotism and war. The two together will win the war by winning the revolution of the future; the revolution for human freedom and real democracy.

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE feel this; hence their agony of mind in this election. Hence the agony of mind that will follow this election, unless we move toward the great synthesis. Gesture and behavior have power to dissolve this agony and release the psychological tension. I pray with all my heart that if Mr. Roosevelt is elected he will invite the collaboration of Wendell Willkie. I pray that if Mr. Willkie is elected he will invite the collaboration of Franklin D. Roosevelt. I pray that each of these men, transfigured by the immense love and confidence reposed in him by millions of Americans, will move to meet the other, as the symbol that we in America move to meet one another also.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Untruths Cited

THAT TIRELESS politician, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, has said that a journalist or commentator, operating in a Presidential campaign, may be less respectful of the truth than a statesman having the responsibility of office. Admitting freely, but with regret, that journalism has been debased in this manner in this fight, particularly by adherents of the Administration, who include, it will be noted, practically the entire roster of the gents' room of journalism, I would like to differ with Mrs. Roosevelt on the whole proposition.

The fact is that orators are notoriously indifferent to truth, and I know of no more cynical show of contempt for truth in this whole contest than the attempt of Mrs. Roosevelt's candidate and husband to rid himself of a long record of tolerance for Communists and fellow travelers and identify them now with Wendell Willkie. I doubt that Willkie even knows any Communists or fellow-travelers other than those whom it was his misfortune to encounter in the forces of the New Deal when he was fighting the attempt of that political organization to rob the Americans whom he represented in business.

THE WHOLE CAMPAIGN against Willkie has been based on lies. It was a lie to say or insinuate that he was the candidate of Adolf Hitler, and it was a lie to suggest that because he had been employed in the utilities industry he himself must be a thief because Samuel Insull was a crook. It would have been as logical to say that President Roosevelt was a crook because he and Tom Pendergast were contemporaneous politicians and party comrades.

In fact, it would have been more logical to say this, because we know that Pendergast was a member of the President's political team, that the New Deal accepted the benefits of Pendergast's vote-stealing and other corrupt works and because, in the end, it was not the New Deal, but the Kansas City Star which exposed Pendergast and made his prosecution imperative.

It was a lie to cry "Wall Street" at Willkie without pointing out that Mr. Roosevelt himself in 1924 heartily indorsed a Democratic candidate who was a Wall Street man in the fullest and most sinister political sense of the term, and that Jimmy Roosevelt's insurance firm, of which Mrs. Roosevelt has been an officer, maintains offices in the Wall Street section and has had profitable dealings with corporations of the type which political orators call the "interests."

A LIE may be negative as well as positive, or a half-truth may be as wicked as a whole, positive lie.

It is interesting sometimes to watch the development of a lie. In this campaign one of the New Deal orators began a lie by denouncing Tom Girdler and referring to the graveyards of those who had fallen in a labor war. Girdler killed nobody. But an orator, unlike a journalist, would not be embarrassed by the truth.

Later, taking the benefit of this preparatory impression created by a reckless and truthless propagandist of the New Deal, President Roosevelt mentioned Girdler by name and, not boldly and honestly but by cunning insinuation, attempted to put Willkie into bed with a character who had been held up before the working people as a murderous enemy of labor.

By all odds the most brutal and dishonest campaigner has been Fiorello La Guardia, who also happens to be on President Roosevelt's team. Most of the lies, innuendos and misrepresentations of the campaign have been heard at one time or another in the ludicrous soprano squeak of the lower case duce, and he not only attacked a citizen for calling the turn on his betrayal of his professed principles but used the authority of his office to protect from legal process a member of President Roosevelt's party who had kicked a New York policeman below the foul line.

IF A MEMBER of Willkie's party had injured a New York cop in this or any other manner LaGuardia would have given him the works, and of course, every ordinary citizen knows that to kick a cop in New York is a most unhygienic practice for the kicker, unless he happens to be a New Deal officer or a union rioter. Union rioters have the same special privilege under LaGuardia.

I think a full discussion would show that Mrs. Roosevelt objects more to truths than to untruths, for she had also objected to the introduction of irrelevant issues By that she refers to graft by members of the official family. I insist that this is not an irrelevant or trivial issue, it is a fundamental issue of civic morality.

THE MORNING AFTER

After The Election

By Ernest K. Lindley

National Unity—The First Objective

THE FIRST IMPORTANT task of the President-elect is to mobilize the maximum of national unity. This should not prove unduly difficult. The Nation has had its periodic debauch of name-calling, slogan-slinging, and besmirching innuendo. It has blown off steam—with a gusto which is a luxury beyond the means of almost every other nation in the world.

At least half, probably more, of what was said in this campaign on both sides was rubbish. Except by marginal groups of extremists it will soon be forgotten. As after other elections, the overwhelming majority of the voters will accept the verdict philosophically and rally behind the victor until he has had a chance to show what he will and can do.

The President-elect's part in the mobilizing of national unity is mostly negative. He can perform it chiefly by avoiding any vindictive act or gesture and by refraining from raising any nonessential issue on which public opinion is sharply divided and deeply held. If not repelled by overt actions, most citizens will give the chosen leader a chance, as they nearly always have done.

This is written before the votes have been counted. It goes, regardless of the electoral decision.

FORTUNATELY, beneath all the contradictions and excesses of the campaign arguments there was essential agreement by the the two leading Presidential candidates. Both committed themselves to the rearming of the country to the fullest extent as rapidly as possible. Both swore allegiance to the same foreign policy. Each side accused the other of not meaning what it said, but the positive pledges were almost identical. Both swore to preserve and protect the great social and economic reforms of the New Deal. Neither side put forward a program for further domestic reform—except by extending the lines already laid down under the Roosevelt Administration. The only specific proposal from the President was to expand social insurance, especially to make old-age pensions a matter of right instead of charity. There was no constructive proposal from Willkie which required controversial legislation.

In retrospect the most significant things about the campaign of 1940 probably will not be the result on election day, but what was done during the campaign in behalf of the national interest.

Rule No. 1 of politcs—never to increase taxes in an election year—was violated. This was done chiefly at popular demand—not under the leadership of any individual.

MANY BILLIONS were appropriated for national defense. Again popular demand—neither the President nor Willkie—was the prime mover. Both the candidates trailed behind public opinion.

Conscription was enacted, in time of peace. A year ago probably no practical politician in the country would have thought it possible that conscription could be instituted, with overwhelming popular approval, during a Presidential election while we were at peace. Both Presidential candidates indorsed it, but the initiative had been taken by groups of private citizens. At bottom, it was the sober thought of American citizens—not the recommendations of political leaders—which put across conscription.

An active and consistent foreign policy was pursued throughout the campaign. Aid to Great Britain was increased and Japan's blustering was squelched. The fact that both candidates were pledged to the same foreign policy helped to make this possible. But in a large measure both were following public opinion instead of leading it. The destroyer-base deal with Great Britain is perhaps the best proof. Roosevelt and Willkie both ducked as long as possible any responsibility for this transaction. Roosevelt seemed to be afraid to act unless Willkie took joint responsibility. Willkie had the opportunity to take joint credit with the President, but he lacked the acumen. The deal was negotiated on this side chiefly by private citizens, and its advantages were explained to the American public by American journalists of various political preferences before the President acted. Willkie then chimed in with an indorsement. This transaction, so beneficial to our interests that Roosevelt compared it to the Louisiana Purchase, was, on this side of the water, the accomplishment of numerous private citizens, not of any political leader.

Regardless of the result of the election, the most impressive aspect of the campaign has been the demonstration of overwhelming popular support of policies favoring our essential national interests.

Books And Things

Serialized Novel

ARNOLD BENNETT used to say that he could tell what a book was like by reading its first page. I find it just as well to taste the last page as well before determining whether to read a book. But, knowing the quality of Robert Graves' writing, I started in on his "Sergeant Lamb's America" (Random House, $2.50) without the mysterious Rev. John Martin.

I didn't read the last page until I got to it, and only then realized that "Sergeant Lamb's America" was the first half of a double-decker novel, the second half of which may appear a year, or two years, hence. Whenever the rest of the book appears I shall be glad to report on it—if I have not forgotten the extraordinary coincidences which in this half of the story bring Sergeant Lamb into contact with Kate Harlowe in the north of Ireland, in the forests of Ohio (where she was an Indian prisoner) and in the wilderness near Lake George (where she was about to bear his baby), and the equally extraordinary and here totally unexplained circumstances under which he met the mysterious Rev. John Martin. What Mr. Graves tells whets the appetite, but "Sergeant Lamb's America" is only half a book, and I don't like serial stories when a year elapses between installments. The only thing worse than biting into a magazine story and finding at its end those fatal words "To be continued" is to have the same experience with a full-length novel.

Still, if you like history, Mr. Graves offers plenty of it in this first half of his story. Sergeant Lamb enlisted in Ireland in 1775, was shipped to Quebec in 1776 and participated in Burgoyne's fatal campaign in the Champlain country. Mr. Graves tells precisely what he wore, what he had to carry,and goes at length into the contemporary British view of the beginnings of the American Revolution, including the Boston Massacre, the Boston Tea Party, the battles of Lexington and Bunker Hill and Benedict Arnold's siege of the adjectival form of "Mohawk."

You may think that you have caught him out when he talks of "penguins" swimming in the Gulf of St. Lawrence; but you haven't. The wingless great auks of that region, extinct now for close to a century, were christened "penguins" before the word was applied to the wingless birds of the Antarctic. "Sergeant Lamb's America" is a sound introduction to what may be a good historical novel.

The Election And The World

THE CLASH and clamor of these last feverish weeks in the United States reached the outside world only as faint and oftimes distorted echo. Nonetheless, it is safe to say that no American Presidential campaign since the United States became a nation attracted more earnest attention abroad than that which has just ended.

The reasons for that were many and varied. Some were the product of hope; others of fear. Some were based on realistic appraisals; others on wishful thinking. But they all simmered down to the central fact that the United States has by force of circumstance been thrust into a position of crucial importance in the affairs of the world.

THAT HAS ACTUALLY been true for a long time, although Americans have been the last to awaken to this reality. But it was never more true than today. The United States is now one of the very few remaining democracies left on earth and the only major one at peace. As such, it is and will remain a challenge to every despotic government, a beacon of hope to the many millions of freedom-loving individuals living under the yoke of the dictators.

But the United States is also, and this is of particular importance at the present time, the greatest agglomeration of economic power the world has ever seen.

How we use that power in the critical days and months that lie ahead will have a vital bearing on our destinies. But it will also, in greater or lesser degree, affect the future of every other nation on earth. Properly directed America's economic might can decisively alter the present balance of forces in the struggles raging in Europe and Asia, keep this hemisphere free from totalitarian pressures and ultimately lay the foundation for an enduring peace. But if this power is misdirected or is hamstrung by timorous uncertainty disaster is almost certain to follow.

THE DICTATORS know that full well. That is why, since the failure of Hitler's aerial blitzkrieg against Britain, the United States has been an increasingly important factor in their calculations. They sought to intimidate us by means of the triple alliance. That effort failed. That they will try other methods to achieve the same end is certain.

On the other hand the British and their allies have gained renewed hope from the progress of American rearmament and the clearly expressed wishes of the American people that every possible aid short of war be given the victims of aggression. But the uncertainty they have had to face is whether the United States could or would move with sufficient rapidity in execution of such a program to be of real assistance. That is why they, too, gave the American Presidential campaign their closest attention. They hoped thereby to discover the key to America's future course. The same has been true of the Chinese whom the United States can assist enormously both by direct aid to them and by withholding aid from their enemies and of the republics to our South, plagued as they are by growing economic difficulties which the dictators are trying hard to capitalize.

THIS NATION holds in its hands the destinies of the world. How well it lives up to its unavoidable responsibilities will depend, in no small measure, on the degree of internal unity which it now manages to achieve.

The campaign has left much bitterness in its wake. That was, perhaps, inevitable. But it would be tragic if the rancor created by excessive partisanship is exacerbated and perpetuated. Certain it is that the enemies of democracy will do all in their power to see to it that the fires of passion kindled in the campaign are kept burning. For by helping to keep us divided they will prevent this Nation from doing what it can do to build up its defenses while at the same time providing assistance to the victims of aggression.

Americans who love their country, and are jealous of its destiny will not, however, permit themselves to become the unwitting tools of Hitler and Mussolini and Stalin. With the election over they will join hands behind their chosen leaders and thus enable the United States to present a common front to the forces of destruction which are at large in the world.

The Once Over

Pity The Microphone

Phew!
Get away from me! Everybody!
I wanna cool off.
I demand a breathing spell!

What I've been through for the Last three or four months!
What I've suffered!
The things I've stood for.
Those voices . . . those faces.
Those breaths!

Boy, am I a wreck!
Am I sick!
Am I all done in!
Do I ache all over!

There oughta be a law.
There oughta be a Society for The Prevention of Cruelty to Microphones During Election Campaigns!

What is a mike, anyhow?
Is it a horse? A garbage can?
A voice strainer? An adjective
Cooler? An armored gas station?

Is it supposed to stand everything,
Up to and including halitosis,
Cockeyed philosophies,
Bad grammar, hog calling
And bronchial shower baths?
I was made for music, for fun,
For diversion, for laughter,
For gayety and happiness.
And I liked the work.
I even stood for women's voices,
Terrible radio gags and all
Those quiz programs.
But that campaign of 1940—
It got me!

I give in! I surrender!
I'll never be myself again!
Stand back! Keep away!
I'm still suspicious.
Lemme cool off and rest.
Help! I CAN STILL HEAR 'EM.

WHAT'S THAT

Rep. Byron Defeats Walter Johnson

Majority Expected To Reach 6,000; Victor Lauds Loser

Representative William D. Byron (Democrat) was reelected to Congress from the Sixth Maryland District, over his Republican opponent, Walter Johnson, former big league pitching star. Byron's majority was expected to reach at least 6,000.

The race was in doubt until voting precincts in Allegany, Washington and Frederick Counties came in early today, rolling up sizable majorities for the Democratic candidate.

Byron, in a talk over Station WJSV, lauded the "sportsmanlike" campaign conducted by the "Big Train." Johnson could not be reached at his farm near Germantown for comment.

Captures Allegany

Byron captured Johnson's home county of Montgomery, 14,697 to 14,168, a margin of 529 votes. The turning point, however, came when Allegany County, formerly a Republican stronghold, began to roll up a majority for Byron. The majority for Byron in Allegany early today was 2,054.

Total returns from most of the district's precincts gave Byron 12,089 to Johnson's 8,712.

Byron's home county of Washington gave him a lead of 3,406 which was still mounting. In Frederick County, Byron had polled a majority of 1,100 votes.

Garrett County, which has never gone Democratic in the history of the State, gave the pitching star a majority of 1,379.

Byron Was War Flier

Representative Byron, who will return to Congress for his second term, began his political career 14 years ago when he was elected mayor of Williamsport, his home town. Later he was a member of the State Senate and also served on the State Roads Commission.

Born at Danville, Va., Byron is 45 years old. During the war, he served in the Air Corps in France. He is engaged in the leather industry at Williamsport.

Johnson entered politics two years ago, when he was elected as the only Republican member of the Montgomery Board of County Commissioners, a post he still holds.

Lights Blazed, But Not for Him

Providence, R. I., Nov. 5 (INS).—Charles S. Eden, of the Willkie Voters of Rhode Island, early tonight proposed to Willkie supporters throughout the Nation that they turn on every light in their homes in anticipation of a Willkie landslide.

He said: "As returns show America being given back to its people tonight, Willkie voters of Rhode Island will urge every one of their number to turn on every light in his home. Every Willkie voter in the Nation is urged to do likewise. . . . These lights will come on one by one until a great blaze of light marks the country where the people still rule."

Election Returns Sent by Television

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Associated Press election bulletins were broadcast by television tonight. It was the first time election returns had been televised.

As the bulletins appeared on a news printer they were picked up by a National Broadcasting Co. television camera and flashed to homes, taverns, hotels and party headquarters in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut. N. B. C. estimated 50,000 persons gathered around television receivers to watch the news come in.

Knox Sees Vote As 'Mandate'

Chicago, Nov. 5 (AP).—Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox said tonight that the Nation had re-elected President Roosevelt "by a considerable margin,' and that this constituted 'an unmistakable mandate" to "continue a firm policy" and "an accelerated program of national defense."

Secretary Knox, who is publisher of the Chicago Daily News, turned over active direction of the paper to a committee when he accepted the Cabinet post. The News supported Wendell Willkie in the campaign.

Thousands Pack Times Square As Election Votes Are Counted

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

NEW YORKERS WATCH RETURNS—Thousands packed Times Square last night, cheering announcements from various parts of the country as early election returns favored first one Presidential candidate and then the other. This picture was made at 9 p. m.

Roosevelt Leads Virginia, 2 to 1

B. Goodloe, of Charlottesville, Republican. With returns from 102 of the Eighth's 218 precincts, Smith received 16,247 to Goodloe's 3,460.

The Eighth District gave Representative Howard W. Smith better than a four-to-one lead over Col. Henry B. Goodloe, his Republican opponent of Charlottesville, in returns from 109 of the district's 218 precincts. The vote was Smith 19,946 and Goodloe 4,610. Smith had a wide margin in every county from which returns were in and carried Alexandria 4,310 to 1,064.

The Democratic Congressman's margin climbed toward the largest of any of the four districts in which the Democratic incumbents had Republican opposition.

Leftist Vote Lags

Senator Harry F. Byrd's Socialist and Communist opponents had polled only about one-twentieth of the vote of the junior Senator with returns in from 1,099 precincts. The vote was, Byrd, 177,532; Hilliard Bernstein, Socialist, 5,450, and Mrs. Alice Burke, Communist, 4,349.

Representatives S. Otis Bland, Colgate W. Darden, jr., and Thomas G. Burch were unopposed, and Representatives Dave E. Satterfield, jr., of the Third District, and Patrick H. Drewry, of the Fourth, rolled up big majorities over Socialist foes.

Willkie Wins Rockingham

Willkie was assured of victory in at least one Virginia County on the basis of virtually complete returns from Rockingham. Twenty-eight out of 29 precincts gave him 2,652 votes against 2,338 for Roosevelt.

First complete returns reported in the State came from Alexandria. Reports for the five precincts showed: Roosevelt, 4,004; Willkie, 1,802; Bernstein, 158; Byrd, 3,523; Goodloe, 682; Smith, 3,312, and Burke, 171.

Long lines formed early at polling places and the morning hours saw an unusually heavy vote. Election officials generally reported balloting running far ahead of the 1936 national election hours before the scheduled closing of the polls.

Democratic headquarters in a preelection estimate of the expected vote set the total at approximately 340,000, nearly 7,000 more votes than were cast in the Roosevelt-Landon contest of 1936.

Heavy Vote at Danville

The voting was so rapid and heavy at Danville that the electoral board had to hasten distribution of a second supply of ballot boxes, the ones in use being too small.

Overcast skies greeted voters in the West and partly cloudy weather prevailed throughout most of the eastern and tidewater areas. Mild temperatures prevailed in the West, however, and a slow rain became general in the extreme Western part of the State about noon.

Polls opened at 6:40 a. m. and closed at 5:07 p. m. in Richmond, varying a few minutes in other parts of the State.

While Democrats expressed confidence of a margin of about 140,000 and the reelection of the whole congressional ticket in election eve forecasts, the Republicans countered with a prediction the State would break its Democratic tradition for the second time since 1872. Virginia was counted in the Hoover column in the 1928 landslide.

Roosevelt Also 'Reelected' in London, Vote 69-1

By the United Press

London (Wednesday), Nov. 6.—The United States election stole the headlines from Prime Minister Winston Churchill's speech and the Italo-Greek war in morning newspapers here today.

Several of the newspapers devoted three to four columns to the balloting in America and early returns. Tabulations were pouring into Fleet Street newsroom by cable at five and ten minute intervals.

Between 300 and 400 Americans, and a number of British guests, attended an election party at one of London's biggest hotels. The ballroom was plastered with campaign posters of both Democrats and Republicans and the guests "voted" at booths marked Roosevelt and Willkie.

Americans—Roosevelt, 42; Willkie, 6.

Britons—Roosevelt, 69; Willkie, 1.

Rome Paper Prefers Willkie

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Nov. 5.—In discussing the Presidential campaign La Stampa today shows its preference for Wendell L. Willkie as the candidate who is less heavily committed to an anti-Axis policy. However, the newspaper stresses that no "rapid" changes in the United States foreign policy ought to be expected in case he be elected, because he and President Roosevelt have condemned fascism and pledged themselves to aid Great Britain.

The advantage, the newspaper indicates, perhaps lies in the fact that it will take some time before Mr. Willkie reaches "important decisions," since he is not acquainted with the tasks connected with his office. If, instead, President Roosevelt is reelected, says La Stampa, intensification of his policy of open support for Britain is to be expected, inasmuch as he has not pledged himself to compromise. Moreover, the United States political system, according to the newspaper, will assume a "dictatorial aspect," which will enable President Roosevelt to continue his foreign policy for four more years.

Votes Bought, Says Madrid Paper

Copyright by New York Times

Madrid, Nov. 5.—The newspaper Madrid, after charging that millions of dollars were used in the United States election to buy votes, declared tonight it was deplorable that extension of the European war "may depend on a handful of mercenary ballots."

Other newspapers insist it makes no difference in the war who is elected and that in any case the United States can do nothing effective.

Hopes of the Spanish government are expressed by the newspaper Madrid which says the only importance of the election to the outside world is that if Wendell L. Willkie wins United States aid to Britain will not go beyond the limits of nonbelligerence, while one cannot be sure if President Roosevelt is reelected.

Mexico Hopes Roosevelt Wins

Copyright by New York Times

Mexico City, Nov. 5.—Today's Presidential election is being watched by Mexico with more than the usual interest because the feeling is widespread here that it may prove as crucial for Mexico as for the United States.

The Mexican government, on the whole, can find little to criticize in President Roosevelt's reaction to the policies pursued by President Cardenas for the last six years, which injured many American interests, and it therefore hopes the present White House incumbent will not be changed. This explains why all official Mexico looks forward to the victory of the Democrats.

It is generally assumed that the election of Wendell L. Willkie would result in a more decided defense of American interests throughout Latin America and therefore in a firmer stand against the expropriation of American properties. It is also thought that the silver purchase policy, which has done much to bolster Mexican economy, would be in danger.

The newspapers this afternoon and evening were eagerly bought when they appeared on the streets. It is a safe bet that the radios will be turned to American stations, and will be listened to with interest far into the night, both in President Cardenas' private residence and in several of the most important ministries tonight.

Earl Carroll Plans $500,000 Night Club Here

Earl Carroll, well-known Broadway showman, is planning to open up a $500,000 night club in Washington to cater especially to lower salaried Government clerks, it was revealed here last night by the producer's brother, James H. Carroll.

The club will duplicate Carroll's theater-restaurant in Los Angeles where meals and two performances nightly are provided for an average charge of $2.50, Carroll said. The club will be opened as soon as possible, it was said.

Carroll was unable to disclose where the club would be located, but from other sources it was learned a site near the Connecticut Avenue Ice Palace was being considered.

D.C. Symphony Opens Tenth Season Tonight

2 Works to Be Played Here for First Time; Rachmaninoff Soloist

The tenth season of the National Symphony Orchestra will be opened tonight at 8:45 o'clock with a concert in Constitution Hall which will include the first appearance with the orchestra of Sergei Rachmaninoff, pianist-composer, as soloist.

The orchestra also will play for the first time in Washington two major works.

The concert will begin with the "American Festival Overture," of the American composer, William Howard Schuman, of New York, the first time it has been played here. Tchaikovsky's Third Symphony in D major also will be given its first Washington hearing.

Rachmaninoff will play his own Second Piano Concerto in C Minor, next to his Prelude in C Sharp Minor probably the most popular of his works. The program will be completed by Dr. Hans Kindleg's arrangement of Arcangelo Corelli's Suite.

For the first time in its history, the orchestra will record Friday two of the numbers it will play tonight. These, to be added to the RCA-Victor list, will be the American Festival Overture and the Tchaikovsky Third Symphony.

HOSTESSES:

Who greet you vaguely as if they were surprised you came; who greet you gushingly and exclaim, "How nice to see you!" while looking the other way; who pair you off with persons you have spent your life avoiding; who ask every time they see you in a corner if you have seen the antiques or the pitcher collection; who flit from group to group keeping one eye on the dining room and the other on the front door; who hover nervously about the more important guests; who are kittenish and coy around the men guests; who glance uneasily at groups who look as if they might be discussing "subjects;" who ask you repeatedly if you have been served; who have the air of managing a bazaar; who blankly smile . . . and smile . . . and smile; who give their guests perfect food, perfect drinks, perfect surroundings—everything except themselves.

HOSTS:

Who wander about like lost souls trying to be helpful; who keep pressing Scotches and sodas on both willing and unwilling guests; who congregate in corners with other men and forget all about what their wives told them; who manfully stifle their urges to insult in their own houses vehement guests of opposite political faith; whose first remark to everyone is, "Have you been to the dining room?"; who look embarrassed when women guests tell them how beautiful the hostess looks; who get mixed up in making introductions and forget the names of even their closest relatives; who try to explain the antiques or objects d'art to gushing feminine guests and get all confused doing so; who get cornered by dowagers with a purpose and over sprightly divorcees; who look as if they constantly were thinking, "Good heavens, how much longer will they all stay?"

GUESTS:

Who mill around as if they were continually trying to sight someone in the distance; who ask questions and do not wait for the answers; who do not listen to questions and who make the wrong answers; who tell each other how lovely each is looking; who gingerly hold half smoked cigarets aloft while looking for ash trays; who choose carefully the "right" huddles; who get introduced to the same persons they have met at the last 17 parties and pretend complete surprise; who tell each other how "marvelous" the decorations and the canapes are; who look all the time as if their feet hurt them; who hear themselves saying the same things over and over again and wonder why they can't stop; who tell the hostess that she gives the best parties of anybody they know; who do not have the grace to wait the traditional block and a half distance before telling each other what a big bore it all was.

Orchids Available In Many Colors

With the opening of our fall and winter season, orchids come to the fore and there is a wide variety of flowers to choose from.

Blue, brown, green and the new off white shades are all obliging backgrounds for orchids for daytime. Black, turquoise, white, grey (which is such a smart evening color), champagne, and all the pastels will find orchids that harmonize or accent their slim loveliness. Again, the beautiful chartreuse, and luminous mauve Brasso is available, the bride's special orchid, delicate with an exquisitely fringed lip—fragile as the wedding veil yet sturdy and capable of a long life and a useful one (as flower lives go).

Designed With Glamour in Mind

Glamour, Not Charm, May Be Acquired, Says Expert

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

YOU don't have to be a screen star to be glamorous and you don't have to have a million dollars, either—so sit back and relax.

MARSHALL ADAMS

That's first-hand advice from one of the country's leading authorities on glamour, Mrs. Brock Pemberton, who each season travels from cost to coast to help her producer-husband pick the future glamour belles of the coming year for starring parts in his productions.

Mrs. Pemberton's intimate experience with temperamental glamourites has led her to term many "glamorons—more moron than glamourous." Half the public debs and glamour boys of first-page fame are usually carbon-copy editions of their press agents' imaginations and possess scant charm when stripped of their posing and paint, she says.

Charm and glamour are two intensely different qualities, Mrs. Pemberton believes, and insists that charm is that illusive, rare thing which you either have or haven't, while glamour is a self-made quality which has tangible, made-to-order ingredients.

What are these ingredients, we eagerly inquired. According to the highly personable Mrs. Pemberton, to have glamour, you must cultivate the following details:

First, a desire to please and to be pleased, since nothing draws favorable attention more quickly than an eager, interested, animated manner.

"Focal Point"

There should also be some focal point in a glamour girl's appearance, too, such as a mop of long hair, as in Brenda Frazier's case, or a Chinese hair-cut and Mandarin ensembles affected by Mrs. Chiang Chase, Mrs. Pemberton's choice for New York's chief glamour girl.

At present there is no expression to replace the pathetically overdone word "glamorous," although Hollywood has tried by every other name to find replacement adjectives for Garbo, for whom the term was manufactured about four years ago.

It's a dead word now, Mrs. Pemberton believes, because of the importance of world events and of election time, which has made women desirous of building up a deeper-rooted kind of charm and has made men more conscius of a woman's common sense, as well as of her deadly "it."

Don't Warn Children About Associating With 'Bad' Companions, Advises Teacher

THE EASIEST way for a mother to surround her child with undesirable friends is to forbid him to see them, in the opinion of Dr. Thelma Hunt of George Washington's psychology department. "The child's impulse in such a case is to seek out the forbidden friends and meet them in secret places; the chances are that he will pick up the bad habits you try to protect him from. A much better plan is to invite all his friends into your home. Then if there is one who swears, for example, you at least can supervise the situation and perhaps even correct the habit before your child picks it up.

DR. HUNT

"Also, a child is apt to be sensitive to the impression which his friends make on his parents. It is possible that he will be embarrassed by rowdy behavior in his mother's presence and drop the offending friends of his own accord." Dr. Hunt advises against comparisons between undesirable companions and "that sweet little Smith boy who has such nice manners." Nobody could blame Johnny for deciding then and there to stick to his old pals and give the Smith boy as wide a berth as possible.

According to the Gal-Up-Stairs Poll, Roosevelt was to beat Willkie by a proportion of about 11 to 6. The scoreboard, placed at the entrance to a Seventh Street bookshop, gave voteless passers-by a chance to name their man by sticking a thumbtack within the outline of the elephant or the donkey. The donkey led the race from the start, except for the day of the draft lottery. A book placed near the board provided an additional outlet for opinions; among the entries: "Willkie will carry Maine, Vermont and Oregon;" "Roosevelt XXX—I love him;" "Willkie says bad things about Roosevelt so he can be President;" "Roosevelt loves the poor—he made so many paupers;" "Wendell Willkie would make a good garbich collector."

TOURIST NOTE—An old lady went from one window to another at the top of the Monument, peering long and carefully through each one. After her inspection she approached a guard and said, "Now let me be perfectly certain. This IS the Washington Monument, isn't it?"

⁂

A Government gal who once attended summer school at the University of Munich has been receiving regular batches of publicity handouts from Germany. Amused by the extravagant style of the leaflets, she took some to her office for the entertainment of her fellow workers. Soon afterward she was summoned to her superior's office and advised to report the matter to the FBI lest she be accused of subversive activities. She did so, and a record was made of the matter even though justice officials said they already were familiar with the program. The eerie part of the story is that promptly thereafter the flow of propaganda addressed to her ceased; she's no longer worried about the Dies Committee but expects a visit from the Gestapo any day.

Actress' Hair Curls When She's Happy

Julie Haydon Is 31 But Could Easily Pass for Girl of 20

By Ida Jean Kain

FEMININE competition in the lovely, make-believe world of the theater is so fierce that fibbing about one's age is an accepted form of self-preservation. And Julie Haydon—whose Alice-in-Wonderland freshness would enable her to pass for 20 in the merciless light of the nooday sun—upsets what amounts to a convention when she insists that she is all of 31!

But that just goes to show what kind of a girl Miss Haydon is. And if there is any truth in the saying that what we fear is sure to overtake us, we can reason backward to find an explanation for her extremely youthful appearance in this frank indiffernce to birthdays.

In addition, she has what science is pleased to label "the characteristics of youth"—a slim, lithe figure, the quick, lilting walk of a careless child, and a fine, fresh complexion. Her measurements are: Bust, 33 inches; waist, 22½ inches; hips, 34 inches. Yes, she exercises! A talented dancing sister with a strong willpower insisted on teaching her a "set of leaps and bounds that were never intended for the confines of a hotel room, but which keep one in excellent condition." And, obviously, in fine form!

Posture Is Paramount

Then, there's the matter of posture. As you are probably aware, posture is a paramount consideration in the theater. It is also the way an actor or actress gauges age! It's almost a commonplace, Miss Haydon tells me, to hear:

"You can tell Miss So-and-So is getting along—just look at her hunching her shoulders!" And knowing that poor posture is supposed to be a sign of age is enough to make any woman straighten up.

That "nice child" complexion is apparently the result of heredity and soap-and-water cleanliness. And the sheen of her simple coiffure? Just good, vigorous application of the hairbrush—not so many strokes, but until the arms are too weary to lift the brush for another stroke? Julie Haydon takes care of her own hair—washing and brushing. She doesn't bother with having it set, "because it won't set!"

All these usually fundamental things in beauty, however, seem superficial when a sincere attempt is made to analyze the Haydon charm. Certainly, one of the "secrets" is her keen interest in other people. Whether it's deliberate or a natural gift, this fascinating actress is adept in the art of encouraging people to talk about themselves—even when she is supposed to be the topic of conversation!

Secret of Charm

Any woman who can lead people on and convince them that she is enjoying her role of a good listener is in full possession of one secret charm! And she doesn't have to worry very much about seeming young. It's generally taken for granted that anyone who likes to listen is young!

But here are two more Haydonisms which, I'll warrant, will pique your interest. She believes that beauty is a state of mind, and declares that when she is happy her hair curls! And she doesn't hold with the theory that women shouldn't worry—"Why, worry is part of living," she says, "and it makes you want to work harder!"

Women Gaining As Underwriters

The 4,000 women life underwriters in this country have set up life insurance plans for 956,000 persons, providing protection aggregating $2,375,000,000, it is disclosed by a survey just completed by the Women's Committee of the National Association of Life Underwriters to determine the achievements of women in the life insurance field.

The insurance plans written by these women underwriters provide protection for more than 3,000,000 individuals, according to Miss Beatrice Jones, who was chairman of the committee under whose direction the survey was made through questionnaires.

A composite picture of the more successful women life underwriters shows her to be about 46 to 47 years of age, came into the business in her late thirties, has about 250 clients of whom approximately 43% are men, and writes about 34 cases a year.

Blissfully Wed. Living on $100 a Month, Young Wife Asks How to Keep Charming Husband Happy

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 22, very happily married to the world's grandest man, and we have a year-old son who is a joy to both of us. We are just two years out of college. I have no really vital problem, except how to keep my husband happy.

We are living in a very pleasant apartment on an income of $100 a month. This income, as you may guess, has such stringent limitations that I am concerned as to how to provide sufficient diversion to a husband accustomed to athletic recreation and social good fellowship.

I can afford almost no pretty clothes for myself, as all the pennies I can scrape together must go for things the baby badly needs. Although we budget our money carefully, we have little left over for the movies and dancing is out of the question. We both play bridge but we know no one in this vicinity, to which we moved two months ago.

While we have many friends, they are nowhere near us. If they want to see us, they must come to us, as we have no car and cannot easily leave the baby at night. This has brought our social life to an abrupt finish, for the time being. And I feel that I can hardly expect my husband (a handsome and charming man) to be content staying quietly at home, night after night, interminably, with a wife now verging on the scrawny dowd (although I used to be considered pretty and try to keep myself well groomed.)

I used to depend a great deal upon my personality and his to liven our home. But since I do all my own work and seem to be losing weight I haven't much vivacity left with which to scintillate, after the dinner dishes are washed. And I can think of no way to brighten our "fireside" on our income.

Perhaps my little problem seems trivial to you. It does even to me, now that I look it in the face. But I don't want it to develop into a big one; and yet I'm not a trouble-borrower—or am I? You seem to see your way around everyone's difficulty, so will you discuss my problem with me? Sincerely, R. A.

Cultivated Minds Are Developed in Solitude

DEAR R. A.: As I see the situation, the first greatest contribution you can make to your husband's happiness is to be happy yourself—and you say, in the opening sentence of your letter, that you are happy, "very happy." Nextly, since your respective "personalities" must of necessity afford the materials with which to nourish the relationship—keeping it vital, stimulating and mutually satisfactory—you should devote your enforced, home-staying leisure to intellectually and spiritually self developing pursuits.

Now is your opportunity to spend your evenings with the greatest minds and personalities the world's literature and history have produced. Now is the time to turn to the public library as your best friend and standby in emergency. Turn to reading, along special lines, as an avocational exercise. What special fields of knowledge are of mutual interest? In making a joint adventure of exploring them, you will uncover endless material for lively discussion. And you should find yourselves adding immeasurably, day by day, to your fund of cultural knowledge, while enlarging your understanding and appreciation of each other's minds.

You might delve back into the ancient classics; or you might run through a collection of biographies—always a fascinating and richly instructive source of psychological and historical information. Or you might, for instance, develop into amateur authorities on the subject of music, by combining academic research with fine record-collecting. I daresay you could pick up a victrola for a small outlay; or even acquire one by the hand-me-down method.

Your situation reminds me of a true story told me recently—which may contain a moral for you. A young married couple were obliged by economic reverses to retire, two winters ago, to an ocean-side cottage of the summer-resort variety—where they were, more literally than figuratively, stranded on a deserted beach for more than six months, with only each other and the ocean for company.

They were in love with each other, after three years' marriage, but frightened, even so, by the prospect and possibility that they would become sickeningly surfeited with each other's unrelieved society. (However, they did not confess this fear to each other until long afterward).

Well, they settled in to make the best of a bad situation. The wife cooked and kept house; laundered and mended and knitted. The husband chopped wood, kindled fires, did "the cleaning," and made a long bi-weekly trek by foot to the country grocery store several miles away to fetch provisions. And between times, both of them wrote and studied, keeping small but life-saving checks coming in. But the real profit of their enforced adventure proved to be their discovery of the other's true self—in the long evenings when they put aside their work and just talked with each other.

On emerging finally from their obligatory retirement from "the world," so-called, they were more profoundly in love than ever before—ardently, utterly and indissolubly in love. The friend who told me their story said: "Now, when they can go out every night, if they like; or see anyone of dozens of devoted friends, they don't really care to go out at all. They're sufficient unto themselves so long as they are together. And you should see Jane's face light up when her husband telephones her, even if she just said good-by to him an hour before. You'd think she was greeting a long-lost true love. And she and her husband say they wouldn't take anything for that winter alone on the beach, when they really got acquainted with each other for the first time." M. H.

Learn Methods Of Club Work

THE CLUB members who are up-and-doing, in the thick of the excitement—and the lookers-on! Which group do you belong to in your club?

It's such a mistake to shrink into obscurity, sighing that you don't know enough about club work, that if given an important post you "wouldn't know where to begin."

Actually, with a few pointers on the inner workings of a successful club you could be in the limelight having fun, too.

Elected to the post of treasurer you could easily learn to be a model of efficiency. A good way to protect yourself against financial tangles is by adopting the voucher system.

Every time you pay out money from the treasury, have the president sign a voucher reading "To the Treasurer: You are authorized to issue Check No. 15 for $10 in payment of . . ." Then file vouchers for reference.

On a refreshment committee you play a stellar role with a little knowledge on how far foods will go. Count on a pound of coffee yielding 40 to 60 cups. With it you'll need 2½ to 3½ pints of cream. Two gallons of sherbert will serve 50 people. A layer cake serves 8 to 12 but can be thinly sliced to serve 20.

Italy Tells of Push, 'Lively Opposition'

Where Greeks Say Italians Are Trapped

Salient Reported 15 Miles Northeast Of Greek City Janina

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 5.—Italian forces have driven a salient to the headwaters of the Vojussa River in mountainous northwestern Greece, the high command reported today.

How deep the Italians have pushed was not disclosed, and it was acknowledged that they met "lively enemy opposition."

The Vojussa rises just north of Netsovo, which is 35 miles below the Greek-Albanian frontier and on a good road about 15 miles northeast of the Greek city of Janina (Ioannina), the Italians' first main objective in the Epirus sector.

(This, apparently, was the second "prong" of the Italian drive on Greek soil, parallel to an earlier penetration south from the Albanian border in the coastal area. The Greeks also are reported to have pushed two lines into Albania, both east of the Italian advances, one near Koritza and the other north of Florina.)

Italian warplanes, the communique said, supported the advancing infantry. It reported repeated hits on defending mountain batteries.

Other Italian air attacks were aimed at Florina and Kastoria, in the frontier zone, the Greek west coast naval base of Prevesa and the east coast port of Volos.

In the war with Britain, the communique reported 24,000 tons of shipping sunk by Italian submarines in the Atlantic and several British armored cars destroyed by Artillery near Kassala, on the border between Eritrea and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

GREEK-ITALIAN BATTLEFRONT TODAY—Greek troops, said to have pushed two lines (1) into Albania in their war with Italy, reported they had cut off 4,000 Italian troops in that area and trapped 30,000 others in a seige of Koritza, Italian base. Further south on the 100-mile front, Italians reported they had driven a salient (2) to the headwaters of the Vojussa River.

Italy Bans Swiss Papers

Copyright by New York Times

Berne, Nov. 5.—The entire Swiss press, with the exception of two papers, has been banned from Italy on grounds that it "presented unilateral reports of the progress of the Italian campaign in Greece."

That life in Switzerland, however, continues more or less normally is borne out in a brief announcement tonight that "in view of the arrangement just concluded with the German postal authorities," mail for Greece will be shipped via Germany and Yugoslavia.

For That Election Headache: Go For a Long Walk

Omaha, Nebr., Nov. 5 (AP).—For that post-election headache go for a good long walk.

Dr. W. H. Thompson, head of the philosophy and psychology department at the University of Omaha, had that advice today to ease the Nation on what he expected to be "the worst morning after since Lincoln's time."

"In fact, I'd recommend a 10-mile walk as a good post-election antidote," he said.

He figured about half the Nation would feel down in the mouth about the election results and estimated some 60,000,000 people would be better off if they took time off for a total of 600,000,000 miles of perambulation.

Greeks Reported Occupying Koritza

[Other Belgrade reports indicated another Italian division, isolated even from its trapped comrades around Konitza, was pushing on toward Florina, important Greek communications center.

[Meanwhile, according to Associated Press Athens dispatches, there was increasing evidence that the British are giving active aid. It was stated that British fighter planes shot down an Italian bomber over central Greece.

[In addition, seven other Italian planes caught on the ground at the Koritza airdrome were destroyed by Greek planes and two others of the Italian squadrons which raided Piraeus, the port of Athens, were reported shot down.]

Forced to fight on the defensive on the ground, Italy hit back through the air. Athens experience a 70-minute alarm—its longest of the nine-day-war—as Italian bombers around midday raided the ancient capital's port of Piraeus and the Phaleron Bay area.

Some civilian casualties were inflicted in Piraeus and vicinity and bombs wrought destruction, but no military objectives were damaged, Greeks said.

An official announcement revealed 290 persons have been killed and 680 wounded by Italian air raids on Greek centers in the nine days since the war began.

Italians Strafe Greeks

Several hundred picked Italian troops sent behind the Greek lines in Epirus to cut communications, were said to have been captured, together with large stocks of arms, munitions and supplies. The 4,000 Italians, surrounded in the mountains north of Janina, were understood to be on the verge of surrender or annihilation. Fascist planes tried to drop parachuted supplies to this trapped group, but some of these landed among the Greeks.

Italian dive-bombers throughout the day incessantly strafed the Greeks in efforts to break the encirclement which had been accomplished by the severance of all Fascist supply lines in the sector. The hardy Greeks, however, explointed their knowledge of the mountains to kep out of the way of the Italian bombs.

On the Florina-Koritza front, which has shifted from Greece into Albania, kilted Evzones shock troops led light tank units in the steady advance. All Italian counter-attacks were repulsed with the aid of Greek planes that flew low and machine-gunned the Fascist forces.

In the night 15 Greek towns were bombed, including Salonika, where many houses were destroyed and casualties caused. The Greek high command claimed destruction of four Italian bombers by ground guns.

Italian-Made Bombers Raid Yugoslav City

Duce's Newest Type Planes Pay 3 Visits, Strafe Streets, Kill 13

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Nov. 5.—Three Italian-made bombers in three raids today dropped 21 bombs on the Yugoslav city of Bitolj, killing 13 and wounding 36, and causing vast material damage.

Bombs struck the railroad station, the postoffice building, Bitolj airport and the Yugoslav army barracks, killing an adjutant and a major general commanding the Vardar division of the Third Army Corps.

The first bombing came without warning at 12:45 p. m., when Bitolj's streets were crowded with thousands of pleasure seekers and shoppers. It was market day.

When the first salvo of bombs crashed into the streets and buildings there was a widespread panic. Before the last bomb fell three raiders were power-diving on the city's outskirts, where they swept over rooftops, strafing the streets and the airdrome itself with machinegun fire.

Eyewitnesses identified the bombers as Italian-built Fiats of BR-20 type, the latest model light bomber produced by the Fiat works.

The bombers vanished and reappeared ten minutes later to unloose a second salvo from a low altitude. Then, gaining altitude, they raced away southward across Lake Presba toward Albania.

At 2:55 p. m. the bombers made their last raid, and bombs fell on the army barracks, soldiers' casino and airdrome. Three men were killed before the Grand Hotel.

Belgrade was astounded by the news of the bombing. The premier summoned an emergency meeting of key cabinet members.

Late this afternoon police reinforced their guard about the Italian legation here.

[Authorities in Belgrade, the Associated Press reported, said they had not been able to identify the planes, and Italian, British and Greek diplomats immediately disclaimed responsibility. The Italians blamed the Greeks; Greek Minister Raoul Rosetti scoffed at the idea.

[An official Yugoslav announcement said any further attacks would be met "with all the means of our armed forces."]

First supposition was that the fliers had mistaken Bitolj for Florina, Greek town 12 miles southward across the frontier. Doubt was thrown on this theory by subsequent raids.

The Italian consul at Bitolj asked the Italian legation in Belgrade by telephone whether he should leave the city. He was told to remain, as there would be no more bombing.

American Reporter Tells of Italian Bomb Blowing Him Out of Bed in Salonika Hotel

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Salonika, Greece, Nov. 5.—Since Friday morning squadrons of Capronis and Savoia Marchetti bombers have come over here 14 times from Albanian bases and 11 times dropped explosives about the city.

Three times they were either driven off by Greek planes and anti-aircraft fire.

The net result of this has been to demonstrate the remarkable excellence of the Greek army and the civilian morale, the ability of Salonika to withstand air attack and the capacity of the Greek defenses not only to beat off aerial invaders but to hand back severe damage.

I cannot estimate the exact number of Italian planes which now have appeared overhead, but it is certain there were as many as 70. At least 6 of these have been shot down in Salonika district, and at least 2 have fallen on their way back to Italian bases as result of damage inflicted by Salonika defenses.

Many Leaving City

Although dozens of bombs have been dropped, not one has hit an essential important military target. Port facilities, oil storage centers, munition dumps and communication arteries all remain unscathed. The majority of the bombs have fallen in residential districts, mostly within the poorer quarters of town.

Many homes have been destroyed and a large number of civilians have been killed and wounded. Crowds of refugees have been pouring from the city for nearby mountain villages.

Nevertheless, the essential services of the city continue to function well. The process of mobilizing northern Greece, which depended largely upon Salonika's communications, is virtually completed. Stores here are open and the telephones are working.

The first raid caught the city more or less by surprise. The alarm sounded on Friday morning at 9 o'clock, but soon afterward there was an all-clear signal and no bombs were dropped.

At 9:45 came another alarm and almost immediately after there was the crash of falling bombs.

Blown Out of Bed

The first bombs dropped in the water in front of my hotel, shooting up great geysers which sank a rowboat. A few seconds later a group of bombs began dropping about and on the hotel, in which I had a top-floor room. The first blew me out of bed, shooting a spray of glass, plaster and pieces of wood showering over me. My terrier, asleep at the foot of the bed, dashed out of the door and disappeared. I followed into the hall when another bomb struck a corner of the roof nearby, splattering more plaster and wood about. The building rocked but held together well.

After dressing I examined the room next to mine and found it wrecked. A large iron object was lying on the floor. It looked like a small hot-water boiler. Later I discovered it was a 100-kilometer bomb which had failed to explode. Downstairs I found my dog, who was wounded in his two paws by glass, sitting behind a desk.

The bar of the hotel was blown out by a bomb landing beside it. In front of the hotel was a dead fisherman lying on the pavement unscarred, killed by the force of concussion. In company with J. Wes Gallagher, of the Associated Press, and Henry Stokes, of Reuters (British news agency), I walked up the street into the heart of town. A few buildings were afire, others in ruins. An autobus was burning brightly. Three bodies lay beside it. Four wounded horses were dragging themselves along, leaving trails of blood.

Since the raid, I and the rest of the population, had learned something of caution. We all dived into ditches, trenches or a cellar when the siren sounded, and stayed there until the all-clear.

The raids continue regularly unless clouds or darkness hamper the Italians. The Italians do not seem to like flying over the mountain ranges without perfect vision, and the Vardar winds blow clouds this way sometimes.

The morale of the Italian pilots does not seem to be too good, according to officers who had questioned the Italian captives who parachuted to safety. I saw some. They were uniformly pale and extremely youthful. The impression here is that their experience is limited.

The crowds show enormous enthusiasm when a Greek plane brings down an enemy. One rocketed into the center of the city and burned furiously. The pilot was captured as he parachuted to earth. Two other planes fell into the sea near the waterfront.

For a city that is beginning to acquire the experience of modern warfare Salonika is doing well. One doesn't hear defeatist talk here. All the talk is still about "what we're going to do to those macaroni eaters."

D. C. Sale to Aid Greek Soldiers

The Greek-Italian conflict now raging in Europe touched remotely in Washington yesterday.

Two local Greek florists, who both served the United States in World War 1, have laid plans to aid their embattled countrymen by contributing proceeds from a special flower sale to the Government of Greece.

Pete Kreis, 43, and George Karambelis, 46, owners of a flower shop on Twelfth Street Northwest, will turn all proceeds of next Tuesday's sale over to Minister of Greece Cimon P. Diamantopoulos on Wednesday. Their four employes, including a colored truck driver, will contribute a day's pay.

Election Parties Break Social Records, Too

Many Officials Vote to Stay at Home, But Majority Awaits Results at Gay but Not Always Unanimous Gatherings

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Capital society broke its partying record last night as festive get-togethers punctuated the calendar all over the town. While a few topflight officials declined scores of invitations and elected to listen quietly to return on their own radio, most of the dial twirling was done for flocks of guests who carried on a lively campaign for their favorite candidate until time to go home.

A few conservative hosts, fearful that differences of political opinion might lead to bitter argument, carefully selected guests who were "all of a mind" as to who should win the race. Others, welcoming a chance to give a party that could develop into an open forum of hot air chose their company with the home that there would be some stimulating discussion. And they were not disappointed.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull turned down dozens of invitations for the evening and stayed in their apartment to listen to the radio. The Commandant of the Navy Yard and Mrs. George Pettengill were in the large Washington contingent electing to stay home rather than go out for the evening.

A dinner preceded the listen-in party given by Edward E. Gardiner at his home on Belmont Road. Among his guests were Mrs. Pearsons Rust, Mrs. Emmons Smith, Mrs. Noyes Lewis, Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Griffith Warfield, Alfons Landa, and several others. Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jones and Mrs. Marshall Langhorne entertained at a dinner for 14 at the 1925 F Street Club and the company lingered on for hours to listen to the radio.

George Abell Gives Gay Party

One of the gayest get-togethers on the evening's calendar was the party given by George Abell in his apartment on Twentieth Street. Having all the earmarks of a political convention, the fete was accented with impromptu speeches, formal declarations for one candidate or the other, and an around-the-room discussion in which guests agreed to disagree, and had the time of their lives.

Among those who dropped in during the evening were several diplomats including the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Alfaro, Mr. and Mrs. Kleijn Molekamp, Dr. and Mme. H. R. van Houten, Dr. and Mrs. H. N. Boon, all of the Netherlands Legation; the Rumanian Charge d'Affaires and Mme. Brutus Coste, the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza, Maj. and Mrs. Rufus Sedillo and Laurence Bungardenau.

Still others there were Miss Carolyn Nash, Mrs. Randolph H. Miner and her sister, Mrs. Wilcox of California; Mrs. Burrill Hoffman, Mrs. Marion Warburg, Miss Evelyn Gordon, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell, Mr. and Mrs. George Boncesco, Dr. Clarence Lee Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Walmsley, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Dr. Eugene de Savitsch, Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Andrew Wylie, Marshall Exnicios, Hugo Rennert, Baroness von Below, and many more.

Mrs. J. L. Houghteling called her party "mostly Democratic, with a few on-the-fencers." I happen to know several of her guests voted for Willkie, but I'd be willing to wager they were pretty quiet about it as returns came in. The fete started as a dinner party and ended up, as did most others, around the radio.

"Just a group of good New Dealers" gathered to listen in with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bruce. The hostess didn't think it wise to try "to mix Willkie-ites and Democrats, because the gathering might get too tense."

An especially lively fete of the evening was the dinner and radio party given at the National Press Club by Mrs. Junior Owens. Guests gathering at 8 o'clock stayed on until long after midnight, with the party growing larger and larger as the evening went on. Among those present were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John Williams, Capt. and Mrs. P. B. Eaton, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Nelson, Mrs. Walker Buel, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond P. Brandt, Kurt Sell, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin W. Gableman, Mrs. Mrs. New Brunson Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Carlisle Bargeron, the former of whom flew home from New York in time to cast his vote in Maryland, and then came directly on to the party, and Willis Ballinger, who was among those dropping in after dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Burke Summers had a few friends in to listen to the radio with them, and to enjoy a festive supper at midnight. Among their guests were Mr. and Mrs. Marshall R. Diggs, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford McClain, and several others who dropped in toward the latter part of the evening.

Diplomats and State Department officials were all over the place at the party given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Pell. Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn were hosts to a few friends during the evening; as were the Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard Casey, Mr. and Mrs. Davis Elkins, and Capt. and Mrs. John Edie, who had in his party Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, Mrs. Price Whitaker, Mrs. Duncan Cameron and her daughter, Miss Elsie Quinby.

"Not a party," according to the hosts, but a very merry ingathering was the collection of radio listeners who were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse at the former's office in the National Press Building. Assembling at 6:30 o'clock, the group stayed on until midnight and later. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund W. Pavenstedt, Mrs. Arthur Woods, Mrs. Ford K. Brown (Leslie Ford, of literary fame), who came over from Annapolis; Judge and Mrs. John Sternhagen, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Boeckel and Mrs. Sidney Smith, Mr. Shouse's sister, who will return to her home in Omaha, Nebr., today.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

LADIES' HATS are so strange and fascinating this winter that those with really striking ones could be dressed in a piece of old burlap for all the attention that is paid anything except their headgear. The other afternoon, at a cocktail party given by the Misses Mary and Edith Wright, everybody's gaze was riveted on the fascinating circlet of red ostrich feathers which Miss Nancy Weller wore around her dark hair. Another beguiling number was Miss Marian Kirk's little Victorian widow's cap of black feathers, with a wisp of veiling.

THE TALK was all of election, though everybody argued with most polite restraint. But the atmosphere has been so tense these days that one or two people firmly refused to say which candidates they favored.

Miss Helen Davis said that her father, Dwight Davis, had gone all the way to Florida to cast his vote. The Davises own a plantation near Tallahassee. Miss Davis arrived hatless and wearing a green tweed jacket over her dress.

Another hatless guest was Miss Louise Stillwell, whose black frock had a turquoise blue top. Miss Stillwell, who is the daughter of Mme. Espil, is one of the most popular of the season's debutantes.

THE TWO Wright sisters and their mother, Mrs. J. Butler Wright, are being enthusiastically welcomed back to Washington. They used to visit here from time to time while their father, the late Mr. Wright, was our Ambassador to Cuba. Mary Wright now has a job with the Government and says she is definitely enthusiastic about being a working girl.

At the party she wore a gray tailored dress with tiny bows in front. Edith, who is blonde, chose a heavy black silk made with long sleeves, and with it wore a string of pearls. Mrs. Wright was present and invited Mrs. Harry Cootes for company, as, she said, most of the guests were young people. But both ladies were belles as far as the gentlemen present were concerned.

• • • •

MISS ANNE PERIN, who has resumed her job in the clothes biz, was present, all in black. Nancy Weller, incidentally, designs the dresses for her recently opened shop. Her black frock was trimmed at the pockets with the red ostrich feathers which made her hat.

"Who is that exotic person?" everybody asked when a tall young woman in a high crowned turban and a black dress embroidered in gold arrived. It turned out to be Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn, looking more like a refugee Russian princess than a debutante of last season.

Among the men present was Jack Segar, who gave an election party last night at his home on Hillyer Place. Other guests were Clarence Hewes, who will be joined early next week by his niece, Miss Ellen Flowerree; Robert Buell and Dorsey Fisher of the State Department; Winthrop Crane, who has taken a house in Georgetown and will move the end of the week; Maj. Burdette Fitch, Llewellyn Thompson, Miss Stellita Stapleton, accompanied by a friend from Honolulu, and several others.

WHOEVER said that people in the State Department don't work hard should see them these days. One, ordered to keep track of his overtime, found it amounted to 85 hours in one month. The night shift in Secretary Hull's office, inaugurated when the war began, still goes on, with some unfortunate designated each evening to spend the night there.

Mrs. Garrett To Be Speaker

Mrs. George A. Garrett, chairman of the local Bundles for Britain, will be one of the speakers at a benefit to be given this evening at 8:30 at the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q. The benfit is sponsored by a group of Jewish women's organizations.

Elbricks Now In Portugal

C. Burke Elbrick of the State Department, and Mrs. Elbrick, who for the past few years have been sent from one trouble spot in Europe to another, are settling down for the moment in Portugal. Mr. Elbrick has just been named American Vice Consul at Lisbon.

Formerly assigned to our embassy in Poland, Mr. Elbrick spent last winter in Angers, France, seat of the exiled Polish government. Mrs. Elbrick and their baby son were with him until the Germans came into France in June, whereupon Mrs. Elbrick and the baby dashed to Portugal. They have been there ever since, while the head of the house was sent first to one Spanish city and then another to help with the overwhelming visa work for refugees.

The Elbricks—she is the daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Alfred Johnson, of Washington—have had one exciting experience after another in recent years. They were in Prague when that city was taken over, and were then sent to Warsaw, from which they escaped later amid falling bombs. Mrs. Johnson expects that Mrs. Elbrick will remain in Lisbon with her husband.

R. M. Joneses, Recently Wed, To Live Here

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Marlin Jones, who were married November 1, will make their home at 1930 K Street. The bride is the former Miss Lucie Mai Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Turner of Antioch, Tenn., and Mr. Jones is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Marlin Jones of Arlington, Va.

The wedding took place in the apartment of Mrs. Pearle Eaton of Washington in the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Jones and a few close friends. The bride, who was dressed in soldier blue with a corsage of gardenias, had as her only attendant Miss Grace Tyler. Elmer Cook, uncle of Mr. Jones, officiated. The Rev. Perry L. Mitchell officiated.

Rita Meyer Is Betrothed

Announcement has been made by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Crowley of Greenwich, Conn. of the engagement of Mrs. Crowley's daughter, Miss Rita Marie Meyer, to Thomas E. Murray, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Murray of Brooklyn and Southampton, L. I.

Miss Meyer was graduated from the Academy of the Sacred Heart in New York and attended Finch Junior College. Her fiance was graduated from Georgetown Preparatory School and attended Georgetown University. He is a second lieutenant in the Ordnance Reserve of the United States Army and is on active duty at the Frankford Aresenal, Philadelphia.

Mrs. Adams Plans Party

Mrs. Foster Adams will entertain at a dinner party prior to the Chamber Music Guild Quartet concert at the Carlton on November 10.

The concert, which starts at 8:45 o'clock was originally scheduled for this evening but was postponed because of election.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

WELL, THAT'S OVER.

I don't know what we will talk about any more, but almost any topic will be better than the election. It will be a relief to start chatting again about the less serious things of life—if the war will let us.

For one thing, I imagine we shall soon start talking about more and more young men who have been summoned into military service, either under the Selective Service and Training Act or into the organized reserves and National Guard as further units are called up. From all angles, it looks like a less frivolous season is upon us, and hostesses are already resigning themselves to giving only "black-tie" parties this year.

MR. AND MRS. Albert Dewey have installed themselves comfortably in Mrs. J. Borden Harriman's house in Foxhall Road, and will entertain at dinner over the week-end for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dewey, who are coming on from Chicago. Charles is Albert's brother, and is one of the candidates for the House of Representatives whose fate in the election I have not been able to learn as yet.

Visiting a friend at the Union Memorial Hospital in Baltimore the other day I saw Miss Marie Wankowicz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Witold Wankowicz (he is the former counselor of the Polish Embassy here) looking very pretty and efficient in her nurse's uniform. She has finished her probationary experience of six months and is now undergoing the regular training. She told me that she likes the work and feels that she is getting along well.

IT HAS ALWAYS struck me how young diplomats, just as soon as they can get a leave of absence after taking their posts in Washington, feel obliged to take a long trip to California and back. They say these trips are invaluable to them in the way of teaching them the immensity of our great country and the charmingly hospitable habits of its population.

This is no doubt true and it is probably only a coincidence that their itinerary invariably includes a prolonged stay at Hollywood. The latest young diplomat to complete this obligatory tour of study is Fernando Sabgia de Medeiros, second secretary of the Brazilian Embassy. He was enthusiastically relating the wonders of his trip soon after his return to a group of friends, one of whom asked him what was the most interesting thing he had seen in his travels.

"Vivien Leigh," he replied without an instant's hesitation.

AMONG THE acceptances which have already been received for the dance Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett are giving later in the month for her daughter, Miss Elaine Darlington, is that of Mrs. King Mitchell, of Chicago. As Miss Ginevra King, she was one of the glamorous quartette of debutantes which included, as its other members, Miss Courtney Letts, who is now Mrs. Felipe A. Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, Miss Margaret Carry, who is now Mrs. Edward Cudahy, and Miss Edith Cummings, who is now Mrs. Curtis Munson. They were, and still are, good friends and I am told Chicago society remembers them as the most attractive group of girls to come out together in many a year.

Senora Espil Fetes Visitor At Tea Party

Senora de Guerrero Meets Varied Group At Embassy Affair

Leading Washington women who "do things" had an opportunity to meet an Argentine counterpart yesterday afternoon when Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine envoy, entertained for Senora de Martinez Guerrero. The latter arrived here a few days ago to preside over meetings of the Inter-American Commission of Women. She was accompanied by her subdeb daughter, who is named Senorita Ana Rosa after her charming mother.

The tea was held at the handsome Argentine Embassy on New Hampshire Avenue. The hostess and Senora de Martinez Guerrero received informally in the drawing room. Senora de Espil's black wool Molyneux Frock had a taffeta apron effect in front which tied in a bow behind, and was fashioned with a high neck and long sleeves.

Ladies of Embassy Assist Hostess

An arrangement of exotic blue flowers, which the hostess had chosen herself in a trip to the florists earlier in the day, centered the dining room table. There a group of ladies of the embassy staff took turns presiding over the sparkling silver tea service. Among those who poured were Senora de Pardo, wife of the new First Secretary of the embassy, who has just come to this country from Geneva, Switzerland; Senora de Zanni, wife of the Military Attache of the embassy; Senora de Godoy, wife of the Naval Attache, Senora de Scilingo, whose husband is Second Secretary, and Miss Louise Stillwell, daughter of Senora de Espil.

Mrs. Cordell Hull Among Those Present

In an effort to have her guest meet a representative group of Washington women the hostess had invited members of the press as well as wives of Government and diplomatic officials.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, called early in the afternoon and had a pleasant chat with the guest of honor.

Also invited were the wives of several Latin-American envoys, among them Senora de Guachalla, Senora de Pastoriza, Senora de Escalante, Senora de Boyd, Senora de Alfaro, Senora de De Bayle, Senora de Caceres and Senora de Castro.

Capital's Annual Society List Appears Today

Empires may tumble, campaigns may crumble but the Social List of Washington goes on.

The green-felt bound book, put out annually by Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner, has been issued for this and the coming year. Containing 193 pages—where social Washington is listed with address, family and telephone number—the book has a very interesting supplement. There you can find the answers to such burning questions as who precedes whom, which days diplomatic ladies receive and just how many cards to leave at a debutante party.

Designers Need Luxury Trade If New York Is to Supplant Paris Leadership, Press Told

Nettie Rosenstein, Fashion Expert, Talks To Newspaperwomen

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Post Club Editor.

Women who patronize art galleries and symphony orchestras must be fashion leaders if New York is ever to supplant Paris as the world's style center, Nettie Rosenstein told members of the Women's National Press Club yesterday.

Mrs. Rosenstein, who long ago crossed the "t" in tops as an American designer, declared textile manufacturers and those of related industries must think in other terms than those of mass production if this country is to dictate feminine fashions for the world.

The creative designers must be supported by a thriving luxury business in order to be able to provide leadership, she said. The cultured American woman who now "buys her clothes on the run, between a lecture luncheon and bridge" must learn to choose fine fabrics and designs and to take time to do it.

"I do not mean a $79 dress," said Mrs. Rosenstein. "I mean dresses from $125 to $400. Unless there is a market for fine clothes, this country will never replace Paris."

"Few and good" should be the slogan of the well-dressed woman, said Mrs. Rosenstein. "When the Parisian woman was called well dressed she had earned it by hours spent with her dressmaker, milliner and hairdresser."

Young women, she said, should be brought up with a conscious satisfaction in wearing good clothes, instead of always a passion for something new. It requires a real talent to look chic, she pointed out, and not necessarily many clothes or a great amount of money.

The "little black dress" for which she is famous resulted from her observation of the important part jewels played in the costume of the European woman, she said. She designed the basic black dress as a background for these and followed simplicity of line with the object of making the woman more important than the dress.

Designers need a constant stream of new fabrics as an inspiration for their work, said Mrs. Rosenstein. She urged that manufacturers who use the designers as a laboratory for their fabrics share the cost of experimentation by reserving materials for the luxury trade for a given time before allowing them to go into mass production.

In answer to questions from club members, she gave "14 to 16 inches, depending on the proportions of the individual" as the best dress length.

She said there was at present no definite silhouette.

After the tall, willowy models had displayed clinging gowns of draped and classic lines, several of the women of the press who were not the willowy type asked if there were any clothes

Mrs. Rosenstein assured them designed "for twice that size." Mrs. Rosentein assured them that there were.

Answering a companion question as to the advisability of too much dieting, she suggested consulting a doctor rather than a designer but admitted she thought women looked better when they were not so heavy.

Reminiscent of the visit of Elizabeth Hawes to the club a year ago, one of the members asked yesterday's guest what she thought of trousers.

"Slacks are all right in their place" she answered, adding that their place was the beach.

Granting not everyone could afford a "little black dress" ranging from $125 up, Mrs. Rosenstein advised women to buy the best kind of clothes they could afford and to emphasize quality rather than quantity.

Her own costume yesterday was a simple dress of woods brown with a jacket whose ornate fastenings provided the trimming. With it she wore a double strand necklace and a small hat set back on a high pompadour.

Mrs. J. Fred Essary, president of the club, presented among the guests at the head table, Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, who wore a green dress with a matching feather hat. Others were Mme. Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador; Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, wife of Associate Justice Frankfurter of the Supreme Court; Mrs. Claude Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Senator Hattie Caraway, Mrs. Montgomery Blair, Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, Grace Zaring Stone, Mme. Kaathoven and Mrs. George Pettingill, wife of Admiral Pettingill.

More Than Sentiment Required To Unity Americas, Cleric Says

Dr. Edwin Ryan, Secretary of Institute Of Ibero-American Studies, Gives Second in Series of Lectures at Shoreham

More than sentimental approach is needed to unify the countries of North and South America on a sound basis of cooperation, the Rev. Dr. Edwin Ryan, secretary of the Institute of Ibero-American Studies and professor of South American Ecclesiastical History at Catholic University, declared yesterday.

Giving the second in the series of Latin-American lectures at the Shoreham Hotel, Dr. Ryan asserted definite plans of cooperation were essential, such as trade advantages, exchange of students and professors, growing appreciation of the arts through appreciation of the music, painting and literature of the neighbor countries.

Several hundred persons attended the lecture and the luncheon following. Miss Mary E. Winslow, United States representative on the Inter-American commission of Women, presided at the lecture with Mrs. Howell Moorhead, chairman of the day, and Miss Minerva Bernardino, vice chairman of the commission, acting as vice chairman of the day.

Mrs. Max O. Lorenz, president of the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters, presided at the luncheon. In observance of election day and the principle of Latin-American friendship in which both Republicans and Democrats share a common interest, representative women of both groups were presented as honor guests.

Mrs. Cloyd H. Marvin, wife of the president of George Washington University, introduced the Republican group, which included: Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. Wade Ellis, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mrs. Frank Shortall, Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. William McCracken and Mrs. Richard Porter Davidson (granddaughter of Mark Hanna and niece of Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms).

Mrs. Curtis Shears introduced the Democratic women, among whom were Mrs. Marion Bannister, Assistant Treasurer of the United States; Mrs. Thurman Arnold, wife of the Assistant Attorney General; Mrs. Garland Ferguson, wife of the Federal Trade Commissioner; Mrs. Emil Schram, wife of the chairman of the board of directors of the RFC; Mrs. Arthur Condon, Democratic National Committeewoman from the District; Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, and Mrs. Charles J. Brand.

Other honored guests were Mrs. William Howard Taft, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. William E. Borah, and many prominent Latin American women, including Senora de Martinez Guerrero, chairman of the Inter-American Commission.

Three Needlework Organizations, Similar In Type and Name, Operate in D. C.

AT THIS SEASON, when the branches of the Needlework Guild of America throughout the country are announcing their annual meetings and ingathering of garments, there is some confusion in Washington because there are three organizations of the same type and almost the same name.

There is the Washington Branch of the Needlework Guild of America, of which Mrs. H. L. Wyman is president, and there is also a Chevy Chase Branch, which has announced its annual meeting of officers and directors for Friday of this week at 5 o'clock at the home of its president, Mrs. Charles B. Linganfelter.

Distinct from these is the First Needlework Guild of Washington, which, as its name implies, was organized before the others and opens its fifthieth year this week.

The guild was organized in 1889 by Mrs. Jane O. Mahon, with the Bishop of Washington as warden. This is the first season at the new Diocesan House, 1702 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

Among its distinguished past members were Mrs. William Woodward, Mrs. Oliver Wendell Holmes, Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page, Mrs. Mackey Smith, Mrs. Wallace Radcliffe, and Mrs. J. C. F. Bratenahl.

The purpose of the First Needlework Guild is to relieve individual needs for clothing, in distinction from the National Needlework Guild, which works with institutions. Thus the work of the two guilds is not competitive but complementary, and both are essential to the welfare of the community.

A small annual contribution of money, rather than a garment, entitles one to membership. This guild has found that with cash more can be accomplished through buying garments at wholesale than through gifts of clothing from individual members. Only new garments are used. A member may ask that aid be given to any case which she knows is worthy. The greatest demand has been for layettes, and women's and children's clothing.

The guild's capacity for giving is limited only by the size of its membership. And its officers have sent out a request for new members. Anyone who wishes to assist in its work may notify Mrs. William E. Safford, president; Mrs. Edmund H. Parry, vice president; Mrs. L. W. Eugster, treasurer; Mrs. William Wheatley, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. Elkins Reed, custodian of supplies; Mrs. Henry Ewing, recording secretary, or Mrs. B. L. Hardin, associate custodian.

Barracks Speeded For Fort Meade

Housing Construction Program Advanced Nearly a Week

By George W. Thorpe
Post Staff Writer

Maj. Gen. W. S. Grant, commander of the Third Corps Area of the Army, last night reported a construction speed-up at Fort George G. Meade, Md., assuring sufficient barracks for the first increment of selectives, November 27-28.

The stepped up program advances the housing schedule nearly a week. It had been expected wooden structures would not be ready until December 4, and trainees from the District, Maryland and Virginia would be forced to live in tent quarters.

The corps leader also declared the second induction of citizen soldiers will be postponed to prevent an overlapping with the first class. The second increment of soldiers will not go into uniform until after Christmas, he said.

Questionnaires Returned

Earlier the high command had considered holding the induction on schedule but having only a "short call," with few men going into service. On the Washington front, questionnaires in increasing numbers were returned to local boards and awaited classification. All questionnaires were expected to be returned by early next week and selection of men for Class 1-A, those of military caliber, will then be rushed in official board meetings.

Third Corps officials indicated also that trainees will have open for them a wide spread of assignments and careful examinations to determine their aptitude for particular Army branches.

After preliminaries such as the issuing of uniforms the "processing" will commence immediately, it was said. Men will be interviewed by personnel officers and be assigned to the military arms such as the new armored divisions, or specialized services such as the Signal Corps, according to their fitness.

Fort Myer to Get Them

Likelihood that some Washington men may journey only across the Potomac for their year's training was seen last week after the War Department announced the crack Third Cavalry, "Washington's Own" regiment, at Fort Myer, would be doubled in strength by the addition of selectives.

Local draft officials greeted with enthusiasm the announcement of Gen. Grant that the citizen soldiers from the Third Corps Area would find adequate barracks awaiting them.

Mindful of the influenza epidemics that killled hundreds of soldiers before they could reach France in the World War, it had been suggested the new soldiers drill at the local armory until housing was completed.

Government Stays Eviction of Posada And His Mother

The affair of Maurice Posada has been settled to the entire satisfaction of Posada, the entire American University student body and the Department of Justice.

Maurice won't be evicted summarily from the United States to his home in Colombia. He will remain at least until July 1, pursuing his studies at American University, and his mother will remain as well.

The hue and cry which arose on the campus out Nebraska Avenue way when it was learned Posada had been ordered to leave the country has subsided. Immigration authorities yesterday, after talking things over with 18-year-old Maurice, changed his expired visitor's visa to a student's visa expiring July 1 and, for good measure, swapped his mother's transient visa for a visitor's visa good until the same date.

THESE GIRLS ARE WHIZZES at FIGURES!

THE HECHT CO. STAFF OF EXPERT CORSETIERES!*

You and your next door neighbor may be the very same in height. You may both weigh the very same number of pounds down to the last ounce. Yet a perfectly wonderful foundation for her . . . may be altogether wrong for YOU! That's why we put so much stress on the fitting of foundations. That's why our corsetieres must be thoroughly trained before we will permit them to fit you. These girls of The Hecht Co. Corsetiere Staff have been through a special Corsetiering School. Their experience has been so vast that they can practically "size you up" at sight. But they take nothing for granted. We permit no foundation garment to be tried on you before we take your measurements . . . please bear with us on this point, even though you feel certain of the size and model you should have.

We think so much of the importance of proper fitting, we've just greatly amplified our Corset Shop to make room for a dozen more spacious, more pleasant fitting rooms, as well as one where we can competently and comfortably take care of the woman with a surgical problem. Be you tall and slender or short and not-so-slender or the perfect epitome of the perfect figure, leave it to our "figure whizzes" to see that your foundation is properly fitted.

Anacostia Citizens Ask Bus Changes

Universal Transfers, Express Service, Lower Fare Sought

Proposed changes in transit routes to permit transfers between competing lines, but maintaining the 10-cent fare, yesterday drew fire from Anacostia residents.

"We want universal transfers, 8½-cent fares and express service downtown," said William A. Duvall, chairman of the Southeast Council of Citizens' Associations, in a hearing before the Public Utilities Commission, attended by about 50 citizens.

He denounced a plan of the Washington, Marlboro & Annapolis bus line and the Capital Transit Co. to permit transfer from one service to another at higher fares as "an effort to divide the residents of East Washington."

"The proposal," he declared, "attempts to split us up by offering part of what we ask without giving improved service or fares on a par with those in other parts of the city."

Maintenance of existing express lines to downtown Washington by the W., M. & A. and the addition of short lines in the Barney Circle and Ridge Road areas were sought by Frank P. Randolph, president of the Bradbury Heights Citizens Association.

He emphasized that his association "never proposed a plan that will be detrimental to the long-term interests of the W., M. & A., but only sought improvement of service and reduction of rates to those prevailing in other parts of Washington."

Indorsement of the proposals submitted by Randolph was announced by Cecil A. Jones, who appeared as a resident of the area which would be affected by the transit changes.

James P. Donovan and S. R. Bowen, attorneys for Washington, Marlboro & Annapolis Lines and the Capital Transit Co., respectively, explained their organizations had worked out the plan in an effort to give residents what they sought on a basis economically sound for the utilities.

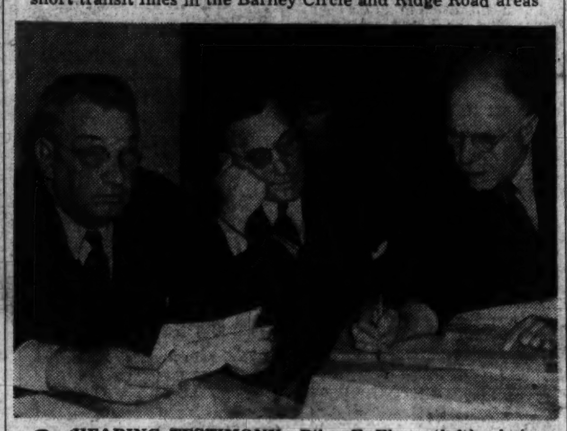
Opponents of the companies' plan were in agreement that "it is a crime that residents of a community three miles from the Capitol should have to pay 40 cents a day to get to and from work."

They were aroused because travelers to downtown Washington must pay fare both on the W., M. & A. and on the Capital Transit Co. lines.

Also represented at the hearing were the Hillcrest, Summit Park, Randle Highlands and North Randle Community Citizens Associations.

Citizens Seek Transit Changes From P. U. C.

1. MORE SHORT LINES—Frank P. Randolph, president of the Bradbury Heights Citizens Association, yesterday asked the Public Utilities Commission for additional short transit lines in the Barney Circle and Ridge Road areas



2. HEARING TESTIMONY—Riley E. Elgen (left), chairman of the Public Utilities Commission; Commissioner McCoach and Frank D. Sager, chief engineer for the P. U. C., heard requests of citizens for changes in transit routes and extension of lines

3. THE CROWD—Residents of East Washington attended the hearing to back up requests of their leaders and protested a plan which would continue 10-cent fares to permit transfers between competing lines

Gen. Somoza's Daughter Robbed Of 2 Rings Here

Lillian Somoza, 18-year-old daughter of Gen. Anatasio Somoza, president of Nicaragua, reported to police yesterday that a thief had pilfered her room at Gunston Hall, where she is a student, and stolen two diamond rings valued at $400.

Miss Somoza.

Miss Somoza said the rings disappeared from a dresser drawer in her fourth-floor bedroom sometime over the week-end.

She reported one was a solitaire diamond weighing between one and two karats and the other contained a cluster of eight stones.

Cars Hit 4 Pedestrians, 2 Bicyclists

Another District Resident Critically Hurt When Struck In Prince Georges

Four pedestrians and two bicyclists were struck by automobiles and sent to hospitals here yesterday while another Washington resident was critically hurt when he was struck by a car in Maryland.

Albert F. Roberts, 13, of 1039 Fifth Street Northwest, and James Andrew Proctor, colored, 14, of 2122 Alabama Avenue Southeast, were injured on bicycles.

The Roberts boy suffered a severe injury and possible fracture of the leg when struck at Sixth Street and Morton Place Northeast. He was taken to Casualty Hospital by James A. King, colored, 36, of 1159 Oates Street Northeast, who was listed by police as driver of the car that struck him.

Bicyclist Skids Into Path

The Proctor boy's bicycle, police reported, skidded into the path of a car driven by Edward J. Schauermann, 35, of 41 T Street Northeast, in the 3200 block of Alabama Avenue Southeast. He was taken to Casualty Hospital with possible skull and shoulder fractures.

Pedestrians injured were:

Carolyn Hastings, 8, of 502 F Street Northeast, struck near her home by a driver listed by police as William L. Jackson, 27, of 1236 Raum Street Northeast, and she was taken to Casualty Hospital with a possible collarbone fracture and shoulder injuries.

Man, 70, Is Struck

Bandits Get $138 in Three Holdups Here

A colored man with a gun confronted John L. Bucher, 23, manager of a gas station at 140 Florida Avenue Northeast, last night, locked him up in the restroom, and left with $50. Bucher lives at 432 Tenth Street Northeast.

Two men robbed David H. Frush, 48, of 1443 Sheridan Street Northwest. They were arrested before a lookout could be broadcast for them.

Frush said he was forced from his automobile at Fifth Street and Florida Avenue Northeast by two men whom he had met at a Maryland club. They stole $80 and his car, he said.

While detectives were talking to Frush, two Traffic Bureau policemen stopped a speeding car at Fourth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, and found Frush's overcoat and wallet in the car.

Samuel Dowdy, 27, of Wilson, N. C., was robbed of $8 by a colored man while he was walking in the 200 block, Massachusetts Avenue Northeast, he reported. The bandit held a knife, he said.

Searchlight Beam Over the White House Tells Cheering Throngs 'Champ' Is Still There

DEMOCRATS OPTIMISTIC—REPUBLICANS AWAIT VERDICT—Mrs. Paul Hammacher, pictured last night at Democratic headquarters in the Burlington Hotel, was ready to sell tickets to a victory dance at the hotel tonight. Meanwhile, at Willkie-McNary Club headquarters, Fifteenth and H Streets Northwest, Republicans watched the election returns posted, awaiting a last-minute turn of events

A searchlight's clear beam—which had been fixed to swerve from over the White House—should the Democrats' majority slip—remained stationary in proof through last night that the Champ was still there.

It was a wild night when Democrats in the Nation's Capital slapped Democrats' backs; when New Dealers shook New Dealer's hands; when crowds in night clubs yelled or groaned into their highballs; when a crowd of 4,000 men and women banked into Pennsylvania Avenue to hear The Post's returns and cheer above the death-gurgle of the American two-terms-for-a-President tradition.

The Post drew the biggest crowd in town, said police who, anticipating big crowds, considerable drinking and enough excitement to raise the tempers and blood pressures of a voteless city, had assigned 46 detectives to hotels, theaters and other places of public assemblage.

Caution was overplayed, for once. "Fewer drunks than usual," the police said at midnight. Not a fist fight nor a new-born baby in a hospital that might be named "Third-Term Roosevelt Smith" had been reported. There was a dearth of election night traditional incidents on this night when the big tradition died.

But there was enough spirit at the Republican Willkie campaign headquarters, Fifteenth and H Streets, for rousing hails and farewells to the contender.

Faithful Willkie supporters, maintaining stout composure, packed the headquarters after midnight and pressed backward on a crowd in the street. Like college alumni whose team is forced back from its goal, they found heart none the less to cheer when a gain in some quarter of play was scored.

Their cheers for the man they had worked for since the Philadelphia convention were as ringing as those from the Democrats, who alternately danced, listened to returns and slapped one another's tuxedoed backs in a gay adjoining labyrinth of rooms in the Burlington Hotel.

The Democrats, at 10:30 p. m., rallied a committee and dispatched a telegram hopefully to the Wardman Park Hotel urging Secretary Wallace, their candidate for Vice President, to come down and join the party or the dance or hear the election returns or present a back that would afford a real prominence for slapping.

At midnight Wallace had not appeared, but the crowd grew and the Victory Dance got hot and with a promise of lasting until daylight.

Meanwhile, the crowd grew, too, in front of The Post and noisier as the wave of Democratic votes mounted and rolled. It was possible that some of the increased volume of cheering was lent by the bandwagon leapers, encouraged to whoop and holler as the returns indicated the winner—an old election night custom.

What About Al Smith?

Very probably as many as 40,000 persons took advantage of The Post's election party. As one section of the crowd left, a new section of faces came in. There was no falling away of attendance.

Ten girls at telephones served the public calling this paper. Among the questions were:

"Who is leading?"

"Roosevelt, by about a million."

"Oh well, what's a million."

Again: "Was Al Smith put up for President by the Democrats or the Republicans?"

A feminine Willkie admirer, hearing returns from one State exclaimed, "Oh, goody, goody, Willkie is coming up!"

A man, who said his home was in Plymouth, England, inquired "How is the polling going, what, what?" How he felt about it was obscured in a parting "cheerio."

Some inquirers wanted to know whether the inaugural ceremony grandstand on the Capitol Plaza would be used last night. At least, who would use it in January was apparent before midnight, these callers were told.

A hundred canes for the blind have been presented by Art Brown, radio announcer, to the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind, 108 H Street Northwest, F. S. Hufty, secretary, announced yesteday.

Citizens Vote Traffic Ticket Fixing Probe

Legislators Intercede For Illegal Parkers, Columbia Heights Association Is Told

An investigation of "fixing" of traffic tickets through the intercession of Congressmen was voted last night by the Columbia Heights Citizens Association.

George H. Brown, chairman of the organization's public safety committee, told the meeting, held at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, 1410 Columbia Road Northwest, that "several" Congressmen recently had used their influence to have illegal parkers dismissed with a warning. His resolution to look into the matter was adopted unanimously.

The association also reiterated its support of municipal parking garages, and said one was needed particularly at Fourteenth Street and Columbia Road Northwest.

Protesting the omission of a Fire Department representative from the District Defense Council, the association voted to write a letter to the Commisioners and to William Knudsen, of the Defense Commission, urging the appointment of Stephen Porter, chief engineer of the Fire Department.

In other resolutions, the group agreed to oppose any tax on District citizens for maintenance and operation of the Gravelly Point Airport, which was described as strictly a national project; to seek installation of traffic lights at Fourteenth Street and Park Road and at Fourteenth Street and Columbia Road Northwest similar to those at Thirteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, and to find out why work lags on a recreation center at Sixth and Lamont Streets Northwest.

Southeast Council

Chairmen of seven committees were named by the Southeast Citizens Council last night, meeting at Eleventh Precinct Police Station.

Those chosen were Ernest J. Read, educational; Ernest Absher, streets and bridges; William A. Duvall, public utilities; Charles C. Gillkin, traffic; Henry W. Austin, public reservations and recreational facilities; J. J. MacGregor, fire and police protection, and Frank P. Randolph, law and legislation.

The council adopted a resolution calling for traffic lights on M street southeast at the intersections of Fourth, Eighth and Eleventh Streets.

The membership committee reported winners of a membership contest sponsored by the council as Lincoln Park Citizens Association, first with 82 new members in the three-month period; North Randle Highlands Community Citizens, second with 56, and Anacostia Citizens, third with 42.

4-Year-Old Gateway Citizens Group Acquires Ambulance to Serve Northeastern Area

This is the thirty-eighth article in a series about citizens' associations in the District of Columbia and their efforts to make the community a better place in which to live.

A new ambulance to serve northeast Washington is the latest accomplishment of the 4-year-old National Gateway Citizens Association.

EVANS

The ambulance will be put into service next week, it is expected.

"Accident victims in the area frequently have to wait more than an hour for medical help now," President Everett Evans said yesterday.

The young organization is also responsible for current improvements to Langdon and Loomis Parks and a proposed addition to Elliott Junior High School, Seventeenth and B Streets Northeast, promised for next year.

Efforts of the National Gateway unit this fall are being concentrated on three needed projects in the National Training School sector. Members first hope to obtain an elementary and junior high school for the area, with the Mount Olivet and Bladensburg Roads corner as the proposed site.

Second aim of the association is to secure a branch library for the neighborhood in the abandoned No. 26 Engine House, on Twenty-second Street Northeast between Franklin and Evarts Streets.

Members are petitioning for crosstown bus service. At present, residents of this section must transfer two or three times to get downtown, Evans explained.

Zoning regulations present a perennial problem in the Gateway area. It is now zoned A and B Residential. As yet there are no row houses in the territory. Periodically, the association has had a fight to keep out commercial establishments and multifamily dwellings.

Members favor national suffrage for the District, but "they are not violent about it," one officer said. The majority have no complaint to make about the District government, however, and have not petitioned for local suffrage.

At their first meeting of the season last month, the citizens asked the Commissioners to reopen the $100,000 District testing station at Second and Bryant Streets Northwest and for appropriations for an eye specialist for Washington school children.

Meetings are held on the second Monday of each month in the Church of Christ, Twenty-eighth and Douglas Streets Northeast.

Besides Evans, the officers include Bennett G. Miller, vice president; Mrs. Marie C. Nold, secretary; Virginia O. Evans, assistant secretary; Lulyn M. Green, financial secretary, and Walter S. Ahlberg, treasurer.

Delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations are President Evans and Mrs. Nold. Those to the Northeast Conference are Green and J. Fairburn.

O'Neill's Screen Score Doubled by New Picture

'Long Voyage Home' Combines Short Plays; Three Warners in Search of a Clergyman; This, That and the Other About the Theater

HOLLYWOOD MAY DEEM itself omniscient, but certainly it can lay no valid claim to omnipotence—at least in the exercise of its persuasive powers over two of the most distinguished practitioners of the American theater. Katharine Cornell, ardent moviegoer that she is, never has succumbed to the blandishments of the films, nor has Eugene O'Neill, one of the foremost, even if not the most prolific, of our native playwrights. While Miss Cornell's image has never been seen upon the silver sheet, O'Neill's plays occasionally have found their way into the cinema. Up to the present season, his adapted works were only four. Now that number is doubled by virtue of a single picture.

BELL

It is, of course, Walter Wanger's production of "The Long Voyage Home," opening at RKO-Keith's Theater on Friday, that we have in mind. With characteristic skill, Dudley Nichols has translated four of O'Neill's one-act plays of the sea into the celluloid subject that has aroused such enthusiastic critical comment wherever it has been shown. Director John Ford is said to have achieved one of his major triumphs in the fashioning of this film.

The four short O'Neill plays that have been incorporated into its action are "Moon of the Caribees," "Bound East for Cardiff," "In the Zone" and "The Long Voyage Home," from which, naturally, the screen play derives its title. The only O'Neill plays previously adapted to the cameras are "Ah, Wilderness," "Anna Christie," "The Emperor Jones" and "Strange Interlude"—with no thought to the chronology of their picturization.

As in the case of the comparatively recent "Strange Cargo," the cast of "The Long Voyage Home" is preponderantly masculine. The principal roles are played by Thomas Mitchell, John Wayne, Ian Hunter, John Qualen, Wilfred Lawson, Barry Fitzgerald and Carmen Morales—a pretty handsome crew, if you ask us. And even if you don't.

With the ribald goings-on of "Glamour Preferred," at the National, still banging away at the funnybone, it is incomprehensible to this typewriter how Irene Cortlett escaped mention in yesterday's review of the hit comedy, even in the rush of an early deadline. In the role of Angela Vaughn, the play's costar with Kerry Eldredge, Miss Cortlett contributes more than a little to the play's more provocative interludes. If she had nothing more than the bathing-suit scene, her presence in the cast would be indelibly imprinted upon every susceptible memory.

⇔

The Washington Variety Club, Tent No. 11 in the national organization, has its finger in more pies than that Connecticut Co., with the slenderized wagons. In addition to its annual banquet and ball, less than two weeks away—which promises to outdo all of its predecessors—it is running a special train to the Redskins-New York Giants football game at the Polo Grounds on Sunday, November 24. The excursion will leave Washington at 8 a. m., returning at 11:30 p. m. Round trip tickets, good on this train only, are priced at $3.75. Reserved seats for the game, to the number of 300, are being doled out at $2.20 per copy by Sidney Lust, chief barker of the club. Barkers Abe Lichtman, Carter Barron, Harry Brown and Archie Engel will be "kings for the day"—and, boy, will they have their hands full!

⇔

A new producer appears on the motion picture scene with "Hullabaloo," the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle for Frank Morgan and an ace comedy cast, opening on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater tomorrow. He is Louis K. Sidney, who fulfilled the Horatio Alger legend by coming up the hard way. He began his theatrical career as water boy at the old Hippodrome Theater in New York. He broke into the then-new business of exhibiting moom pitchers by opening his own nickelodeon back in 1912, subsequently managing theaters in St. Louis, Denver, Pittsburgh and way stations and, in 1929, being put in charge of Loew's theaters' stage shows for the entire country. In 1934, Sidney took over the management of broadcasting station WHN and promptly yanked it up to the top of the heap—with the assistance of Gene Ford, menaging director of the Capitol. His Hollywood recognition comes along surprisingly overdue.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Philadelphia, Nov. 5 (INS).—One of the biggest and certainly one of the most expensive pictures of the year for Twentieth Century-Fox will be "The Eagle Flies Again," which will have Don Ameche and Henry Fonda in the starring spots. The war aviation cycle is on full force in Hollywood and this particular story, by Robert Hopkins and Martin Hudson, has a terrific background for Uncle Sam's audiences—plus our Canadian neighbors as well. It is based on the exploits of the adventurous young Americans known as the Eagle Squadron who signed up to fly with the Royal Air Force.

PARSONS

Actual scenes of the boys training in Canada and in action in England will be photographed on the spot by newsreel camermen. Also negotiations are under way with the Canadian Royal Air Force for the use of 30 of the latest type bombers. Both Don and Hank Fonda are in for a long location jaunt to Canada—but Henry King, the director, is sure to have a good time. He's an expert flyer and one of Hollywood's biggest air enthusiasts.

⇔

Rita Johnson walked out of "Maisie Was A Lady," the Ann Sothern picture—which may or may not lead to a suspension by M.-G.-M. Never heard of so many studio rows as there are lately. As we hear the story, Rita, who just recently announced her engagement to Stanley Kahn, felt the role in the new "Maisie" was not important enough, and when that excuse didn't hold up, her doctor said she was too nervous to work. Meantime, Joan Perry has replaced her—and we shall see what we shall see about future developments in this battle.

Snapshots of Philadelphia and Hollywood Collected at Random: Marjorie Weaver, who has just finished a personal appearance in Detroit, and Tom (All-America) Harmon are the hottest twosome of the week; there'll be no big row between George Raft and Warners over his refusal to do "The Sea Wolf." But just so there won't be any misunderstanding George is in Oakland for a few days and doing no talking to reporters; Gene Raymond is reading a Broadway show called "World Premiere" which has a Hollywood background.

Following that attack in the lobby of a Chicago theater, Cecil De Mille returned to Hollywood on the streamliner under escort of a personal bodyguard; Hattie Silverman, owner of Variety, came backstage to see me and said she thought our show was the best she'd seen. She's doing a column called "The Skirt" and wrote such a nice review about our show; Claire Trevor will do the femme lead in Sam and Bela Spewack's new play which Max Gordon is producing.

Photogs snapped so many pictures of Lana Turner rhumbaing with George Raft Saturday at Ciro's the dancers could hardly reach the floor. But don't get excited—Tony Martin was there to claim her after one number! Chester Morris will be married to Lillian Barker sometime this month; Gene Markey has been buying Lucille Ball dinner at the Holly Tropics; Arline Judge gets gack in Hollywood today after a short jaunt to New York; Gene Tierney looks so much like K. Hepburn off the screen and wears her hair exactly the same way; hear the love scenes between Melvyn Douglas and Roz Russell in "This Thing Called Love" have the most scorching dialogue so far.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Nov. 5.

Edgar Selwyn, who will produce "The Adventure of Pierre," sent East recently for a print of a film based on his play "Pierre of the Plains," which was made in 1912, if you can remember back that far, and in which both Edgar and Joe Schenck appeared. But somebody in Hollywood beat him to it (he suspects Joe Schenck wanted to show it to his rumba partners), for yesterday he got a wire saying the film had already been sent out here. "Whoever has it will get plenty of laughs. If you think Joe Schenck as a Captain of the North West Mounties is funny—you ought to see me as a half-breed Indian!" said Edgar, with a laugh. But that was a grand role, and Edgar really was a matinee idol.

⇔

Jean Arthur, who did a fine job on the air in "Jezebel," finally got her wish. She was offered the play before Miriam Hopkins ever did it on Broadway, and has always wanted to do it on the radio. She wouldn't allow cameramen at her broadcast, however. Wonder why?

⇔

"Rochester" is giving Boss Benny some stiff competition. He's got two prize fighters, a yacht, limousine, station wagon, and now is learning to fly his own plane. But he hasn't forgotten when he used to swap recipes with Nate, the chef at Yucca Loma.

⇔

Gilbert Roland and Charlie Farrell have planned some swell tennis tournaments at their Racquet Club in Palm Springs, which they hope will outshine Forest Hills. Alice Faye is visiting the Farrells, with her two pups—"Take" and "Retake."

Jesse Lasky's "Quiet, Please" which opens the Theater Guild in New York, Friday, November 8, has its Biltmore audience in stitches. Fred Niblo, who plays a director, and was one of our top directors, divides the audience in sections and tells one group to shout "Bravo," another to yell "Author," and then says, "You extra down there, who looks like Jack Benny, and this Billie Burke one over here—I want you to put some fire in your voice and stand up and shout 'Speech!'" And of course he points to the real people in the audience. The silent picture star called Gloria, beautifully played by An Mason, goes to see a silent Valentino picture—is awfully upset when audience laughs. The picture happens to be "Blood and Sand," which Fred Niblo actually directed.

Of course, Gloria Swanson will be in the audience opening night in New York, and Niblo will undoubtedly get a great reception, because many years ago he was the hit of Broadway in George M. Cohan's play "Hit the Trail Holiday." The whole performance

All Destroyers At San Juan Leave Base

Destination Unrevealed; U. S. Concern Lessens Over Martinique

While Secretary Hull was indicating, at his press conference yesterday, a lessening of American anxiety about French possessions in the Caribbean area, word came from Puerto Rico that the entire United States destroyer force based at San Juan had weighed anchor and sailed for an undisclosed destination.

Last night, for the first time in many years, the harbor at San Juan was entirely without warcraft, the International News Service reported.

Secretary Hull said naval and other activities by this Government were only a part of usual precautions.

He still withheld the contents of the message received Monday from Marshal Henri Petain in reply to a communication from President Roosevelt. Mr. Roosevelt's message concerned French policy in connection with the French negotiations with Germany and Italy.

Hull referred to various reports about the French islands in the Caribbean and minimized American naval activities in that region.

He said the truth was that the Government was carrying on conversations with France and other countries regarding commercial and other questions; that a regular patrol was maintained along the American coasts and ship training carried on. Apart from that, he said he knew of nothing special regarding Martinique and other French territory.

He added that the United States was observing developments on these islands.

Texas Produces A 'War Baby'—It's Toluene

Austin, Tex. (AP).—Texas gas and oil fields now are providing the last "war baby" chemical, toluene.

Toluene is a basic ingredient of TNT. Until recently, it has been obtained only as a coal-tar by-product. Now two Texas plants are being equipped to produce it from petroleum.

Elmer H. Johnson, industrial geographer in the bureau of business research of the University of Texas, estimated the Shell Oil Co. plant at Houston will ultimately produce 2,000,000 gallons annually. By a supplementary process the output can be stepped up to 7,000,000, he said.

Humble Oil & Refining Co. also is establishing a unit for production of toluene at its Baytown, Tex., plant.

Johnson said other industries in Texas are ready to supply important chemicals if normal production centers are cut off from this country.

Union Carbide and Carbon Corporation's plant may make synthetic organic chemicals from refinery gases. The Dow Chemical Co. is building a plant to produce magnesium from sea water and organic chemicals from petroleum gases.

It's Roosevelt, N. Y. Papers Say

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—The midnight edition of the New York Times conceded tonight that President Roosevelt had been reelected and also was carrying New York State.

The Times, which supported President Roosevelt in 1932 and 1936, backed Wendell Willkie.

The New York Herald Tribune, which supported Wendell L. Willkie in the Presidential campaign, also conceded the reelection of President Roosevelt.

The New York Daily Mirror, which supported Wendell L. Willkie in the Presidential campaign, conceded the reelection of President Roosevelt tonight at 11:58 (E. S. T.)

James Roosevelt Votes on Coast

Beverly Hills, Calif., Nov. 5 (AP).—James Roosevelt, son of the President, cast his ballot today at a polling place a few blocks from his home, voting the Democratic ticket straight.

He leaves Thursday to assume his post as captain in the Twenty-second Marine Reserve Battalion at San Diego.

New York, Nov. 5.

". . . and you're not going to change your clothes before going out? well, look at yourself . . . What, dear? . . . The coat's from London? Yes; go on—the tie's from Paris, jacket from Mexico, handkerchief from Italy, shoes from Hollywood—yes, and you're from hunger, G'night."

11 p. m. Jimmy Walker, at the Plaza, is shown a newspaper account of Samuel Seabury's speech. "I want to know one thing," Walker replies. "When will Samuel Seabury do something constructive to get his name into the newspapers, without coupling it with mine? . . . "Well, after all these years, I've finally taken up golf," J. Edgar Hoover admits at Toots Shor's. "I visited Yellowstone Park, and saw Shirley Temple—who got me to try it. So we played golf—and Shirley beat me."

He seemed distressed, when we withdrew his amendment." . . . "ASCAP's fight against BMI will be affected this week," a music publisher reports at the Polish Restaurant. 2 a. m. "Leland Hayward," a producer informs at Leon & Eddie's, "is arranging an aviation post with the defense board" . . . Of course it's a sacrifice. Because it's the first job I've ever taken where there's no opportunity for a raise."

Barton Defeated, Fish Reelected, Martin Has Lead

"Martin, Barton and Fish," the three Republican Representatives whom President Roosevelt derided in some of his late campaign speeches, met with varying degrees of success in their own campaigns.

Representative Barton was defeated in his effort to unseat Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, but Representative Fish was reelected to the House from President Roosevelt's home district.

Hardy Steeholm, who had Mr. Roosevelt's personal support on the Democratic ticket, was defeated by Fish.

Grim Reaper Elects To Call D.C. Man as He Seeks Returns

Louis Northan, 65, of 940 K Street northwest, was found dead on the second floor steps of the residence by a neighbor, Harry Kline.

Kline told police that a few minutes earlier he had met Northan coming down from the third floor and that Northan had said, "I'm going down the street to get the election returns."

Northan was pronounced dead by an Emergency Hospital ambulance doctor, who ascribed the death to a heart attack.

U-Boats Peril 'Life of State,' Churchill Says

Nation Is Warned To Expect 'Heavier Attack' Next Year

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 5.—The people of Britain's island, dependent on their ships for their very existence, were told frankly today by Prime Minister Churchill that the increasing U-boat menace, if not stopped, will "touch the life of the state."

In a sober Commons war review, Churchill declared the loss of more and more ships to German submarines was not a bit less formidable than the unending siege by air and warned "we must expect that next year a still heavier U-boat attack will be made upon us."

But, he promised, "we are making immense preparations of all kinds to meet them," and he counseled Britain to look forward to offensive campaigns "in 1943 and 1944."

He spoke bitterly, nevertheless, of the fact that Britain's warships and planes cannot refuel at the ports of neutral Ireland and said this "is a most heavy and grievous burden."

Pledges "Best Aid" to Greece

[A vigorous demand for British bases in Eire came immediately from representatives of all parties and from the press, the United Press said.

[Leslie Hore-Belisha, former war minister, voiced the general sentiment when he said:

["If it is possible for the British Empire to hand over bases to America, it is possible without any loss of prestige for Ireland to give us back bases we once held.]

In other categories, the Prime Minister:

Pledged "we shall do our best" to help Italian-invaded Greece from naval and air bases established on the Island of Crete and promised "ever-growing" British bombings of southern Italy, but he refused to "raise false hopes" or tip off the Axis on specific measures of aid.

Air Raid Dead 14,000

Declared the Vichy government of France had "unhappily" decided to collaborate with Hitler and "we are therefore left alone" in aiding the Greeks, although France likewise was pledged to help them.

Disclosed civilian air raid dead in England totaled 14,000, the wounded 20,000; insisted the bombers had done little damage to aircraft or arms factories; asserted the R.A.F. was destroying three German planes to one British loss and that the Germans were losing from 6 to 10 pilots for every British airman killed.

Predicted British air power would protect and sea power would transport big British offensive forces "in 1943 and 1944;" declared Britain must have an army superior to the Axis in "quality and equipment" and asserted 1,700,000 men will be in uniform in Britain's Home Guard by the end of the year.

Said British vigilance had converted the invasion danger into an "invasion scare."

Comparable to World War's Worst

The background of Churchill's concern over the U-boat menace lay in part in the sinking, in a little more than a week, of the 42,348-ton Canadian merchant flagship Empress of Britain; the 18,724-ton armed merchant cruiser Laurentic, the 11-314-ton Patroclus, along with thousands of tons of smaller ships, many of them off Ireland.

In the two weeks ended October 28 the admiralty has admitted losses of nearly 215,000 tons of ships serving Britain, not counting the large vessels listed above. In unrestricted U-boat warfare of the World War the darkest month for Britain was April, 1917, when 600,000 tons of ships were lost.

The prime minister disclosed that Britain, in the last month, was at the lowest point of flotilla (destroyer) strength.

However, he said the 50 United States destroyers which Britain acquired are "rapidly coming into service just when they are most needed and the main flow of construction started at the outbreak of the war is now coming along."

2 Submarines Reported Sunk

The merchant marine, he added, is nearly as strong as it was when the war started, and he listed the sinking of two German submarines west of England in the last few days, one of them being the destroyer of the Empress of Britain.

A Reuters (British news agency) dispatch from Tangier today said a second Italian submarine, pursued by British destroyers, sought refuge in the harbon of Tangier last night. The first to anchor at Tangier, also had been chased by the British.

Reuters quoted "a reliable source" as reporting that three submarines had been sunk in the strait of Gibraltar.

Sidelight on the Voting

Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 5 (AP).—"Machine" politics took its toll in Iowa's election booths today.

A Cedar Rapids woman entered a voting machine, pulled the master lever without indicating her choices, and came out sobbing that she had lost her vote. Sympathetic election officials allowed her to try again.

In Cedar Falls, where voting machines were used for the first time, Democrats found a half hour after the polls opened that their printed instructions on how to use the machines carried the explanatory sentence "pull the Republican lever."

In one Waterloo precinct the election judges inadvertently left a "do not touch" sign hanging for ten minutes on the Republican county ticket lever. It was hung there last night while the machine was being checked.

Early Nebraska Vote Is Willkie's, 509-470

Lincoln, Nebr., Nov. 5 (AP).—Incomplete and unofficial returns from 13 Nebraska precincts in today's Presidential election give President Roosevelt 470 votes and Wendell Willkie 509.

Two of the precincts are in Gage County, normally Republican; 10 in Holt County, normally Democratic, and one in Frontier County, normally Republican.

Majority in Cabinet Mail Their Ballots

Cabinet members with homes in New York traveled there to vote yesterday but most of the others in President Roosevelt's official family cast absentee ballots.

Among those in New York are the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau, the Attorney General and Mrs. Jackson, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Walker and Secretary of Labor Perkins.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull mailed their ballots to Smith County, Tenn.

The Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Wickard mailed ballots to Carroll County, Indiana.

The two Republicans in the Cabinet—the Secretaries of War and the Navy—both traveled to their homes to vote.

Secretary and Mrs. Stimson went to Huntington, Long Island, and Secretary Knox went to Chicago.

Norman Thomas Votes, Terms Campaign 'Worst'

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Norman Thomas, Socialist Presidential candidate, cast his vote today with the observation that "this is the worst campaign in all my political memory, and that goes for both old parties."

"America still has a job ahead of her keeping out of war and also keeping fascism out of America," he said.

He is the oldest survivor of Gustav Lansburgh, one of the original founders of the store. Despite his seventy-five years, Mr. Sol Lansburgh is hale and hearty, and rarely misses a day at his desk

All three were admitted to citizenship in Trenton two months ago.

Hand From the Grave Pulls Down the Lever

Fairmont, Minn., Nov. 5 (AP).—A dead man's voice will be counted by election officials in this county tonight.

Hobart George Reynolds, 43, Manyaska farmhand, voted on an absent voter's ballot before submitting to an operation in a hospital here. He died this forenoon from gangrene.

The ballot had been forwarded by the county auditor to the Manyaska township election board where, officials have ruled, it will be counted, since Reynolds was alive at the time it was delivered.

Wyoming Voters Brave 13 Below

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 5 (AP).—Some Wyoming residents braved sub-zero temperatures to vote today.

Grover and Afton reported overnight minimums of 13 below.

Generally freezing temperatures were reported over the State in the wake of snowstorms yesterday.

Planes Can't Keep Up With Voters

Philadelphia, Nov. 5 (AP).—Air taxis shuttling Republican voters between Philadelphia and their home voting places within a 200-mile radius failed today to keep up with demands for the free service.

H. J. Noble, vice president of the Central-West Philadelphia Willkie-for-President Club, said 'we already have had more than 100 requests but we have estimated we will be able to take care of only about half that number."

Pilots are donating both their services and planes, Noble said.

Willkie Leads by 1,528 In Early Kansas Vote

Topeka, Nov. 4 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie held a lead over President Franklin D. Roosevelt in unofficial returns from 186 of Kansas' 2,734 precincts early this afternoon.

Willkie's total was 6,922 against 5,394 for Roosevelt.

Willkie Carries His Birthplace

Elwood, Ind., Nov. 5 (INS).—Elwood, the birthplace of Wendell Willkie, gave the Republican candidate a total of 3,411 votes to 2,875 for President Roosevelt, according to complete but unofficial returns tonight.

The town is normally Democratic.

Court Asked To Stop Alimony Of Mrs. McLean

The District Court yesterday was asked to stop the $7,500 a month alimony of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean and cancel $500,000 back alimony owed her by Edward B. McLean, former Washington sportsman and publisher.

Those to whom McLeans owes $350,000 in old debts would benefit by the action, it was stated.

Justice Bolitha J. Lews last June 28 ordered that the Cincinnati First National Bank, which McLean owes $45,000, be allowed to sue, in the name of McLean's committee, to eliminate or reduce Mrs. McLean's alimony. John J. Wilson, the committee, according moved yesterday to be allowed to appear in the McLean divorce action, which has been pending 10 years, for this purpose.

Wilson was represented by Attorney Spencer Gordon.

The Better Way to Correct Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and "cure" it afterward. The other way is to avoid having it by getting at its cause. So why not save yourself those dull headachy days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common-sense "ounce of prevention"?

If your trouble, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, "the better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it regularly—and drink plenty of water—you can not only get regular but keep regular, day after day and month after month! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

"JIVING WITH JARVIS," steaming record by Leader Al Spieldock of Paul Young's Romany Room, has hit the 100,000 sale mark in the six weeks since its release, according to advices from the Victor people. This is a top sales record for the last 12 years. Al made "Jiving With Jarvis" on the West Coast shortly before coming to Washington. . . . The Romany Room will present another new revue this evening. Incoming stars are Midgie Fellows, former singer with Phil Spitalny's all-girl orchestra, and Edith Dulaney who has just finished a tap-steppinng engagement at Leon and Eddie's in New York. That superb pianist, De Lloyd McKaye, remains—but naturally. Like Maestro Spieldock, De Lloyd makes records with records, is under a year's contract to turn out spinning platters.

Armistice Night will be celebrated at a de luxe shindig in the Wardman Park Metronome Room next Monday eve. Sonny James has a load of novelty music all ready for the party. This is the first Armistice Night fete to be announced, but there should be plenty of others. It's a holiday and celebrations are particularly appropriate at this stage of world history.

"TALKING TEAKETTLE" TELLS US OFF. Troika patrons are plumb dumfounded by Sonia Zaranoff and her "talking teakettle." It's the plainest old teakettle ever and we defy you to find anything offside about it, even if you poke your fingers down the spout (which we did). But it mumbles and mutters the most amazing information. We asked Sonia to go out of the room, then told the teakettle that it was abandoned and what was it going to do about it. The kettle responded in a charming but ironic barytone, "I shall place myself under your care, Mary Harris." Imagine being kidded by a kitchen utensil! We think it was the spirit of that Russian Lothario who killed Olga, original owner of the kettle, back in 1742.

JIMMY (BEAMING) BRIGHT, Lotus' drummer-composer-bassist, has written a theme song for the Heurich's Brewery football team we hear from Walter James, business manager of the eleven. It's "Roll Along With the Brewers," has a swing that should help the Heurich boys to roll up big scores . . . Hold your hats! Something special will happen at Lotus very soon.

THE NEW OLD CAKE WALK. Those exotic dancers, St. Clair and Day, of the Shoreham, have gone deep South on their public. They're doing an old-time cake walk to

BERT STEVENS, suave maestro of the Cafe Caprice

"Georgia Camp Meeting." But it's a glorified cake walk such as you've never seen before . . . Gloria Day's new white frock was gotten at the special request of the Shoreham's electrician. It seems that white lends itself perfectly to lighting effects.

Milt Herth, currently show-stopping at the Earle Theater, called up and gave us the glad news that he'll bring his Herthquakes back to the Neptune Room on December 7. The Herthians just finished a big four weeks at the Roxy Theater in New York.

ABOUT THE NIGHTINGALES. That harlequin frock worn by Dee Tracy at the Robin Hood is an exact duplicate of the one that appeared on the cover of Pic a few weeks ago. . . . The diamond dinner ring worn by Eileen George of the Anchor Room is a gift from her mother who recently divided up her jewelry between Eileen and her other daughters. . . . Ginny Braynard, the tiny firecracker with Ben Young's band in the Cosmos Room, tosses in gymnastics with her singing. We expect to see her turn handsprings any night. . . . Mayfair's Ruth McCullough is tossing pennies to decide whether or not she'll have her tonsils yanked. She's bothered about whether the operation will affect her voice. . . . Bonnie Boyd of the Mayflower Lounge not only sings "I'm Nobody's Baby" like Judy Garland, but caps it by looking like Judy. . . . Hi Hat patrons are insisting that Carmela Lazeri sing "Mama, Yo Quiero" a dozen times an evening. She does it superlatively, and in both English and Spanish.

"AMOUR COQUETTE," the lightly tantalizing theme song of the Rainbow Room orchestra, is due to hit the radio again tomorrow eve via the new WINX broadcast. The Rainbow band is especially adept on the air waves and you'll enjoy them.

YOU'LL WANT TO REMEMBER. That George Beattie opens tomorrow night at Del Rio and tonight is your last chance to laugh at and with Don Rice. . . . That the way to start conversation with that pretty Norwegian, Inga Rundvold, luncheon hostess at the New Bavarian, is to talk about bookkeeping. She's studying accounting at George Washington University. . . . That the Lounge Riviera thoughtfully gives little pitchers of water to patrons who like Scotch and water, so they can do their diluting with ease. . . . That the Gay Nineties does a blackout on Mondays and Tuesdays, but is going like a house afire every other day of the week, including Sunday.

River Bend's Wednesday "Piggie Parties" are among the most successful novelties ever presented in these parts. Started more than a year ago as an experiment, they've become a River Bend institution.

"WASHINGTON CALLING." Last Sunday we stopped in the WRC studios to see as well as hear "Washington Calling," felt as though we were in several night spots at once. For the King Cole Room's lovely Linda Carroll was doing radio chit-chat. There was Lou Williams of the Casino Royal band blowing a saxaphone for Morgan Baer. The Neptune Room's Gene Archer, rigged out as a redskin chief, was singing spirituals. Jean Cathon of La Salle Versailles was clowning all over the place. Ralph Hawkins, who used to be at Madrillon, was grinning over the drums. If you're at odd ends on Sunday afternoon, just stop by WRC and see these folks you enjoy on week-day evenings.

LIQUIDATION DEPARTMENT. The delicate Marchisio cocktail in the Pall Mall Room is named after Maitre d' Hotel Arthur Marchisio . . . The Harrington Tavern specializes in planters' punches made in the South American way . . . The champagne cocktails in Burt's Trans-Lux are not only delicious but priced right.

Workers Take Election Calmly, Holding It Doesn't Affect Them

Most Act as if They Don't Know Voting Is Going on, So Scrupulously Is Hatch Act Observed in Bureaus

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Employes in Washington's Government offices, many of them with jobs at stake in the Nation's balloting, yesterday appeared to be taking Election Day without show of strain.

Any impulses to take part during working hours in Election Day excitement were being controlled, and, as far as anyone reported, kept within the limits set out by the Hatch Act.

One official in the Civil Service Commission informally advanced the thesis that most employes made a point of acting as though they did not know an election was going on.

He cited, with a mild increase in formality, the existence of the merit system and pointed out that employes operating under this system could not think of themselves as being affected by the election outcome.

As an example of Government office atmosphere he pointed out that several employes were eating their lunches in the courtyard of the Civil Service Commission Building, historic structure at Seventh and F Streets Northwest.

The idea that employes did not know that an election was in progress was denied in other offices. These denials, however, offered no general description of how employes were behaving on election day.

In the Interior Department, a spokesman said happily that the office morale was "excellent," the office atmosphere was "clear" and "everyone was hard at work."

James McEntee, CCC director, announced, in effect, yesterday that the season on CCC campers was closed. His notice asked hunters to be careful when near CCC camps, and said:

"There have been relatively few serious or fatal accidents in the past because of the splendid cooperation of hunters in observing warning signs posted about CCC camps and work projects. Now that the hunting season is again in full swing there arises once more the danger of enrollees being within the range of hunters' guns. I have asked each camp to post warning signs within a mile in all directions of the camp and its work projects. If hunters will observe these signs, they will do much to minimize the danger of accidental injury to CCC enrollees."

Sheet metal workers and laundrymen are wanted for Civil Service jobs in the War Department, the Civil Service Commisison said yesterday.

The sheet metal worker jobs are open at Edgewood Arsenal, Md., with $8-a-day wages. The laundry jobs, paying $690 a year, will be at Fort Myer, Va.

The Navy Department unit of the Washington Community Chest will hold a rally for officers, enlisted men and employes, at 2:30 p. m. Friday in the sixth wing penthouse of the Navy Building. Assistant Secretary Compton and Col. Robert H. Fletcher, chairman of the unit speakers' committee, will head the program.

49 Become U. S. Citizens, 19 Repatriated

Citizenship Restored To Man Who Fought For Canada in 1915

Forty-nine men and women of many lands stood solemnly before Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat in District Court yesterday and swore allegiance to the United States.

Nineteen others, native born, whose citizenship was suspended for various reasons, renounced their temporary fealty to other countries and were repatriated.

"Today is election day throughout the United States, although in the District of Columbia we have no election," the venerable chief justice remarked to the new citizens. "My memory goes back many years and it has been my observation that almost always at the end of a hotly-contested political campaign there has developed a certain amount of bitterness of feeling.

"But it has also been my observation that whatever bitterness may have developed during the campaign, it is over as soon as the election returns have been counted.

"We are all painfully conscious of the wars which are going on in Europe today. Let us hope we will not be drawn into war, but if we are I know that after you have taken the oath which you take today, you will become loyal supporters of our country."

Among those repatriated was George Manning Smith, 55, of 328 Jefferson Street Southeast, a native of Trent, Mich. He lost his status as an American citizen when he joined the Canadian army to fight in the World War, January 18, 1915.

Hank Greenberg Voted A. L.'s 'Most Valuable'

Tiger Star Tops Rivals By 70 Points

Former First Sacker Has Great Season in Outfield; Gets 292 Points; Feller Second

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 5. — Big Henry Greenberg, Detroit outfielder and home run specialist, is the American League's "most valuable player" for the second time in six years.

After seven years at first base for the Tigers, Greenberg moved to the outfield "for the good of the team" and experienced one of his brightest seasons, leading the league in home runs and runs batted in. He received the award first in 1935.

A 24-man committee, representing the Baseball Writers Association of America, gave the 29-year-old Greenberg 292 points in the annual poll for the award. Bob Feller, Cleveland's young pitcher, trailed the Tiger star with 222 points. Each of the 24 writers listed 10 men in order of preference in addition to others named for honorable mention. A first place vote counted 14 points, second place 9 points and so on down to 1 point for tenth place.

16 Votes for Top Place

Greenberg, who knocked 41 homers and drove in 150 runs, received 16 first place votes out of a possible 24, 7 for second place and 1 for sixth. Feller was given 6 first place votes for his brilliant record of 27 victories, and Detroit's Buck Newsom and Cleveland's Lou Boudreau split the other 2.

Joe DiMaggio, New York star who led the circuit in batting for the second straight season, fell to third place in the voting after winning the award in 1939. DiMaggio received 151 points, followed by Newsom with 120 and Boudreau with 119. Jimmy Foxx, Boston first baseman and catcher and three-time winner of the "most valuable" designation, drew 110 points.

Schoolboy Rowe, of Detroit, rated seventh with 62 points, followed by his teammate, Rudy York, 61; Ray Radcliff, St. Louis, 55; Luke Appling, Chicago, 54; Roy Weatherly, Cleveland, 34; Dick Bartell, Detroit, 26; Joe Kuhel, Chicago, 18; Sid Hudson, Washington, and Ted Williams, Boston, 16 each; Barney McCosky, Detroit, 11; Ernie Bonham, New York, 8; and Walt Judnich, St. Louis, 6.

Travis Gets Three Votes

Johnny Babich, Philadelphia, got five votes; Mike Tresh, Chicago; Frank Hayes, Philadelphia, and Ray Mack, Cleveland, four each; Joe Gordon, New York; Cecil Travis, Washington; Bob Kennedy, Chicago, and Charles Gehringer, Detroit, three each; Rollie Hemsley, Cleveland and Ted Lyons, Chicago, two each; and Lou Finney, Boston, and Eldon Auker, St. Louis, one each.

The committee which made the selection was headed by Sid Mercer of New York, president of the Association, and consisted of Burt Whitman, Joseph Cashman and Harold Kaese, Boston; Irving Vaughan, John Hoffman and John Carmichael, Chicago; Gordon Cobbledick, Edward Mcauley and Frank Gibbons, Cleveland; H. G. S. Allinger, Leo MacDonnell and Charles Ward, Detroit; James Dawson, Charles Segar and Jack Smith, New York; James Isaminger, Robert Paul and Walter Smith, Philadelphia; Sid Keener, Martin J. Haley and J. G. Taylor Spink, St. Louis; and Frank O'Neill, Francis Stan and Robert Ruark, Washington.

POVICH

The seamy side of professional football begins to reveal itself at this stage of the season when the rich clubs get richer and the poor ones make a mockery of themselves and the league. It is a cancerous situation which wrecks the balance of the league and cheapens the title.

At Griffith Stadium the other day, the Pittsburgh Steelers were a woeful gang against the Washington Redskins. On the Redskins' bench, available for the fray, were two full teams in addition to the Redskin team that was on the field. The Washington club was having a fine season. It could afford to carry substitutes to the limit of the 33 players allowed and it had a full complement of reserves. But how about the Pittsburgh bench?

On the Pittsburgh side of the field, only fourteen substitutes were sitting. Virtually all of them had been in the game and like the Pittsburgh team on the field, they were dog-tired. The Redskins, who had been able to score only 13 points in the first half, scored 21 in the second. They sent in fast, fresh backs to run wild against the Steelers.

Where were the fresh Pittsburgh substitutes? They had been lopped off the payroll days before as a necessary economic measure. It was already determined that the Pittsburgh team wasn't going anywhere in the league race. Art Rooney simply doesn't have the dough to keep substitutes on the payroll after pennant chances have gone. He could collect the same guarantee without presenting a bench full of reserves and by carrying only 25 men into the final stages of the season he could save himself upward of $2,000 a week.

Yesterday a dispatch from Philadelphia was to the effect that the Philadelphia Eagles had released three more players. Lopped 'em off the payroll would have been a better way to put it. The Eagles, like the Pirates, aren't going anywhere in this league race, they discovered. So they are retrenching. It represents a saving of money to the Eagles' owners, but how about its effect on the league?

The Eagles and the Steelers still have important games to play that might affect the league pennant race. The Eagles, for instance, still must meet the Redskins in the last game of the season here and that game could, conceivably, decide the title. But now the Redskins will be meeting a Philadelphia club that is getting down to the bone in reserves. There will be a paucity of substitutes on the Eagles' bench and the tempo of pro football now is such that substitutes are a potent factor.

The league recognized that fact when it continually upped the player limit from 25 to the present maximum of 33, but there is no rule to compel the clubs to carry the 33 players the league has deemed so essential to its best type of football. It is a condition that cries for correction inasmuch as a game in late November might count equally as much in the title race as a game in early September.

The teams near the top of the two divisions have no such economic problem to combat. One reason why they are near or at the top is that they have good ball clubs, and good clubs bring through the gate the wherewithal necessary to keep a full complement of players on the squad. Folks like the owners of the Eagles and Steelers can scarcely be blamed for attempting to salvage some profit from the season, or at least avert a loss when their clubs are already completely out of it, but we don't maintain that it is a condition that contains the element of title race travesty, and until it is corrected pennants are not truly won and the league is open to criticism.

We don't mean to reflect on the Redskins' victory over Pittsburgh last week-end or detract from what appears certain to be a victory over the Eagles in the wind-up game. With conditions at the best for the second-flight clubs, the Redskins could doubtless lick 'em for the Redskins are that kind of a ball team this year. But as long as a football is shaped the way it is and can bounce as crazily as it does, any team in the league has a chance to win any game in the league and that chance is being profaned by the arbitrary weakening of their squads to save a few shekels in the waning days of the season.

At this writing it appears that nothing short of plague, pestilence or train wreck can prevent the Redskins from winning the Eastern Division championship because the Redskins are that much superior to any club in their section. But there are certain precedents that becloud the Redskins chances to win any play-off in which they may figure.

In fact, if the Redskins are superstitious there is, indeed, cause for pause. They lead the league in ground gaining. But the fact is that no team which ever led the league in ground gaining has ever won the championship. This item will scarcely cause Coach Ray Flaherty to caution his club against gaining any more ground, but the precedent is there nevertheless.

The Redskins also lead the league in forward-passing, and Flaherty is properly proud of that asset, but the League's Service Bureau this week emphasizes a disturbing point. Only three times in the last seven play-offs for the title has the league's best passing club won the championship. Flaherty, however, is doubtless willing to risk that chance.

Rough Pass Wins Riggs 'Cap, Pays $76.80

Christmas Horse Leads All the Way

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 5.—Racing's "bargain king," J. Yancey Christmas, of Upper Marlboro, Md., sent his Rough Pass out on this ancient track this afternoon to spring the biggest upset in the history of the $10,000 added Riggs Handicap. Rough, tough, likeable Yancey saddled his 3-year-old for the test against some of the year's outstanding stars of the handicap division and some five minutes later met the gallant colt in the winner's circle where Alfred G. Vanderbilt presented him with the trophy, emblematic of the victory.

It was Rough Pass all the way. At the wire he was three lengths ahead of the Shandon Stable's Burning Star and an additional half length in advance of J. O. Keene's War Beauty. Forced into the "also ran" division were such as the Greentree Stable's Hash, Circle M. Ranch's Get Off and the Belair Stud's Foxbrough.

To the tune of a $76.80 mutuel, Rough Pass came into his own as a stake winner for the first time this year. Sixteen times the colt had marched postward and as many times in 1940 he had been beaten. Today he was right and the weight of 105 pounds was right for Rough Pass just laughed at his high-class opposition.

Horse Cost $50

Christmas, who once bought a horse for $50 and mated him with a crippled mare to produce the great sprinter that is Rough Time, paid only $275 for Rough Pass at the Maryland Breeders Sales. In addition, the sire of the colt, By-Pass II, sold for $1,000 at those sales. With the 1940 sales scheduled this week, someone remarked that today's victory looked like a "publicity stunt."

Rough Pass was considered Kentucky Derby timber in the closing stages of 1939. He won upwards of $15,000 but was beaten off here at Pimlico by Bimelech. It was said that Bimelech broke his heart. However, Christmas took Rough Pass to Hot Springs last winter to prepare him for the Derby and the colt developed a kidney ailment. He responded to treatment but despite Yancey's efforts did not seem to regain best form.

Jockey J. Harrell rode Rough Pass and had the colt off alertly from the No. 1 position. He banked the clubhouse turn in front and simply stayed there. Honey Cloud and Foxbrough were following Rough Pass as the field swung into the backstretch. Rough Pass was running easily but few in the crowd believed he could stick to his running guns. Up the backstretch, Foxbrough made a move that carried him within a length of the leader. Honey Cloud was already showing signs of weakening.

War Beauty Moves Up

Turning for home, Foxbrough gave up the futile task of chasing the Christmas colt and War Beauty moved up as Hash and Burning Star began their moves. War Beauty had nothing in a speed way that Roug Pass could not match. Hash's high weight seemed to be anchoring him, but Burning Star, slipping through on the inside, was looming menacingly.

In the straightaway, Harrell kept pushing Rough Pass and the little fellow was responding with all he was worth. He seemed to sense that this was his comeback race and he did not want to lose it. In midstretch it was evident that only Burning Star had a chance to catch the leader. Jockey Wayne Wright went to work on the Shandon Stable star, but the old boy just had too much colt in front of him. Harrell took no chances and bolted right across the line.

Thus Rough Pass joined Seabiscuit, Roman Soldier, Aneroid, Thursday, Crusader and other great horses which won the Riggs.

His time of 1:59 3-5 was creditable for the mile and three-sixteenths over a fast track.

You Don't Know What Kind of Football Fan You Are—'Til You Read the Sports Pages

Rambling Reporters Find You Sun-Seared, Electrified, Jam-Packed, Etc.; Were You?

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Are you a thrill-drenched spectator, a sun-seared homecoming fan or part of a jam-packed mob? Or, perhaps, you're just a plain ordinary electrified, excited or screaming witness to a Saturday afternoon gridiron spectacle.

After taking an adjective analysis of the rambling reporters who cover the football front, we found some of the boys get a little over enthused over the extravaganzas they have just witnessed and take it out on the crowd.

Were You, Really?

For instance, you may have taken in the Mississippi-Southwestern game on Saturday and gone home feeling fine. Then, you pick up the sports page and find you were part of a "sun-seared" mob. Were you? On the other hand, say you attended the Fordham-North Carolina game in New York and rooted you heart out for the Carolinians. Yet, your favorite sportswriter claims the crowd watched the Fordham victory with "uncontained delight" Did you?

The Cornell-Columbia throng was said to be "fully convinced." Does that mean fully convinced Columbia was horrible or Cornell was great? The Princeton-Harvard rooters were "hardy souls" to one and "rain-drenched" fans to another. In New York, the Army-Notre Dame spectators looked on with "astonished gaze," compared to the Michigan-Penn fans of a week ago who "peered through the haze of a pleasant afternoon."

Just Old-Fashioned

The most common type is an old-fashioned Homecoming fan. Some colleges class them as "Dad's Day" fans. While looking for other crowd describing terms we find among the most common are thrilled, record-breaking, screaming, sweltering,

'Red' Kress Named St. Paul Pilot; Plans to Play

By the Associated Press

St. Paul, Nov. 5.—Promising his personal participation in 154 games at shortstop, Ralph (Red) Kress was named manager of the St. Paul American Association baseball club today. He succeds Foster (Babe) Ganzel, who retired last fall.

KRESS

Receipt of Kress' signed contract was announced today by Business Manager Lou McKenna after directors of the Saints had formally approved his choice at their annual meeting Monday.

Return of the 33-year-old red head to the American Association as an active player and manager marks a reversal of the Saints' five-year policy of bench executives.

In organized baseball since 1927, Kress is best known in the association for his inspiration performance with Minneapolis in 1937. Down from Washington, Kress won the Sporting News award for most valuable player in the Association. He batted .334, drove in 157 runs and his 27 home runs.

Auburn Depends On Sophomores

Auburn, Ala., Nov. 5 (AP).—The success of Auburn's homecoming here Saturday against Clemson apparently hinges on the performance of his sophomores, Coach Jack Meagher confided today as the Plainsmen went through a light scrimmage.

"Injuries and illness among regulars have forced us to rely on ten first-year men," Meagher pointed out. "They're doing a mighty good job, but, like all sophomores, they are liable to make mistakes."

Injuries deprived Auburn of John Chalkley and Chester Bulger, experienced tackles, and Rufus Deal, No. 1 fullback.

Wisconsin Rejects Rose Bowl Plan

Madison, Wis., Nov. 5 (AP).—A proposal that a Western Conference football team participate during the next three years in the New Year's Day Rose Bowl game at Pasadena, Calif., was rejected yesterday by the University of Wisconsin faculty.

The plan suggested limiting the game to picked squads of the Western and Pacific Coast Conferences. It was submitted to the Wisconsin faculty in a communication from Dr. W. F. Lorenz, chairman of the athletic board, who pointed out that the proposal had been discussed by the faculty representatives of the Western Conference but that no decision was reached.

Duke Favored But No Cinch Over Davidson

Special Dispatch to The Post

Durham, N. C., Nov. 5.—Duke's Blue Devils will be heavily favored when they go into their 19th annual engagement with Davidson, but the Wildcats showed Centre's Colonels last week that they had to be watched all the way, all the time.

Centre apparently had the ball game sewed up going into the fourth period with a 12—0 advantage but the Wildcats just went out there and scored four touchdowns in that final quarter to win, 27-12.

Davie Spencer, 140-pound back of the Wildcats, was the spark of that fourth period rally and he will lead his outfit into Saturday's clash with the Blue Devils. A great passer and runner, he is the boy the Blue Devils will have to watch most.

It will be an important game to the Blue Devils. The Wademen have either won or shared in the conference crown for the past two years in a row and the clash with the Wildcats will start the crucial three weeks which will settle their standing in this year's race. Following Davidson, Duke meets North Carolina and N. C. State before closing up with the annual intersectional clash with Pitt.

The Blue Devils carry a fine record into this final conference contest. A Duke team has not been beaten by a conference rival since Carolina pulled the trick in 1937.

Duke has not lost to the Wildcats since 1929 although Davidson battled Wallace Wade's first Duke team to a scoreless deadlock in 1931.

Georgia Passing Reaches Its Peak

Special Dispatch to The Post

Athens, Ga., Nov. 5.—While the Georgia running attack was throttled for the first time in the game with Auburn Saturday, the Bulldogs emerged from their first major victory since 1937 with the distinction of being one of the finest passing teams in the Southeastern Conference.

Auburn is the only team Georgia has played this year to gain more ground than the Bulldogs and a good portion of the Tiger yardage was marked up in that hectic fourth quarter that saw Coach Jack Meagher's eleven put on a brilliant spurt to score twice after trailing 14 to 0. Failure to add the last extra point cost the Plainsmen a tie game.

Georgia threw less passes in the Auburn game than in any major contest yet—17. Of that number six were completed for a total yardage of 112.

'Skins Game With Bears Is Sellout

If the Redskins don't defeat the Chicago Bears here November 17, it can't be blamed on lack of support—every seat available in Griffith Stadium, slightly more than 35,000, has been sold.

The last ducat went over the counter late yesterday afternoon, and harried Redskin bosses began turning away the customers and and muttering imprecations over the prospect of having to refuse ready cash.

Because no standing room is being sold for the game—which by now is generally conceded to shape up as a preview of the play-off for the National Pro Football League championship in December—the attendance a week from Sunday won't be a record. Turnout at last year's Detroit game here, well over 36,000, set the all-time D. C. record through the sale of standing room.

Despite all the flurry of interest in the Bear game, however, Coach Ray Flaherty is spending his time concentrating on beating the Dodgers in Brooklyn Sunday.

"We'll worry about the Bears after the Brooklyn game," Flaherty said curtly. He conducted a lengthy session on defense yesterday and last night held a two-hour study of motion pictures of the 37-10 Redskin victory over Pittsburgh and also of the New York Giants' 10-7 upset of the Dodgers last Sunday.

The Skins will depart for Brooklyn Saturday afternoon. At least half a dozen special trains will be in operation.

11-Year-Old Boy, Housewife Win Redskin Contest

An 11-year-old schoolboy, Arthur Newman of 3006 Twenty-first Street Northeast, and a 21-year-old housewife, Mrs. Delores Cook of 503 B Street Northeast, took down top honors in the Junior Board of Commerce grid picking contest, it was revealed last night.

The Northeast pair correctly picked every winner of last Sunday's National Professional League games. For their effort they will receive all-expense paid trips to the Redskin-Dodger game in Brooklyn Sunday.

Mrs. Cook's 25-word statement accompanying her selections was:

"I think the Redskins will be the 1940 Eastern Division champs because of the famous Baugh right arm and the fleet Todd feet."

Indians' Pilot Derby Heads Into Stretch

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Nov. 5.—The Cleveland Indians' managerial derby, picking up more entries at every turn, headed into the home stretch today as President Alva Bradley declared he would name a 1941 pilot next Tuesday.

"I am working on the matter now and expect to have it virtually cleared by the week-end," Bradley said.

The club president added that Mickey Cochrane, former Detroit manager and reported one of the leading candidates, was "not being considered." Cochrane was the second possibility eliminated within a day, Manager Bucky Harris having signed a new contract with Washington.

Peckinpaugh, a Clevelander who is connected with the American League in a promotional capacity, piloted the Indians five full seasons starting in 1928. He was discharged and replaced by Walter Johnson in the middle of his sixth year.

Sewell, erstwhile Cleveland catcher who lives in nearby Akron, has had no managerial experience.

Roger Hornsby was being mentioned frequently. Even Babe Ruth

Rice Crosses Foe, Forsakes Passes To Win on Ground

Special Dispatch to The Post

Houston, Nov. 5.—Check back through your files, boys, and see if you can find the last time a Southwest conference football team won a game without completing a forward pass.

It's unusual, if not monumental, is this pass-chucking circuit to win strictly on the ground.

Meanwhile, the Owls, who tossed as many passes as anybody in 1938 and 1939, made their running attack click for two touchdowns against the Longhorns. Then, they made their defense stand up.

Perhaps the reason is Head Coach Jess Neely's theory, which certainly embodies a sound running game and a staunch defense as foremost requisites, or perhaps it was the fact that passes backfired badly in Rice's loss to Tulane. In any event, Neely, who some observers thought would have trouble getting accustomed to the Southwest's open game, hardly can improve on his debut.

Down the Sports Trail

Big Red to Pass Up All Bids to Bowl Games

By Whitney Martin

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Nov. 5.—A sports trail ramble:

Bowl committees which still might nurse a hope of landing Cornell might as well save their postage. When the Big Red ends its regular season it will be a case of "that's all there is, there ain't no more." We are warned that Glenn Dobbs, Tulsa U. back, shouldn't be overlooked in naming the sophomore of the year. He's a triple-threater, and labeled All-American material for 1941 and '42. Howdy O'Dell, Penn backfield coach, says the way Michigan was pointed to stop Reagan he would have had to have wings to go anywhere. Penn couldn't concentrate on Harmon for fear another back would break loose.

As a rebuttal to the general idea that Southern colleges must have a goodly sprinkling of Northern boys to help play their football, Auburn points out only three members of its squad are from north of the Mason-Dixon Line.

Add gluttons for punishment: Lou Little. He'd like to have his Columbia Lions play Cornell again next Saturday. Figures no team can be as good on passing every week as Cornell was last Saturday, and "they couldn't do much against us running." George Franck, Minnesota's great back, runs anchor on the Gopher mile relay team. There's one anchor that hard to drop. In fact, it's usually anchor's away.

Here's our personal scouting report from Ithaca:

If that team needs signals from the bench, Joe Louis needs a club in the ring. All Snavely needs to do is point it in the right direction. The Cornell team is more dangerous the farther it is from the goal. It has a tough time within the five-yard line; doesn't have room enough to work. A Cornell-Minnesota, or Cornell-Michigan or Cornell-Northwestern game would be worth walking around the block to see.

Speaking of calling 'em from the bench, pictures of a Stanford game showed Quarterback Frankie Albert reading a white card. Coach Clark Shaughnessy was asked what it was all about.

"I sent in the card with a substitute," he replied frankly. "On it I drew the defense, indicated a nice hole to hit and suggested Frankie shoot a few at this hole. It was much easier than explaining. The substitute carried the card in his headgear, and after the first play made a bee line for Albert and gave him the card. I was glad of that, because sometimes the boys forget all about instructions. These boys I have now all remember about the card."

It is much easier for Shaughnessy to write or draw than talk during a game. Bill Keefe, of the New Orleans Times-Picayune, reports that when Shaughnessy was coaching at Tulane and Loyola he'd often look at a man and try to say something, and not a word would come out.

Here's one for comparative-score arguers: Wake Forest beat North Carolina, 12-0; Tulane beat North Carolina, 14-13; Clemson beat Wake Forest, 39-0; Tulane beat Clemson, 13-0. Crazy, ain't it?

C. U. Leaves Tonight for Tulsa Game; Travels 2,468 Miles

Cards Leave For Season's 3d Long Trip

Ready to Lay Claim To 'Travelingest' Eleven on Record; Oilers Big Test

By Jack Munhall

Rivaling St. Mary's of Texas as the country's "travelingest" team, Catholic University's football squad tonight entrains for Tulsa, their third long trip of the season, and Saturday's game with the powerful Oilers.

Already having journeyed to Detroit to tackle the Titans, to Boston to play St. Anselm and to Miami, Fla., to meet Miami University—not to mention a short excursion to Latrobe, Pa., for the game with St. Vincent—the Cardinals' latest jaunt will be for a distance of 1,243 miles out and 1,243 miles back.

Twenty-nine Cardinals are to leave for Tulsa at 6:35 p. m. for the game that will afford them their last real chance to clamor for national recognition. Beaten by Detroit and tied by St. Vincent, Catholic University could gain a large measure of compensation by licking Tulsa's Oilers who boast victories over Detroit and Texas Christian.

The C. U. squad wound up preparations yesterday in fairly good shape, although it is now definite that Joe Carrig, the team's outstanding end, is out for the season with a severe kidney injury received in the West Virginia Wesleyan game. Marty Donovan, who filled in for Carrig against St. Vincent, will again be in the line-up.

Reinhart Expects Top Performance Saturday

The Buff and Blue, a real mystery team, has been alternately good and bad, and, judging from its play against Wake Forest last week, G. W. should be impressive in the Bucknell game.

Examining the Colonials' record, you find that they were unconvincing against Mount St. Mary's in their opener, but came back to upset Manhattan. Then they were routed by Kentucky but rebounded to swamp a good West Virginia eleven, 19-0. Finally came the Wake Forest debacle wherein the Colonials failed to cross their opponents' 38-yard line.

Passing Gets Attention

Still trying to develop a strong forward passing attack, George Washington drilled extensively on this phase of attack yesterday. Eddie Willamoski, Tom Grady and Ken Batson were flipping 'em all over the Polo Field, usually to Johnny Picco, Frank August, Dan Douglas and Adolph Biasini, all ends.

In contrast to George Washington's record is the season's achievements of Bucknell. Although they have won only one game—against Ursinius, 33-0—the Bisons at least have been consistent in losing. Unbeaten Penn State was extended in a 9-0 victory, and Temple also had great difficulty in topping Bucknell, 10-7, on a last-minute field goal. Bucknell, in its only other previous start, tied Western Maryland, 0-0.

Pro Scouts to See G. U.-Maryland Game

A battery of National Professional League football scouts is expected to attend the Georgetown-Maryland game at College Park Saturday to look over several Hoyas who are being boomed for All-America consideration. Foremost among these stars are Augie Lio, 210-pound, place-kicking guard; Mike Kopcik, long punting end; Allen Matuza, alert center, and Al Blozis, tackle who flips opponents like he throws the shot put.

Georgetown's consecutive victories over New York University and Syracuse have attracted the attention of New York football critics to the team and, if unbeaten this season, the Hoyas probably will land at least one player on the mythical all-star combinations.

Terps Work Hard

From the Maryland football camp comes word that the Terps are diligently practicing even though they are accorded absolutely no chance of beating Georgetown unless the Hoyas use their fourth team—which they haven't got.

Convinced that they will travel backwards if they try to run against Georgetown's huge lines, the Terrapins are expected to stake all on a reckless forward-passing attack centering around Mearle DuVall and Joe Murphy. Murphy's punting also is counted on by Maryland to hold down the score.

The Terrapins still feel that they would have held Georgetown to a 6-0 victory in last year's game had the team taken full advantage of Murphy's tremendous punts. Twice Maryland gambled near midfield when a kick would have put the ball deep in G. U. territory. Twice the strategy backfired when Maryland failed to make a first down and Georgetown took over the ball on downs and drove to scores. The Hoyas thus won the game, 20-0.

Maryland probably will be stronger for the Georgetown game than any other this season. Only one player, End Dick Shaffer, is now listed as a casualty and he is expected to be ready.

Hoya-Terp Tickets Selling Briskly

A fine advance sale for Georgetown University's homecoming football game with the University of Maryland at College Park, Md., Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock was reported by both athletic departments yesterday.

Old graduates of both schools had made heavy inroads on tickets priced at $1.10, $1.65 and $2.20.

Georgetown alumni members intrigued over the greatest homecoming in the school's history, have indicated their intention of turning out as a unit locally. Many requests from Philadelphia, New York and Boston also have been received.

Devitt Beats N. T. S. Eleven For First Win

McGowan Big Star In 34-0 Triumph, Scoring Three Times

Beaten twice and tied as many times in four games to date, Devitt Prep gridiron forces finally brought home victory yesterday, a 34-0 swamping of National Training School eleven on the latter's field.

Individual star of the performance was Halfback George McGowan, who turned in three touchdowns in his team's behalf. All resulted from rushing.

Backs Bill Boswell and Julius Becker also crossed the goal line. Their efforts were abetted considerably by the best down-field blocking the Prepmen have enjoyed to date. In the extra point department Leroy Rinaldi stood out, kicking 4 out of 5 perfect placements.

Devitt could manage for only one touchdown in each of the first three periods, but the performance was capped by a fast pair of tallies in the final quarter. The Trainers made no serious threat to beat Devitt out of its first triumph.

He'll Help Herd Stop G. W. Thrusts

Nick Priore, 167-pound guard for Bucknell, will be one of the mainstays in the forward wall which will attempt to stop George Washington University Saturday afternoon at Griffith Stadium. A Buffalo, N. Y., product, he is light but a powerful factor in the Thundering Herd's front line

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 5.—Charley Howard was thinking of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap when he pulled his Mioland out of the Pimlico Special last Saturday. The scratch nullified Howard's chances of beating Challedon, the horse that beat Howard's Kayak II for the Special crown last year. Challedon won Saturday's special with ridiculouse ease, beating Can't Wait. Can't Wait could. He'll wait a long time before he deserves to carry Challedon's oat bucket.

CONSIDINE

Howard yanked Mioland for fear that he'd beat Challedon and have a lot of weight piled on Mioland's back in the $100,000 race—which Challedon also will enter. He put Mioland in the first running of the Westchester Stake, and the Axis colt, so-called because his forebears were German and Italian thoroughbreds, bobbed home in front of Hash, Foxborough and other older horses. Mioland is the first 3-year-old to beat a representative field of older horses this year.

But despite that victory, scored a day after Mioland was supposed to run in the Special, Mioland probably will go into the Santa Anita race under a modest load of from 117 to 122 pounds. Challedon definitely will draw the top impost of 130. It might mean a lot in the stretch.

Howard is a smart operator. He has made a fortune out of the big Santa Anita race, what with Seabiscuit winning it once and finishing second twice, and Kayak II winning it once and finishing second to Seabiscuit once.

Herb Kopf, coach of Manhattan, was still open-mouthed with wonder at the size and speed of the Boston College team, when he showed up at the football writers' luncheon Monday. "Terrific is no word for that team," he marveled. "It's hard to believe that a club that big could be so fast, even in the mud. It's the biggest team in the country. I know it's bigger than the New York Giants, because we scrimmaged against the Giants.

"They've got that fellow Gladchuk listed as a 230-pounder. But he weighed himself in his uniform after the game and tipped the beam at 260. And this big Mike Holovak, their halfback . . . something funny happened around him. Our Ted Mazur, who weighs 148, tried to take him out of a play. Holovak just gave a little twitch and knocked him away, and said, 'Stay away from me, boy.' Yep, it's a terrific team. They would have hurt us badly if that mud didn't cushion us. They must have thought we were Georgetown, the way they went after us. And, incidentally, that B. C.-Georgetown game will be one of the best games of the year."

Jersey Jones, astute manager of Charley Ketchuck, the promising young heavyweight from Endicott, N. Y., is moving his battler up another step. In these days of slip-shod apprenticeship in the ring, Jones' development of Ketchuck has stood out like a beacon. Ketchuck started on fourth raters, learns as he goes along, refuses to come into Madison Square Garden before he believes he is ready, and Jones carefully increases the caliber of his opponents. Friday night in Scranton Ketchuck meets Gunnar Barlund. Barlund's not good, but he's the best thing Ketchuck has met. After all, Barlund kayoed Buddy Baer. Ketchuck, incidentally, is as good as any body-puncher in the division.

Nobody can find fault with the selection of Hank Greenberg as the most valuable player in the American league for 1940. Placed in a position he had never played before, Hank refused to let it bother him and was a central force in the advance of the Tigers to the pennant. His hitting was on the awe-inspiring side. He batted .340, led the league in runs batted in, with 150, in homeruns, with 41 and in doubles with 50. He scored 129 times, stole six bases, and was a better than average leftfielder. No player ever deserved the award more than Big Hank, who won it also in 1935 as a first baseman.

PST!—Clair Bee, the coach, says Long Island U. has missed so many points after touchdowns this season because the school has only two footballs, and is afraid the spectators in Ebbetts Field will keep the balloons if they're kicked into the stands. "I send my players to the Dodger games each week and plant them in the seats behind the goal posts, in the hope of catching a few more balls," Bee says . . . Detroit and Philadelphia groups are looking for franchises in the American Football League . . . Hank Marino, Milwaukee bowler, has averaged an amazing 198 in his 27 years of playing in the American Bowling Congress . . . guess which nations led the world in record performances for track and field this past season? Wrong! Germany and Japan. Harbig, of Germany, turned in the best 800 meter performance, and Mellorovitz, of Germany tied two Japanese for the best 100 meter mark, 10.5. Germany also came up with the best 10,000 meter man, and, justly enough, the best hammer thrower.

Virginia, W & L Clash On Saturday

State's Oldest Grid Rivalry to Continue At Scott Stadium

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 5.—Another colorful chapter will be added to the State's oldest athletic rivalry when Washington and Lee comes to Scott Stadium here Saturday to meet Virginia's embattled football forces in the university's Commonwealth Day game.

Headed by Governor Price, an alumnus of Washington and Lee, the State's official family of members of the General Assembly, Supreme Court judges, departmental chieftains and other governmental executives are the invited guests for the fifth annual event of its kind. The festive week-end program also includes the school's set of fall dances.

Although the contest on a rope encircled field at Lexington in 1890 stands as the official beginning of the Virginia-Washington and Lee football series, sketchy records indicate that baseball games between he two schools, as well as football of some description, featured the earliest attempts at intercollegiate competition in the State during the 1870's.

Saturday's twenty-sixth clash of the 50-year-old football rivalry presents both sides with the opportunity to mend lagging seasons. After an auspicious start, Virginia faltered by a single touchdown against V. M. I., William and Mary and Virginia Tech. The Generals, holders of a victory over Richmond, conqueror of V. M. I., met the same fate against such major powers as George Washington and West Virginia.

Two important cogs in Virginia's offensive and defensive system, Captain Lee McLaughlin, left tackle, and Harry McClaugherty, ace backfield blocker, are slated to return to competition after a week's absence in the injury list. Bill Dudley, whose running and passing have accounted for over 800 yards this season, is in top shape for another starring round of play.

Prospects are that the Cavaliers will need all their reserves to check Washington and Lee's crack backfield of Joe Baugher, Preston Brown, Junie Bishop and Dick and Bob Pinck.

Bill Ackerman On Hunting

ACKERMAN

Canada Honkers were definitely in our mind through all the disorder of the day before the opening of wildfowl season, and shoving off for Curratuck Sound and Ray Adams' Whale Head Club at Corolla on the North Carolina Outer Banks, but in the last minute purchase of shells we couldn't forget the great flights of pintails and black ducks of the last three weeks. For that reason our choice was Nos. 4s and 5s, and plenty of them, for like many others during the duck depression we have neglected our shooting, and knew, until we got our eye back, those pintails were going to make the going extremely tough. Later, how we regretted that choice.

At Popular Branch we picked up "Babe" and Jack Mydgett, and the trip across the Sound was accomplished just before dark amid the musical honks of the disturbed birds looking about to pitch again for the night. More than we could express now, came the wish we had included BBs and No. 2s, for never had we seen so many V-shaped wedges of big geese, and the absence of their smaller brethren which we had so confidently expected. In fact, Ray Austin, our guide, told us that although the honkers were there in greater numbers than he could remember 15 years, the ducks, for the time being had gone on down below.

There was no doubt about it the following morning after the stinging drive of rain before a stiff northeaster, for it was the decoys were out and we were huddled in the blinds against the big Canadians that started coming in first. A single, then a pair; and soon in flocks.

The 7 o'clock law, of not leaving the dock before that time to "set" out, on this morning had been no hardship even though Federal regulations say sunrise; but when we could hear the rattle of the shot against the honker's wings without bringing them down—that was hard to take, and no way out but to let Ray take the long ones and the high ones, and for us to wait until they come right in. Which give him his limit in no time, and before we ever got started.

A shift of the wind to northwest about 10 o'clock had them coming in like express trains, and we had our first down. Then a black duck, followed by a redhead, but the pintails were too fast for "poor eyes," and it was not until Jethrow Midgett come over to put us in his blind on Fuzzy Point that we really got going.

First in was a flight of seven. Jethrow had called the turn on them long before they answered his plaintive calls and finally bowed their wings to settle down. "Casey" Jones, our blind mate, was first to let go, we followed while Jethrow was taking one out, and then got another before Casey stopped one dead with his full choke.

Five big Canada geese down on the water at one time make considerable commotion—looked more like 50 to us. It was our day right there, and after Casey got another to make his limit we stuck to the ducks, but seven was the best we could do. Can you imagine such shooting—honkers thicker than ducks in a duck country.

Mysterious Antics Of Players Solved; Glass Eye Found

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winchester, Va., Nov. 5.—The unusual sight of 22 football players crawling around on their hands and knees in the vicinity of the 35-yard line during the Brown Bombers (Winchester) - Culpeper colored teams, Sunday, has been explained at last by Carl Campbell, the referee.

A Culpeper player had lost his eye!

Hit hard by several Bombers who, incidentally won the game 32-0, after receiving a kickoff, the Culpeper back started groping around with one hand over his face as soon as the pile-up had untangled.

Thinking, perhaps, that the fellow had been knocked silly, Referee Campbell rushed up and asked him what was wrong. All he got for an answer was a grunt, but on his second query the dusky fullback calmly explained he had lost his eye—his glass eye.

Irish-Middie Game to Draw Full House

62,315 Seats to Be Sold, Is Prediction; Tars in Stiff Drill

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 5.—Every one of the 62,315 seats in the Baltimore Municipal Stadium will be filled for the Navy-Notre Dame football game Saturday, Academy officials predicted today.

They also announced that for the first time in the 14 years of gridiron rivalry between the Fighting Irish and the Middies the South Bend squad would visit the Academy as a unit.

Elmer Layden, head coach, and his Notre Dame team will accompany the Middie squad to the Academy immediately after the contest and eat dinner in the midshipmen's mess hall. The visitors will leave here aboard a special train at 11 p. m.

The Tars went through a stiff two-hour practice session today in preparation for Saturday's tilt. The varsity was pitted against the plebe and "B" squad in offensive and defensive scrimmages.

A similar practice program is scheduled for tomorrow. The team will begin to taper off Thursday.

Willis Maxon, regular right end, and Johnny Harrell, starting quarterback, who have been out with injuries, have rejoined the squad and will be available for duty against Notre Dame.

Cottesmore Wins Temple Gwathmey 'Cap Before 12,000

Heavy Choice Pays $3.90 In Easy Win

Tarbush Only Other Finisher in Field Of Four; Time for 2½ Miles Is 4:54

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 5.—George H. (Pete) Bostwick's Cottesmore just about clinched his claim to steeplechase championship honors for the year today by winning the Temple Gwathmey Handicap, feature of the one-day United Hunts meeting at Belmont Park, before a crowd of 12,000.

Winning his sixth straight jumping victory of the year, the 5-year-old gelded son of Heverswood—Ruddy Dawn took the lead at the twelfth jump and finished the 2½ miles five lengths in front in the fair time of 4 minutes 54 seconds.

Only one other horse in the starting field of four finished the long grind. This one, C. Mahlon Kline's Tarbrush, made one move toward the winner after they had cleared the last hurdle, but Cottesmore beat him off and hit the wire going away.

Cottesmore, odds-on choice, returned $3.90 for each $2 win ticket. Tarbrush was $4.30 for place. The victory was worth $2,065 to the winner and $52,166 was bet on the race.

The other two horses in the field, L. B. Mayer's Ossabaw and Gladys Whitney's Gay Charles, both fell at the twelfth jump.

Bostwick scored a double for the day. His West Haddon took the New York Turf Writers Steeplechase Cup, which opened the seven-race card, going the 2 miles in 3:56 and returning $8.90 for $2.

Charles Theriot's Jacopus roared down the middle of the track in the last sixteenth to win the Sporting Plate for 2-year-olds, a 6-furlong affair, from Victor Emanuel's Omission. The time was 1:12.

N.C. State Meets Deacon Eleven

Special Dispatch to The Post

Wake Forest, N. C., Nov. 5.—Each year practically every football team in the country has one game on the schedule that is probably the most important to win. The opposition may not be the strongest on the card, nor may the game bear great importance on any championship race, but what makes it so important to the two schools is the keen rivalry that probably dates back to the pioneer days of the grid sport and the fact that they usually face each other about equal in strength.

Such is probably the case between North Carolina State and Wake Forest which clash in Raleigh Saturday afternoon. There's a rivalry here that just about evens things in the pregame ratings regardless of the on-paper potentialities of the two foes. The series started in 1907 and except for 1909, there hasn't been a break in grid relations, and State has won 22, Wake Forest 8, and two ended in 0—0 deadlocks.

The Wolfpack holds a wide margin of victories and because of this it may not be the most important tilt from their way of thinking, but you can bet your bottom dollar that Wake alumni, players, coaches, and backers want the long end of the score of this ball game above any other single contest on the schedule.

Before the current campaign began, fans and writers were bemoaning the weaknesses of Coach Doc Newton's State boys and predicting nothing but reverses for them.

Selections at Pimlico.

Dear Al:

If you want a closeup of your favorite jockey you can get it at the annual frolic of the Maryland Racing Writers, to be staged November 13 at the Lord Baltimore Hotel. Some of those who have engaged tables are Wagner, Gilbert, Lemmons, Meade, Dabson, G. Smith, E. Smith, Decamillis, Hanford, J. Renick, F. A. Smith, Mora and Stevenson. All the boys will be there with their wives or sweethearts. If you want tickets write or phone me and I'll come around or send Art Brown. Going into yesterday's program the meeting had not had a claim. Jockey Irving Anderson has renewed his contract with the John Hay Whitney Stable. Meade and Canning went to New York to ride yesterday and will be back today. The horses Little Risk and Doubt Not were shipped in yesterday from Empire. George Raft, the movie star, has purchased Irrelevant, winner here last Monday. Air Marshal, which raced here Monday, is a much-traveled horse. Foaled in this country, he was shipped to England as a yearling and returned to the U. S. A. last August. He is royally bred, being by Challenger II (Challedon's sire) and out of Flying Field. He should improve with racing. The combination of Level Best and Ocean Blue seems to have taken Crispin Oglebay into the charmed circle of lucky owners. Just when it appeared that local enthusiasts were to be denied a glimpse of Level Best because of the filly's ineligibility for stakes at the current meeting Oglebay comes up with Ocean Blue, a 2-year-old as promising in his way as Level Best is in hers. Ocean Blue stole the track Monday afternoon in the most convincing triumph yet registered at the young meeting, and the feeling is inescapable that good as it was Ocean Blue's time could have been much better if it had to be. The Oglebay colt's 6 furlongs in 1:12 2-5 put in the shade by a fifth of a second the time of Joe Schenck and older horses in the featured Baltimore Autumn Handicap. Ocean Blue's later engagements are scheduled for the Sagamore Handicap and the Walden. The Sagamore at 6 furlongs is cut to his measure, and on the strength of his performance, wherein he gave every indication of liking a longer distance, he must be conceded a good chance in the mile and a sixteenth Walden. In running the 6 furlongs yesterday Ocean Blue turned in a faster time than any winner has shown in capturing the Sagamore in its three-year history. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Tragic Ending met just what his name implies last outing in New York but in a previous race was second to War Bugle at Suffolk Downs in fast time. He may be the right one. Socratic has been idle since last spring but has the speed to become dangerous. Light of Morn races well on off tracks.

Second race—Ceiling Zero showed little in his last but was previously second to talent. Late workouts indicate that he is back in top form. Aristocracy ran some good races in New York and should give the top horse a tussle. Coquelicot is a factor to be considered.

Third race—Good Chance was a handy winner of the Gov. Ogle Handicap at Laurel but fell in his most recent trial. He appears well placed here at the weights. Onechee was second to Ossabaw in a driving finish at Laurel and looks like the one to beat. Dolly's Love is highly regarded and should go well.

Fourth race—Dulie displayed his best speed recently, only to be outnodded by Busy Wire. With the exception of Swami, the contention here is of cheaper variety. The latter won his last over a good field but pulled up extremely sore. Lernano has class and halos from a smart outfit, but might need conditioning.

Fifth race—Unquote and Light as Air stand out as the two main contenders in this juvenile dash. Unquote was ninth in the Remson behind the best colts in New York and won her previous outing in very fast time. Light as Air was no match for Level Best in the Auturn Day Stakes, but fall form has been excellent. Sylvestra rates next in line.

Sixth race—Third Covey has been consistently turning in good performances in New York in overnight handicaps and must be accorded the edge in this field. Polymelior, raising up from the claiming ranks, is at his best. Miss Ferdinand might be close.

Seventh race—Woodblaze was fifth when competing against a similar field of platers last start, being unable to show her best due to interference. Charlene didn't care for the muddy going last start and should show improvement on a fast strip. Hazel Nut was fair at Hawthorne.

Eighth race—Baby Booties, beaten a length by Dr. Bones in creditable time at Laurel, rates a slight edge in the nightcap. Clingendaal has the class to win but is undependable. Autumnquest would be a dangerous factor on and off track.

Best bet—Dulie.

V. P. I. Faced By Tough Foe In Furman

Hurricane Called Finest S. Conference Team; Scrap Saturday

Special Dispatch to The Post

Blacksburg, Va., Nov. 5.—All that Virginia Tech's eleven has to do here Saturday judging by reports of the Tech scouts and the Sunday morning newspapers, is to whip one of the finest elevens in the Southern Conference: the Purple Hurricanes of Furman University.

The teams will clash here at 2:30 in Tech's final home game of the season and the last conference test before the annual headliner with V. M. I. at Roanoke on Thanksgiving Day. Between the encounters with Furman and V. M. I. Tech will travel to Danville, Ky., to play Center in the Colonials' homecoming game, November 16.

The Techmen will be too busy this week to think about V. M. I. or Center. Impressive wins over Washington and Lee and Virginia in the last two weeks can serve only to build morale as a bulwark against the power and deception of Furman's fine attack.

Tech scouts are convinced the Purple attack is the finest that Tech will face all year, with the exception of Georgetown's. The eagle-eyed gentry who bring home the "dope" cut loose with a few superlatives when they described the Hurricanes' lightning-fast wingback, Pepper Martin, and big Jim Barnett, able successor to All-Southern Roton Shetley at fullback. They are likewise strongly impressed by the driving power of the Furman line.

Past scores also show what a big job the Techmen face. In recent conference games with The Citadel, Davidson and North Carolina State the Hurricane scored 96 points to their opponents' 20. They beat Davidson, 40-7 Citadel, 36-7, and State, 20-6. They scored four more touchdowns against Davidson than did V. M. I. and one more against State than did North Carolina.

Tech came out of the exciting win over Virginia last week without more than minor injuries. All of the boys, with the exception of the two regular tackles and first reserve wingback who were struck from the roster several weeks ago by injury or illness, are expected to be ready to go here Saturday.

Belloise Has Possibilities Of Being Double Champ

Bell Says Saturday Foe Is Too Strong; Methodists Wary

By Jack Cuddy
United Press Staff Correspondent.

New York, Nov. 5.—Steve Belloise, the "peepul's cherce" will wrest the middleweight crown from Champion Ken Overlin, when and if they meet again and he will become light-heavyweight king when older and bigger.

This 21-year-old Bronx Italian indicated in his first 15-round bout Friday night that he is indeed a man of destiny. He showed more all-round class in this first big test than any youngster we've seen in many a moon. He had Champion Overlin on the floor and almost beat his head off in the sixth round.

Stunning Steve failed to win the title, by only a slight margin, largely because of the unfortunate combination of his own limited experience and the lack of a smart handler in his corner. Belloise had Overlin in groggy-land for more than a minute of the sixth session, but didn't know exactly how to put the tough veteran away.

Belloise Can Win

But Steve will know what to do the next time, and he'll do it. He has the weapons to turn the trick, dynamite in either hand, a disconcerting, unorthodox boxing style, stamina and ruggedness.

Promoter Mike Jacobs probably will announce tomorrow whether Overlin and Manager Chris Dundee will take another title chance with this dark-haired, rangy lad from the Bronx.

Whether or not Belloise wins the 160-pound crown during the next year, there should be a grand opportunity after that for him to become light-heavyweight king. Steve, formerly a welterweight, scaled 153 pounds Friday night. Since he is but 21, and getting heavier each month, he should pass the 160-pound limit next year and be ready for competition in the light-heavy division, which is deep in the doldrums now. Because of lack of worthwhile challengers, Billy Conn, the light-heavy ruler, is campaigning as a heavyweight, seeking a shot at Joe Louis. Conn meets his fifth heavy at the Garden November 29 when he tangles with Lee Savold, of Des Moines. If he beats Savold, there is little chance that Conn will defend his own title before next June since the New York State requirement that a champion defend at least every six months is not enforced when there are no top-flight challengers.

Conn Will Have Choice

Hence, if Conn is successful enough in his heavy campaign to get the big fight with Louis in June, he may enter the ring still wearing the light-heavy diadem.

KEN OVERLIN

Then one of two things will happen. He will beat Louis for the heavy crown and give up the 175-pound title, or he will get licked by Louis and return to the light-heavy class.

In either event, Belloise should be ready to grab the light-heavy laurels next autumn. If Conn vacates the throne, it should be a cinch. If Conn defends, Pittsburgh Billy's condition will be uncertain after a Louis beating and after more than a year of trying to build up his weight and then suddenly paring down.

Tarheels Seeking To Regain Offense Of Earlier Games

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 5.—The effects of their gruelling battle with Fordham about over, the Carolina gridders, who resumed heavy drills for Richmond today, were out to regain the form they flashed against Tulane and T. C. U., and with good reason.

The Spiders' display of power in their last 39-13 touchdown parade over Hampden-Sydney was highly impressive, and from the scouts' reports, Carolina is in for another tough afternoon.

"They have a good running and passing attack behind a strong, rugged line," is the way Coaches Johnny Morris and Hank Bartos sized the rivals up this morning, "and if they get the jump, they're hard to head."

The Carolina scouts singled out for particular praise Art Jones, 190-pound triple-threat who also paced Richmond's upsets of V. M. I. and V. P. I.; Sonny Wholey, dangerous little "scatback"; Capt. McVay, 226-pound tackle; and Andy Fronczek, whom they ranked as one of the best linemen in the South.

Furr to Return To Ring, Meet Monday Victor

Burley-Turiello Bout To Decide Opponent; Banks Will Appear

Washington's most persistent member of the pugilistic fraternity, Phil Furr, will ignore his better judgment and come back to the prize ring November 18 at Turner's arena to meet the winner of Monday night's ten-rounder between Charley Burley and Saverio Turiello.

Hammered to the canvas in 3½ rounds by Henry Armstrong in his last start, Fearless Phil went out and got himself in bad with the law but has decided to settle down to serious training and work toward a fight with Fritzie Zivic, new welterweight champion, the story goes.

Burley and Turiello, two of the top-ranking welterweights of the Nation, also are seeking a Zivic fight. On the Monday night show, Billy Banks, local colored featherweight, meets Tony Novello, of Paterson, N. J., in the semifinal.

Badminton Event Here Tomorrow Held Sure Success

Success of one of the season's finest badminton exhibitions was assured last night when it was reported that seats were going well at all downtown sports stores.

Ken Davidson and Hugh Fordie, international stars, will feature the program tomorrow night at Heurich gym, starting at 8 p. m. Their partners will be Wanda Bergman and Patsy Donovan, a pair of the high-ranking lady shuttle-sluggers of the country.

Singles, doubles and mixed doubles will be included in the two-hour show. Sponsors have declared there will be sufficient room for all to see.

Hagerstown Sponsors Quintet This Season

Hagerstown, Nov. 5.—Hagerstown again is to be represented on the basketball court this winter by the Marketeers, who defeated some of the leading professional teams in the country last season. Arthur Dorsey, former Hagerstown High School, Duke University and Franklin and Marshall star, who is in business here, will sponsor the team. Bill Young has been engaged to manage the team again.

Pro Packers Likened to Irish; Coach Lambeau Was Founder

Community Enterprise Flowering After 19 Years in National League

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Nov. 5.—The Green Bay Packers are Notre Dame of professional football. The colorful giants from the little Wisconsin town took both their gridiron inspiration and playing model from South Bend. The Packers now have everything, especially national appeal, that comes close to Notre Dame's.

The Packers have operated in the National League since it was organized in 1921. The football team has always been a community enterprise. Stockholders never received dividends except those in the form tof intense civic pride over the exploits of their team.

Many have assisted in the amazing growth of the Packer football organization. There was one master builder, Curly Lambeau, now doubling as coach, manager and vice president.

Few Better Known

There have been but few coaches better known than the dynamic and versatile Lambeau. Native of Green Bay, Lambeau played for Knute Rockne at Notre Dame after the World War. One teammate was the immortal George Gipp. Curly didn't graduate. It was necessary for him to hurry home and enter business in 1919. That same year he formed the Packer team, representatives of a packing company. Two years later the Packers helped form the National League. This is Curly's twenty-third year of continuous coaching.

In those early struggling years Lambeau played on the Packer teams until 1928, scoring 109 points, 12 touchdowns, 19 conversions and 6 field goals. He was a pioneer in forward passing technique and has become one of the game's foremost passing authorities. His Packer teams are famous for aerial accomplishments. Curly patiently developed Arnie Herber from a clubhouse boy to one of the league's top passers.

Hudson Is Star

Year after year little Green Bay is a Mecca for illustrious footballers. Reason, Lambeau scouts his own material. He's a shrewd picker of talent. Each year the Packer coach travels to San Francisco for the New Year's Day East-West game and invariably picks two or three players unnoticed by other scouts.

Lambeau always insists his teams play spectacular football for the people and his favorite slogan "we must win every game." The Packers have the best of league series with the exception of the traditional series with the Chicago Bears. Only one Lambeau team has lost more games than it won. Through 1928, 1929, 1930 the Packers assembled 23 straight victories for a league record. The Packers also are the only league club ever to win five world championships.

James Monroe, Suffolk Play Title Game

Class B Champion To Emerge From Clash On Thanksgiving

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 5.—The Class B grid championship of Eastern Virginia will be decided here Thanksgiving Day morning, November 21, when James Monroe High, of this city meets Suffolk High. Both teams are undefeated in Class B competition thus far, although both have lost to Class A opponents.

Not since 1936 have Suffolk and James Monroe met—and that year the Jackets began their uninterrupted reign over Class B football in eastern Virginia.

James Monroe High has two more games on its regular schedule, both with Class B opponents in the Valley District.

Victory over Suffolk on Thanksgiving Day would give James Monroe its fifth straight championship of eastern Virginia. Prior to 1936, Suffolk held the title for two years.

S. M. U. Coach Fearful of Aggie Power

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 5.—Moanin' Madison Bell, Southern Methodist's grid coach, paced gingerly from one swivel chair to another, leaving his forthright opinion of next Saturday's football game at each deserted position.

"The Texas Aggies are great, I tell you. There's no use kidding yourself about it—we're just not strong enough to stay with them for 60 minutes.

"Why the Aggies have never been forced to put out what they can. They're a great team because great teams are able to coast now and then. They're taking every team in stride. They're not pressed—haven't been extended. We'll be outweighed, maybe 10 to 15 pounds. I'm just afraid we're not strong enough to keep up with them."

"In sincerely believe," quoth Norton, "that next Saturday's game will be our severest test in two years."

Many great teams have stumbled before the Aggies in two years, including Tulane in the Sugar Bowl.

"This is the big game. We realize that the game probably will be our toughest. What I am particularly afraid of is that the present rain will continue and make it a resumption of the game last year—and I don't want a resumption of that game!"

The Georgia-Auburn crowd must have resembled the proverbial sardine as they were classed as "jam-packed" by a Cracker scribe. On the West Coast, some 75,000 Stanford-California spectators were described as "gripping their seats in the tensest of gridiron dramas," while at Lexington, Va., the gathering "hit a new high in hysteria," and they probably had to call the wagon.

Roasting Or Lonesome

The Purdue homecoming fans were "silent and disbelieving" at the defeat by Wisconsin, according to a press-box purveyor.

If your alma mater plays night football, you were more than likely part of an "arc-light" crowd of some ten or twenty thousand. It must be taken for granted after reading the V. M. I.-William and Mary story that "each spectator was satisfied with the scoreless tie."

Thus it's hard to tell just what type football fan you really are until you pick up the Sunday morning sports sheet.

Contracts Let For Naval Base Improvements

$1,516,570 in Work Slated for Stations In Capital Area

The Navy yesterday awarded contracts to strengthen its far-flung chain of bases in Alaska, mid-Pacific and the Caribbean, part of a day's total of $55,557,419 in defense orders.

New ammunition magazines and gasoline storage and housing facilities will be constructed in outposts from Puerto Rico to Midway Island and Alaska under the orders. Improvements at naval stations within and close to the Nation's Capital totaling $1,516,570 were included.

The latter included a $144,000 award to the Diamond Construction Co. for improvement of the waterfront at the naval magazine, Bellevue, D. C.; a $956,470 contract to John McShain, Inc., for additional air station facilities, 100 low-cost housing units, barracks, mess hall and magazines at the Marine Base, Quantico, Va.; a $386,100 order with Jeffress-Dyer Co., for 150 housing units at the naval proving ground, Dahlgren, Va., and a $30,000 contract awarded to Harwood-Nebel Construction Co. for ten housing units at Piney Point, Md., for naval personnel employed at the Indianhead, Md., powder factory.

The Army orders included a $4,294,798 contract for expansion of the Vultee Aircraft plant at Downey, Calif., and $29,993,236 in other awards, principally for Air Corps instruments and equipment.

Largest of the Navy base construction projects was harbor improvement work, magazines, storehouses and housing at the Guantanamo, Cuba, naval base, costing $5,081,030.

Bradley's recent Chicago conference with baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis and his proposed trip to New York City late this week gave rise to reports that the Indians were not seriously considering the "home-towners"—Peckinpaugh and Sewell—and would probably name a dark horse.

Three years ago the club took the baseball world by surprise in selecting Oscar Vitt, then Newark manager. Vitt was fired last week as the outgrowth of the bizarre player rebellion here last summer.

Nets Uneven, Sales Gaining In Third Period

Increased Costs, Taxes Noted in Tabulation Of 350 Firms

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Nov. 5.—While reports of leading industrial, railroad and public utility companies show in most cases an increase in sales or operating revenues in the third quarter and the first nine months over those for the previous year, changes in net profits were highly uneven because of varying costs, taxes and special factors, says National City Bank of New York in its current monthly letter.

The bank's tabulation of the statements of 350 industrial corporations for the third quarter gives combined net profits, less deficits, of approximately $257,000,000 after taxes, a decline of 14 per cent from the $299,000,000 reported by the same companies in the second quarter but an increase of 23 per cent over the $209,000,000 shown in the third quarter of 1939.

Gains in Profits Shown

"Sharp gains in profits were reported," the bank says, "in numerous of the capital goods industries having a continued recovery in volume of business, partly due to the war and the national defense program. These include iron and steel, machinery and tools, railway equipment, auto equipment, miscellaneous metal products, chemicals and textiles. Many pulp and paper manufacturers showed marked gains as a result of increased sales of the various paper products, higher prices and limitation of imports by the war. Several coal mining companies turned an operating deficit into a profit, due to better prices and to increased demand, accelerated by the building up of stocks by consumers prior to minimum prices going into effect October 1.

"Lower profits, however, particularly in the third quarter, were reported by many companies in consumers' goods lines, which have received little benefit from the national defense program and are subject to the increased taxes applying to all corporations," the bank adds.

"This was pronounced in such groups as baking, miscellaneous food products, drugs, soap and petroleum—the latter being affected also by lower gasoline prices, forced curtainment of crude production and loss of export and bunker trade. In these lines, about two-thirds of the reports issued to date by leading companies show decreased profits in the third quarter as compared with a year ago, despite the generally higher level of sales."

Firms' Profits Compared

Profits of the 350 leading corporations are set forth in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

Gross revenues of the class 1 steam railroads for the first nine months exceed those of the last year by about 8 per cent, with the gain almost entirely in freight revenues.

Winnipeg Grain

Winnipeg, Nov. 5 (AP).—Trading in the wheat pit at the Winnipeg Grain Exchange was confined mainly to the opening and closing stages during today's session and prices closed unchanged with the December future at 71⅝ cents a bushel, May at 75⅞ and July at 77½.

Minor liquidation sent December oats and barley futures fractionally lower in the coarse grain pit. Crushers showed some interest in flax, but other dealings were thin.

White House Vender Is No Peanut Diplomat

He sells peanuts on the Pennsylvania Avenue corner of the White House and has for 31 years. He was asked yesterday how he felt about the election.

"They both good men," he said. "I been here on this corner all the time since big President Taft. Any man who comes to the White House has got to be a good man."

Which seems the way that peanuts can be sold to both sides.

U. C. V. Leader Casts Ballot for All Democrats

Bristol, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—Gen. Julius F. Howell, 94, commander of the United Confederate Veterans, said today he voted the "straight Democratic ticket" in casting a ballot in his nineteenth consecutive Presidential election.

Howell said he cast his first Presidential ballot in Nansemond County, Va., in 1868 for Horace Greeley because the famous New York editor, who lost the election to Ulysses S. Grant, was one of the ten men who made bond to release President Jefferson Davis, of the defeated confederacy from Monroe Prison.

Republicans and Democrats are getting together today to prove that, despite the bitterness of the election campaign, the other fellow is not such a bad guy after all and that American unity, which looked as if it were about to break up at almost any moment for the past few months, is as strong as ever.

You'll hear major representatives of both parties in a three-quarter hour broadcast over WJSV and the Columbia network tonight, from 10:15 to 11, speaking from a unity meeting held in New York's Carnegie Hall under auspices of the Council for Democracy.

The speakers will include Newbold Morris, president of the New York City Council; Clarence Dykstra, Selective Service director; Howard Cooley, past president of the National Association of Manufacturers; Columnist Dorothy Thompson; Attorney General Robert Jackson; Alf M. Landon, and Raymond Gram Swing, the commentator who is chairman of the Council for Democracy. One of the musical features is to be singing by its composer, Irving Berlin, of the patriotic song, "God Bless America."

The Council's principal aim is "to crystallize and instill in the minds of Americans the meaning, value and workability of democracy, the best way of life under which they could live."

You'd never have thought just a couple of days ago that members of the opposing parties could ever speak together again, would you?

Contract Bridge

Today's deal shows how a fine player won his contract of four hearts by means of this ancient tactic. He had to shorten his trumps twice to do it, but he managed to trap East's apparently unassailable heart queen.

Today's Hand

North-South Vulnerable
NORTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ 6 4 2 ♡ K 3 ♢ A K J 7 ♣ A Q 10 9
WEST: ♠ J 10 9 8 ♡ 4 ♢ 8 6 4 2 ♣ 8 7 6 2
EAST: ♠ A K Q ♡ Q 9 8 6 ♢ 10 5 3 ♣ 5 4 3
SOUTH: ♠ 7 5 3 ♡ A J 10 7 5 2 ♢ Q 9 ♣ K J

North	East	South	West
1 ♢	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: J ♠

The jack of spades was opened and the defense immediately cashed three spade tricks, switching to a club which declarer won in his hand with the jack. Declarer's only worry then was the location of the heart queen. He played a heart to dummy's king, and a low heart, finessing the ten from his hand; it held, but unfortunately West failed to follow. This left the queen guarded in the East hand, safe from finesse. If Smith was to win his contract, he had to resort to higher strategy.

He played the club king, overtook with dummy's ace and followed with another club which, though high, he ruffed. The diamond nine put him in the dummy again with the ace and another club was trumped. The diamond queen was won by the king and on the lead of the diamond jack East was compelled to play one of his hearts. Declarer could over-trump either one and the seemingly safely guarded queen was captured. South made four hearts, losing three spade tricks.
